Radio Pastor Deaf to O'Connor Threat.

Going to Capital

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 17.—(AP)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's secretary said today that Father Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, will go to Washington on business Feb. 26. The secretary said Father Coughlin had "no remarks whatever" to make on his dispute with Representative John J. O'Connor of New York over the Frazier-Lemke farm bill.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—An announcement from the floor of the house today that the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, was coming to Washington to confront Representative John J. O'Connor [Dem., N. Y.], caused the latter to issue a heated statement in which he asserted that the Rev. Coughlin had "desecrated the cloth" and that "every decent Catholic in America is ashamed of him."

O'Connor repeated his promise of yesterday to "kick Father Coughlin down Pennsylvania avenue to the White House." In a Sunday radio speech, Coughlin accused O'Connor, as chairman of the house rules committee, of preventing a vote in the house on the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing measure, which would require the printing of 3 billion dollars in greenbacks.

Coughlin Delays His Trip.

The red-haired, hot-tempered congressman from the sidewalks of New York insisted he was not speaking in a figurative sense, and gave a pungent version of what he would do if Coughlin came to his office.

Representative Martin L. Sweeney [Dem., Ohio], declared that Coughlin would appear in the capital tomorrow morning and seek out O'Connor. Later, however, word came from Detroit that Coughlin had delayed his departure.

O'Connor, himself known as a devout Catholic, asserted that the Catholic church was ashamed of Coughlin. He charged that the priest maintains at Washington two paid lobbyists, Fred Collins and Louis B. Ward, who have been intimidating congressmen and senators.

Traces Course of Break.

The "background" of the whole argument, he declared, is the fact that he had helped prevent Father Coughlin, at the last session of congress, from using the house office building caucus room to give lectures to congressmen.

"What I said about kicking Father Coughlin goes," declared O'Connor. "I'm not backing down on that statement. I will kick him where he should be kicked.

"Every decent Catholic in America has been ashamed of him since he came to this country. There isn't a clergyman in the Catholic church, except one, that I know of, who has approved of his desecration of the cloth by his intrusion into politics.

Revives "Back to Pulpit" Cry.

"I personally never heard a Catholic priest talk politics from the pulpit. In the old days of prohibition and the Ku Klux Klan, the cry of many of us to such men as Bishop Cannon was 'go back to the pulpit; stay where you belong.'

"Just because Father Coughlin is obviously an ego-maniac, he thinks he can run the government. He stepped into the bonus and the world court issues, but has about as much to do with congressional action on them as any elevator man in the capitol building.

"When he saw the Frazier-Lemke bill needed only four signatures, he stepped into that.

"He is ineligible to run for president, but most people would welcome his attempt to run for any other office. The Catholic church is ashamed of him.

"While purporting to be for the bonus, he told American Legion commanders that he thought the soldiers had too much already.

"He has two paid lobbyists, Collins and Ward, who have been intimidating congressmen and senators. He

SUPREME COURT DECISION HAILED BY NEW DEALERS

Held Opening Wedge to Utilities Rule.

Text of the majority opinion of the Supreme court on TVA will be found on page 8. Mr. Justice McReynolds' dissent is on page 9.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Jubilation pervades the ranks of the administration over the victory won by the New Deal in the Supreme court decision of the TVA case today.

Despite the fact that the court expressly refrained from passing on the constitutionality of the TVA act and confined its decision to upholding the right of the Tennessee Valley Authority to distribute the electricity developed at Wilson dam, the New Dealers hailed their victory as the opening wedge to full realization of the far-flung program of government owned and operated electric utilities.

Stock Market in Jitters.

The stock market suffered an attack of the jitters. When the tickers reported the early part of the decision, upholding the right of the complainants to sue, the traders leaped to the conclusion that the New Deal had sustained another defeat. Utility stocks zoomed. But when the government victory became apparent utility quotations sharply slumped, though recovering somewhat later.

President Roosevelt declined comment, but throughout the day he beamed over the first victory he has won in the Supreme court since the gold clause cases last spring.

7 Cases Lost, 2 Won.

Out of 9 cases involving his acts or legislation he has approved he has won two, lost seven. The adverse decisions were in the NRA, AAA, "hot oil," railroad pensions, Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage, processing tax refunds, and Humphrey removal cases.

The President accepted the decision as validating the New Deal program for establishing a counterpart of the TVA in every state of the Union, at least to the extent the government develops and distributes electric power derived from dams constructed for the ostensible purpose of improving the navigation of rivers. He views it particularly as an indication of the constitutionality of the Grand Coulee, Bonneville, Fort Peck, Mont., dams and other water power development projects initiated by the New Deal.

Cummings Hails Decision.

Attorney General Cummings said "The decision supports the constitutional basis upon which the government rested its cases and the result is very gratifying."

He viewed the decision as complete vindication of the administration project to make the development and sale of TVA power a "yardstick" for measuring the reasonableness of electric light and power rates charged by public plants.

The New Dealers are so joyful that they are even displaying a more charitable attitude toward the Supreme court. There now is pending one less measure to curb the power of the courts to declare statutes unconstitutional. Representative Joseph P. Monaghan [Dem., Mont.], immediately after the decision was announced, obtained the consent of the house to withdraw his bill forbidding the Supreme court to pass on the constitutionality of the TVA.

May Calm Agitation.

It is not unlikely that the New Deal victory today will have the effect of calming the agitation for legislation to curb the power of the Supreme court. The next New Deal cases in the Supreme court will not be argued until March and may not be decided before April, by the end of which month the Democratic leaders plan to adjourn congress.

Anti-New Dealers stressed the limitation of the court's decision to the legality of disposition of power derived from the Wilson dam, which was held to have been constructed for the constitutional purpose of improving navigation.

By the court's refusal to pass on the validity of the development of power

THE WINTER OF '36

PARAGUAY ARMY SURRENDERS TO REVOLT FORCES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Feb. 17.—A military revolt succeeded tonight when government forces surrendered to revolutionaries headed by Cols. Smith and Recalde, veterans of the Chaco war. The outbreak, caused by military dissatisfaction with the régime of President Eusebio Ayala, began this morning with fighting in the streets. By late afternoon the rebels had gained control of the capital and all public services.

Ayala took refuge on a gunboat and Foreign Minister Riart was detained by revolters at the aviation school. The city is quiet awaiting the announcement of a new government, which it is believed will be headed by Col. Rafael Franco, now an exile and reported ill in Buenos Aires.

Early in the day wire communications and the railway line were cut at Ypicary, the fourth station below Asuncion. Both Argentina and Brazil moved additional forces to their borders with Paraguay to prevent incidents. The revolutionaries were mostly military units not quartered in Asuncion.

Seize Vigilante and 5 Others for Bank Raid

A St. Charles business man who was a member of a vigilante organization formed to combat bank robbers, a special policeman and four other men were being held by department of justice agents last night as suspects in the $16,000 robbery of the St. Charles National bank early on Jan. 31.

Daniel M. Ladd, special agent in charge of the Chicago office of the justice department's bureau of investigation, announced that the case was fully solved, except for recovery of the loot. He said the six prisoners would be arraigned this morning before United States Commissioner E. K. Walker on charges of robbery or complicity in robbery of a national bank.

Florist Among Prisoners.

Those under arrest are Percy R. Rehm, 41 years old, St. Charles florist; John Gordon, 35 years old, who was employed as a special policeman by the merchants of St. Charles; Fred Hansen, 37 years old, of St. Charles, a former convict; and three Chicagoans, Samuel Bongiorno, 39 years old, 451 West Oak street; Leo Friedman, 23 years old, 3724 Douglas boulevard, and Philip Dimenza, 41 years old.

The bank robbery was carefully planned and was carried out without a hitch. The robbers entered the bank, supposedly with a key furnished them by Gordon, shortly before daylight and waited inside until 8 a. m., when a time lock permitted the vaults to open. Officials and employés of the bank who arrived were taken prisoner and bound, one by one.

Four Identified, Ladd Says.

"Hansen sat outside in an automobile," declared Mr. Ladd. "Dimenza, Friedman, and Bongiorno were the ones who actually seized the prisoners and took possession of the bank funds. They have all been identified."

As to Gordon and Rehm, the chief investigator was not so positive in his statements.

"They had guilty knowledge of the crime," he asserted.

Among those who were made captive by the robbers are C. J. Marvin, cashier of the bank; W. J. Riordan, assistant cashier; Carl Larson, teller, and Fred Ogburn, janitor. After taking the $16,000 the actual participants in the robbery escaped in an automobile, driving toward Chicago.

Find a Machine Gun.

It was disclosed by Mr. Ladd that weapons, including a machine gun, had been found in the possession of some of those arrested. These, he said, did not fit the description of those used in the stickup.

He denied reports that the information leading to the arrests had been obtained from Donald Brower, who has confessed that he, disguised as a priest, led a raid ten days ago on the Oak Lawn Trust and Savings bank. Brower was questioned by federal agents after the Chicago police had taken him into custody.

Rehm, Hansen, and Gordon all were close friends, according to residents of St. Charles, where the clearing up of the robbery was the principal subject of conversation last night.

Florist Rehm a Vigilante.

Rehm rents a house from Hansen's mother. He became a member of the vigilante organization in the city after a previous bank robbery. He was supposed to hurry out armed whenever the alarm signal on the bank rang and shoot down the robbers.

Gordon, it was learned, formerly was a member of the regular St. Charles police force, but was dismissed a year ago. He was then employed by the merchants.

Hansen was sent to Joliet penitentiary about ten years ago and served a term for robbery. He was later tried in Kane county for murder, but was acquitted on a plea of self-defense. Friedman has been arrested several times by Chicago policemen as a robbery suspect.

NOW KANSAS BOASTS HEN THAT LAYS EGG WITH A NOTE INSIDE

Manhattan, Kas., Feb. 17.—(AP)—A hen laid an egg with a note inside of it here. Robert E. Phillips Jr., Kansas State college poultry husbandry student, said a hollow cork containing the note was inserted in the hen's egg duct. The white of the egg and the shell formed normally. To climax the stunt, Phillips sent the egg to a friend, who opened it and extracted the note at a party.

WILLIAM DYCHE, N. U. COUNSELOR, CRITICALLY ILL

William Andrew Dyche, counselor and former business manager of Northwestern university, is critically ill in Passavant hospital, it was learned last night. The nature of Mr. Dyche's illness was not revealed, but his age—he is 74 years old—is considered to hamper seriously his chances of recovery.

Mr. Dyche served as business manager of the university for 31 years, retiring in 1934. He was appointed to life membership on the board of trustees last fall, having served on the board since 1894.

More Suburbs Join City in Daylight Time

BY LLOYD WENDT.

Five more suburbs—Evanston, Oak Park, Forest Park, Des Plaines, and Berkeley—last night joined the parade of towns that will go on eastern standard time with Chicago on March 1. Their councils adopted eastern time ordinances in meetings during the evening, thus assuring the residents of daylight saving and time parity with Chicagoans.

The action of the five towns raises to nineteen the number of suburbs that have adopted the time change. Most of the other cities and towns in the metropolitan area have already indicated that they will follow suit.

Decided by 14 Others.

The fourteen that had taken the step up to last night are:

Berwyn	Lake Forest
Blue Island	Lincolnwood
Chicago Heights	Park Ridge
Glencoe	Riverside
Harvey	Western Springs
Homewood	Wilmette
Lake Bluff	Winnetka

Other suburbs north, west, and south of Chicago have indicated that they will adopt eastern time on March 1, many of them without the formality of official action. Among them are:

NORTH—Kenilworth, Niles Center, Highland Park, Zion City, North Chicago, Highwood.

SOUTH—Gary, Hammond, East Chicago, Whiting, Crown Point, Hobart, Calumet City, Flossmoor.

Indiana Polls Favor Change.

The first six of the cities listed in the south section above are in Indiana. All are considering eastern time ordinances.

As far east as Fort Wayne, Ind., polls have shown a preponderance of sentiment for the time change. A vote conducted by one Fort Wayne concern showed that 508 of its employés favored eastern time and only 9 opposed it.

Officials in three other Indiana cities—Michigan City, South Bend, and Goshen—are testing sentiment. A newspaper poll in Michigan City showed 250 in favor of eastern time and 54 against it.

Evanston Vote Unanimous.

The Evanston city council adopted its eastern time ordinance last night by unanimous vote. The aldermen decided to make the time change effective until Oct. 30 and then to call the matter up for another vote.

The ordinance was introduced by Ald. Clinton Merrick of the Second ward who declared that its passage "is another step toward better health, better working conditions and greater trafic safety."

Police Chief William O. Freeman of Evanston emphasized the safety factor resulting from extra daylight. "This will mean less danger for drivers and pedestrians alike," he said.

Sees Less Juvenile Crimes.

William Calderwood, Evanston probation officer, said eastern time would reduce juvenile crime, affording children additional outdoor recreation.

Kenneth L. Wilson, director of athletics at Northwestern university, also supported the time change. "We're building manhood and we're glad to have better facilities with which to do it," he declared. "Eastern time means happier, healthier individuals."

Fred Faulhaber, village president, was one of those who urged the passage of Berkeley's eastern time ordinance. The vote was unanimous, he said.

ALL TIME COLD RECORD FOR 30 DAYS SET HERE

Arctic Regains Grip on Central West.

A new all time cold record was established here last night and two other winter records stood in imminent danger of being shattered as the protracted subzero wave again extended its spell over the central west.

The 30 day period ending yesterday was the coldest since the government began keeping weather records in 1871. During these 30 days the average daily temperature was 6.2 degrees above zero and the mercury was at zero or below on 20 of the days. Previously the 30 day cold record was the period from Jan. 22 to Feb. 20, 1895, with an average temperature of 8.8 degrees, during 13 days of which the mercury dropped to zero or below.

Approaches Other Marks.

If the last twelve days of the month are comparable to the first half, according to C. A. Donnel, chief meteorologist, two other old records will topple. The winter of 1935-'36 will become the coldest in history if the average temperatures of the three winter months beats the average daily record of 18.7 degrees set in 1903-'04. These months, December, January, and February, so far this winter, have averaged 17.8 degrees.

The third record which may be broken, said Mr. Donnel, is for the coldest February. A record of 14.7 degrees was established in 1875. During the first seventeen days this month the temperature has averaged 9.2 degrees above zero.

It Looks Bad, but Why?

"Unless there is a remarkable change in the weather," Mr. Donnel declared, "these two records will go. It certainly looks as though we are in for a lot of cold weather.

"In my opinion no man knows why high pressure areas of bitter cold pile up so persistently over Alaska and western Canada. Extensive snow fields are only a contributing factor. But over a long period of years, you will find that wide ranges of weather within bounds set by nature are the rule rather than the exception."

A relatively warm northeast wind and a 1 inch snowfall yesterday again staved off bitter cold. But late in the afternoon when the thermometer stood at 6 above, the lake wind gave up the fight, and swung to the northwest, increasing in intensity.

Possibility of Warm Sun.

By 3 o'clock this morning the mercury had fallen to 10 below zero, unofficial, in the loop and 13 below at the Chicago airport. Mr. Donnel predicted the official temperature would go to between 8 and 10 below in the city and 10 and 15 below in the suburbs before daylight.

But a warm sun today and tomorrow should lift the cold somewhat, he added. He expects a maximum during the day of 5 above. There is some further hope, said the forecaster, that the mass of arctic air in the chilled northwest is breaking, but it is too early to predict accurately.

Joel D. Hunter, general superintendent of the United Charities, revealed yesterday that this bitter weather has worked extreme hardship on the poor. He told of heroic efforts by families to remain independent in the face of barren larders and ice sheathed kitchen floors before asking for aid.

Poor Show Great Courage.

"Families have certainly been making an effort to carry through the cold spell without asking aid," said Mr. Hunter, "but the continued cold is now breaking down their reserves and more and more are coming to us for help."

Raphael Raffe, 65 years old, a farmer living alone on Biddlecomb road, north of Wadsworth, notified Sherif Lawrence A. Doolittle of Lake county last night that he had been without food since Sunday and fuel since Saturday because of snowbound roads. He has kept alive, Raffe said, by drinking milk from his herd of cows and getting warmth from them in their barn. A rescue party will try and reach him today.

A crew of 30 state and county highway plowmen broke through to the home of George Thielen, 51 years old, north of Wadsworth Sunday, and carried him to the Lake County General hospital at Waukegan suffering from pneumonia.

Efforts to save his life failed, and Thielen died last night. Another effort to reach the Thielen home will be made today to take out his 70 year old mother, stricken last night with pneumonia.

City officials distributed 4,000 federal Works Progress administration workers through outlying districts and 1,500 in the loop yesterday to clean up the week-end snowfall of nearly four inches. Twenty trucks carried off the dirty snow.

A force of 5,000 men and 600 plows of the state highway department continued their weary struggle to keep snow drifted roads open. Main highways are open, some with one way trafic, Ernst Lieberman, chief highway engineer of Illinois, said yesterday, but country districts are having a hard time.

Fear Floods Along Ohio.

Lowlands along the ice choked Ohio river fear serious flood conditions are inevitable. A fifty mile ice gorge stood above Evansville, Ind., yesterday, and at Cincinnati, O., the river was rising six inches an hour.

Minnesota and the Dakotas bore the brunt of a new blizzard which raged through the northwest quickly blocking roads which had just been opened after a week-long battle with icy-hard drifts.

The Milwaukee, Great Northern, and Rock Island railroads canceled all trains scheduled to leave from Pipestone, Minn., where the blizzard began to roar at noon.

Relief Parties Are Trapped.

Stinging snow trapped rescue parties which managed to reach half a dozen South Dakota communities after several days of plowing and hacking through mountainous drifts. The villages isolated anew are Hereford, Volunteer, Stoneville, Creighton, Fairpont, and Hoover. Hoover has no more flour and most of the fence posts and corn at Hereford has been burned for fuel.

COLD SNAPS GAS LINE; FUMES KILL FAMILY IN HOME

The dead were Albert Jackson, 36 years old, an assistant manager at the Sycamore dairy and cheese factory; his wife, Gladys, 34, and their children, La Verne, 10, and Marylin Anne, 2.

Their bodies were found by Edmond and Clifford Ecklund, fellow workers of Jackson, who had been sent to his home when he did not report for work. Dr. J. W. Ovitz said Mrs. Jackson and the children had been dead for about two hours before they were found.

Jackson's body lay in the kitchen where apparently he had shut off a valve on the gas line to the kitchen stove after having gone to the basement where he had closed a valve on the main line.

Coroner R. P. Culver, who called an inquest for Thursday at 3 p. m., expressed the belief that the gas which entered the house had escaped from a main broken by expansion of the ground during the cold weather.

YOUTH IS FOUND DEAD, GIRL NEAR FROZEN IN AUTO

Barre, Vt., Feb. 17.—(AP)—State authorities ordered an autopsy today to determine the cause of death of Gordon Boomhower, 21, of Groton, whose body was found last night in his automobile beside a half frozen girl companion.

Groton residents who noticed a car parked all day finally investigated. Boomhower's head, they said, rested on the lap of Miss Dorothy Merchant, 18, of Wells River, his companion at a Saturday night dance.

Theories of carbon monoxide poisoning and of death by freezing were under consideration, police said. Miss Merchant probably will recover.

The couple last was seen Sunday when Boomhower drove three Groton youths home and then started for Miss Merchant's home.

Maxie Eisen and Ex-Pugilist Seized on Racket Charges

Maxie Eisen, racketeer formerly known as the czar of the fish peddlers, and William "Big Bill" Tate, colored union organizer and former pugilist, were arrested yesterday by Des Plaines street police on complaints that the two were trying to force fish merchants in the Fulton and Randolph street markets to join a new union being organized by Eisen. Also held were Eisen's son, Harry, 22 years old, and Harry Goldstein, 41 years old, 4940 North Spaulding avenue, a tavern owner. Eisen said he lived at 2626 North Troy street.

ETHIOPIAN KING READY FOR PEACE, REPORT IN ROME

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

ROME, Feb. 17.—Rumors of peace negotiations were rife in political and diplomatic circles of Rome today, but there is as yet no confirmation either official or unofficial.

It is stated that Emperor Haile Selassie, disheartened by the heavy defeat suffered by Ras Mulugheta's army by the northern front and uneasy at growing signs of discontent in several parts of Ethiopia, is preparing to sue for peace. It is said that several of his most influential chiefs are urging him to obtain the best terms he can without waiting for another defeat to make his position worse.

Accordingly, it is said, he also asked the minister of a nonsanctionist nation in Rome to put out feelers to determine the Italian government's position.

Time Not Ripe For Rome.

It is difficult to tell how much truth there is in this. In any case, it is not thought in Rome that the right moment has yet come for peace negotiations. It is pointed out that Premier Mussolini would no longer be content with the terms offered to him under the Hoare-Laval plan, for the situation has materially altered in the last month.

Italy has made further sacrifices of men and money and has gained important victories on the northern and southern fronts. She therefore now demands a settlement more favorable to her than that she came so near accepting in December as a basis for negotiations.

Furthermore, it is not believed that the Ethiopian emperor is yet ready to meet the Italian terms. Although his armies in the field have received a couple of severe setbacks, the bulk of his forces are still intact and capable of opposing serious resistance to further Italian advances. If he plays for time and does not allow his forces to be drawn into another pitched battle he will still be in a position to make the conquest of his country difficult for the Italians.

Faces Harsh Terms.

For these reasons it seems hardly credable that he would capitulate now and submit to the harsh terms Mussolini in the first flush of victory would certainly attempt to impose.

Two official war bulletins issued today described various phases of the "Enderta battle," as the engagement on the northern front is known. The bulletins gave additional details of the present situation in that region. Both tended to increase the proportions of the Italian victory in the six-day offensive.

Broken remnants of Ras Mulugheta's army of 80,000 men were stated to be in full flight, part of them southwest toward Fenaroa and part of them south toward Mount Alaji, everywhere harassed by the Italian air force.

Italy Scans War Booty.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio's war booty is described as including great numbers of rifles, short arms, machine guns, and automatic rifles, large quantities of munitions and materials of all sorts, camp equipment and beasts of burden. It is stated the Italians also captured six field guns. It is thought these represented a considerable part of Mulugheta's artillery, for it is stated that only ten pieces were in action on the Ethiopian side during the Enderta battle.

Official bulletins, however, are very sparing in details of the Italians' territorial gains and of developments since the battle. A bulletin issued yesterday mentioned only the towns of Scelicot and Antola and the mountain stronghold of Amba Aradam as having been occupied. There has been no word since to say whether the Italian line pushed further forward or whether any move was being made toward Mount Alaji, presumably the real Italian objective.

The Italian public's curiosity to know what has happened to the 40,000 men under Ras Kassa and Ras Seyoum in the Tembien area has also been disappointed. It is not yet known whether these forces are withdrawing or whether any move has been made by Marshal Badoglio to cut off and annihilate them, as it was indicated yesterday he might attempt to do.

Chieftains Foiled, Italy Believes.

Officials here attached particular importance to the Italian victory in the Enderta area, expressing the belief that it quashed Ras Seyoum's hopes of cutting the Italian lines of communications between Makale and Hauzien, 30 miles back toward the main Eritrean bases.

With the northern Ethiopian chieftain's rear lines now menaced, the Italian authorities were confident that he would be compelled to flee the mountainous Tembien sector.

Repulse Counter Attack.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

ROME, Feb. 17.—A desperate but futile Ethiopian counter attack following a great Italian victory on the northern front was reported tonight by the Stefani [Italian] news agency correspondent in Asmara, Eritrea.

The report said the Ethiopians launched mass attacks last night in an effort to break through the newly established Italian advance lines, but were mowed down by intense artillery and machine gun fire.

Britain Sees Permanent Loss by Sanctions' Shift of Trade

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 17.—After nearly three months the sanctions applied against Italy by Great Britain and other league of nations states have drastically diminished what remained of Italy's foreign trade and intensified the hardships of the Italians, which is being now reflected in the growing reports of revolts in various parts of Italy against the Italo-Ethiopian war. Whether they have shortened the war is another question. Whitehall doubts that they have.

Sanctions have been only loosely enforced because even in England business interests have asserted that substantial trade would be lost to Britain forever and gained by other countries.

Unrestricted at Ports.

Tonight in the house of commons Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told Dr. H. Dalton, Laborite, the league has no plan to prohibit Italian shipping from touching league country ports. Eden indicated this would not likely be added to the list of penalties against Premier Mussolini.

Facts available show nearly all European countries which outwardly joined in the sanctions have clandestinely continued to trade in stuff that was declared contraband under the sanctions policy.

In England big supplies of travertine marble to line London university buildings have continued to arrive. Covent Garden markets today received 10,000 crates of lemons, asserting these were bought before sanctions were applied.

Oil Supply Plentiful.

Italy sent a Belgian emissary to London last week attempting to place an order for British produced shale and coal oil. Britain all along has done a brisk business with Italy in oil, a product which, however, is not banned. Rumania sent 79,000 tons of crude oil to Italy in January, compared with 38,000 tons in January, 1935.

The general exchange of goods between Italy and the other countries incontestably has been reduced. This has worked both ways, however, under Mussolini's so-called countersanctions. The British trade for January, for instance, showed hard knocks from the boomerang. Sales of coal to Italy in January, 1935, were 350,000 pounds, while this January they have dropped to 6,000 pounds.

Italian sales of pottery to England dropped from 36,000 pounds to 12,000 pounds, and clothing fell from 36,000 to 300 pounds. Italy withdrew completely from the British market for cotton, wool, and silk. British iron and steel sales to Italy fell from 23,000 pounds last January to 4 pounds this January, and machinery from 67,000 pounds to 11 pounds.

Italians Discontented.

This shrinkage has intensified discontent among both business men and workers in Italy, according to reports reaching here. In the south around Catanzaro hundreds of arrests were made last week and more and more soldiers are refusing to go to war. Horse cabs are replacing automobiles to save gas in Italian towns.

One gauge of Mussolini's anxiety about the popular unrest seems to be in the severity of sentences his special tribunals are meting out. The young Prof. Pesanti of Sassari university has been condemned to 24 years in prison for having written articles unfavorable to Fascism while he was on a trip outside of Italy.

SEVEN NATIONS REJECT ITALIAN PROTEST ON MEDITERRANEAN PACT

LONDON, Feb. 17.—(AP)—A foreign office announcement today showed that Great Britain and several other nations have rejected Italy's protest against the "Mediterranean mutual assistance agreement."

The British government made its rejection Feb. 14 in a note which stated that it "does not feel any useful purpose would be served by prolonging correspondence on the subject."

Similar notes were understood to have been forwarded to Premier Mussolini by France, Greece, Jugo-Slavia, Turkey, Rumania, and Czechoslovakia, which had agreed to mutual assistance with Britain in case of Italian aggression in the Mediterranean area. Italy objected to the agreement.

The agreement was worked out under article 3, paragraph 16, of the league of nations covenant providing for joint action against aggressors.

CHOOSE JURORS TO TRY PRINCIPAL ON THEFT CHARGE

A jury was chosen in Judge John Lewe's court yesterday to try Charles S. Winslow, suspended principal of the Lake View Evening High school, on an indictment charging embezzlement of $9,954 night school tuition funds. Prosecutor Leslie Soiters said the state would prove that Winslow concealed his shortages by altering his financial reports to the board of education and used the funds to pay a mortgage on his home and to take care of his wife who is ill.

The courtroom was crowded with school teachers and friends of the defendant, who is at liberty under $7,500 bond. Defense Attorney Daniel Covelli has promised that restitution would be made by Winslow with money raised by the Principals' club.

Germans Drink 13,000,000 Bottles of Champagne

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—Germans consumed 13,000,000 bottles of German champagne in 1935. This is nearly thrice as much as in 1932 and even more than the consumption before the world war or during the height of the post-war prosperity. One reason for this increase is the reduced price, made possible by abolition of the prohibitive champagne tax, which almost bankrupted the entire champagne industry in Germany.

HOUSE EXTENDS NEUTRALITY LAW BY 353-27 VOTE

Bill Rushed to Passage Under "Gag" Rule.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—With only twelve days remaining before the present neutrality act expires, the house today, under "gag" rule, rushed to passage by a vote of 353 to 27 a resolution extending the life of the law until May 1, 1937.

An important amendment was added making it unlawful to sell bonds or securities in this country of any nation considered as a belligerent under the act. Under the Johnson act passed two years ago, it already is unlawful to sell the securities of any nation in default on its indebtedness to the United States. The President is given discretion, however, under the neutrality bill, to except from the operations of the law ordinary commercial credits and short time obligations "of a character customarily used in normal peace time commercial transactions."

Awaits Action in Senate.

The bill was sent to the senate, which will begin consideration of it tomorrow and may pass the bill this week. Action must be taken before Feb. 29 if neutrality legislation is to remain on the statute books.

The house, which spent all last week debating the war department appropriation bill with its $168,000,000 of "pork," took just 40 minutes today to discuss the bill which dictates our conduct in regard to warring nations.

American Nations Exempted.

Another new section in the bill, as it passed today, provides that the act shall not apply to an American republic [in North or South America] engaged in war against a non-American state or states, provided the American republic is not coöperating with non-American states in such a war.

Briefly, the law provides an embargo against the sale, exportation, and transportation of arms, ammunition, or implements of war to any belligerents except to American republics as expressly provided; prohibits the sale of bonds, notes, and other securities of belligerent countries in the United States, and prohibits American vessels carrying arms, ammunition, etc., to belligerents or for transshipment for use by belligerents.

WILLIAM BOGAN KEPT IN HOSPITAL BY HICCOUGHING

A severe case of hiccoughing which started Sunday morning prevented Superintendent of Schools William J. Bogan from leaving Presbyterian hospital yesterday, Dr. D. P. Abbott, staf physician, said last night. Mr. Bogan entered the hospital Feb. 1, suffering from a cold and a slight digestive disorder. He had planned to return to his work yesterday. Mr. Bogan suffered a similar attack of hiccoughing which lasted six days following a surgical operation in Cleveland seven years ago.

"The policy of the commission was that if we permitted outsiders to exploit themselves in that manner, we would be overwhelmed with applications from such men as Dr. Townsend, Norman Thomas, Margaret Sanger, Upton Sinclair, and others. I, as a member of the commission, voted against permitting the Reverend to use the room on the theory that he was well able to afford to hire a hall."

O'Connor asserted that after this incident he received "a clear intimation that I would hear about it later."

POLICE LENIENT ON STORAGE OF CARS IN STREET

Old automobiles in dead storage on public streets are particularly numerous and especially conspicuous this winter, but Capt. David Flynn, head of the trafic division, said yesterday that there wasn't much the police could do until the weather moderates.

"Many owners who can't afford a garage have left their cars standing in front of their homes buried in snowdrifts with no intention of moving them until there is a thaw," said Capt. Flynn. "It would be pretty tough on the owners if the police were to treat these machines as abandoned property and to tow them to garages.

"On some busy thoroughfares, however, owners are taking advantage of police leniency during this severe weather and the somewhat permanent parking has become a serious hazard to driving in the deep ruts."

An accident prevention squad was ordered yesterday to issue summonses for parking in such a way as to interfere with travel in North Dearborn street, especially between Division street and Lincoln park.

YOUR STOMACH AT WORK ★ Curious Facts About Digestion

Yes, it's curious what some people do when they have a pain in the stomach, a little gas, or attack of "indigestion!"

They take all sorts of remedies with high-sounding names. They clutter home and office with bottles and spoons, and all sorts of preparations.

When one little thing they could tuck in a pocket might have straightened them out in a hurry!

Years ago, a man named Pape discovered a simple way to relieve distress due to acid stomach. Diapepsin, in tablets that are just eaten like candy, has brought happiness to thousands who thought they had a "weak stomach."

If you have distress after meals, any acid discomfort at all, your stomach is probably slow in emptying. If you relieve this condition with Pape's Diapepsin, you can eat with more enjoyment!

Try it! Carry the pocket tin and take a tablet or two after meals until your digestion is "clicking" and all that sourness is gone. Pape's Diapepsin; remember the name.

M'GURN WIDOW FACES GIRLS IN SLAYING INQUIRY

The police last night were investigating a maze of conflicting stories of the whereabouts of Mrs. Louise McGurn when her husband, Machine Gun Jack McGurn, Capone gangster, was slain early Saturday morning in a bowling alley at 805 Milwaukee avenue.

Mrs. McGurn, the former Louise Rolfe, first told the police that she was in her home at 1224 Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, all afternoon and evening Friday and also at the time her husband was murdered. Yesterday Miss Marjorie Swift, 19 years old, granddaughter of the late George B. Swift, former mayor of Chicago, informed the police that she and Mrs. McGurn were making a round of taverns on the northwest side when McGurn was killed.

Women Confront Each Other.

Mrs. McGurn was taken to the Racine avenue police station and confronted Miss Swift. The gangster's widow said she lied when she told police she had been home all afternoon and evening. She said she was with Miss Swift two hours on Friday afternoon.

Miss Swift then told police that she, too, had been lying. She declared she was with Mrs. McGurn only during the afternoon.

Miss Swift and Miss Mary Dickinson, 18 years old, with whom she rooms in the Streeterville apartment hotel, 195 East Chestnut street, were taken for questioning after the investigators learned that Miss Swift in a telephone conversation with another girl concerning McGurn, after the murder, had been overheard to say, "Well, they got him."

Denies Knowing McGurn.

Miss Swift denied that she knew McGurn. She said she met Mrs. McGurn on Feb. 10 and had seen her several times during the last week.

"Louise telephoned me about 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon," Miss Swift at first told police, "and told me to take a North avenue street car and get off at Narragansett avenue, the western end of the line. When I got there she was waiting for me in a tan sedan.

"We drove out to the Pickaninny inn at Harlem and North avenues. There we had something to eat, some chicken and a fifth of brandy. Louise paid for everything.

Told of "Blonde Alibi."

"After that we went to a couple of other taverns. We just talked and killed the brandy. She told me she was the famous 'blonde alibi' girl."

[Louise was McGurn's alibi when he was a suspect in the St. Valentine day massacre in 1929. She told police that she and McGurn were in a loop hotel room at the time of the massacre. The couple were not married then.]

Miss Swift, continuing her first story, said that Louise "seemed a little apprehensive" at 11 o'clock Friday night.

"She said she would call Jack at home and wake him up and tell him it was his bowling night," Miss Swift continued. "She said he always went bowling Mondays and Fridays.

She Rides Home Again.

"Later she drove me back to Narragansett and North avenues and let me out there. I think it was about 12:50 in the morning. It was a long ride home on the street car and I don't think I got home until about 2:15 a. m.

"Before we left each other she told me she would call me again Monday morning and make arrangements to get together again. She never did. I read in the papers next morning that her husband had been shot."

After Mrs. McGurn was brought face to face with Miss Swift, the girl said the entire latter part of her story was false.

"I was only with Louise until about 6:30 Friday afternoon," Miss Swift said. "I made up the story about being with her in the evening because I didn't want my roommate to know where I really was."

Tells of Meeting Louise.

Earlier Miss Swift told of her first meeting with Mrs. McGurn.

"Last Monday [Feb. 10] Mary and I had a party for a lot of women in our apartment," she related. "A blonde, whom I remember only as Clarice, brought Louise in and introduced her as a 'gunman's moll.' I thought Clarice was joking at first. But Louise and I liked each other right from the start. Before she came we had been drinking gin. But when she got there she pulled out a roll of bills, and after that we drank good bourbon."

Miss Swift said that Helen Berg, another of the girls at the party, telephoned her Saturday morning after McGurn's murder.

"Helen said: 'Did you see what happened to Louise's husband?'" Miss Swift told the police, "and I replied: 'Yes, but for heaven's sake, keep your mouth shut about it.'"

Police Hunt Other Girls.

It was apparently this conversation which was overheard and led to Miss Swift's questioning by the police. The police began a search for the other girls who attended the party in Miss Swift's apartment.

In the apartment policemen found two small whips and a pair of toy handcuffs. Miss Swift said the whips were circus souvenirs and the handcuffs were left in her apartment some time ago by a child visitor.

Miss Swift and Miss Dickinson have been living in the Streeterville apartments for six months. They said they are employed by Miss Dickinson's mother, Mrs. Dorothy Dickinson, who lives at the Seneca hotel, across the street from the Streeterville apartments at 200 East Chestnut street. Mrs. Dickinson operates a personal injury investigation bureau. She said the girls work for her as stenographers.

1934 Runaway Is Recalled.

In March, 1934, while Miss Swift and Miss Dickinson were students at the Jennings Seminary for Girls in Aurora, they ran away. They were found a few days later in Memphis, Tenn., where they said they had grown tired of hitch-hiking.

Miss Swift's mother is dead. Her father, Eldred B. Swift, son of the former mayor, is in charge of a construction project at Jacksonville, Morgan county. At the home of Miss Swift's aunt at 5524 Cornell avenue it was said the girl had not lived there for a year and a half.

After Miss Swift and Miss Dickinson had given their statements the police permitted them to go. Mrs. McGurn also was released.

Another phase of the McGurn murder investigation centered on a key found in the slain man's automobile. The car, which had been sought since the slaying, was found early yesterday abandoned in front of 315 North Ada street.

Five keys on a ring were discovered in the car. One of the keys was traced to a safety deposit box in the Oak Park Trust and Savings bank. The bank vault was closed by a time lock at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, however, and the police will not be able to have the box opened until this morning.

McGurn Funeral Today.

McGurn will be buried today. The cortège will proceed from the undertaking rooms at 624 North Western avenue to Mount Carmel cemetery. There will be none of the pomp and circumstance that marked the funerals of gangsters in Al Capone's heyday.

No Joke for Dictator

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—Charlie Chaplin's new film, "Modern Times," was today forbidden in Germany, and the chamber of culture warned the moving picture industry that all pictures of Chaplin also are banned.

The few reports of German correspondents about Chaplin's success in America and England which have been appearing in the German press were carefully censored and all remarks about the scene showing the comedian studying Hitler's picture and mustache have been deleted.

The Revels brothers, who have been successful vaudeville stars in Germany, also have been ordered to eliminate the act in which one appears on the stage in a parody on Chaplin. The American movie, "The Merry Widow," also has been banned in Germany. This ban was aimed at the director, Ernst Lubitsch.

Chaplin Sails for Hawaii.

San Pedro, Cal., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Charles Chaplin went to sea today "for a rest." Accompanying him aboard the President Coolidge was his leading lady, Paulette Goddard; her mother, Mrs. Alta Goddard, and his valet, Frank Yomemori. "We'll stop at Honolulu," said the actor. "Maybe we'll take a boat there for the South seas, perhaps Tahiti. I want to do some fishing."

Trains of Coal Halt Drain on Chicago Fuel Reserves

Trains of coal followed one another into Chicago during the week-end, halting the cold weather drain on Chicago's reserve supply of fuel, according to James D. Rooney, executive vice president of the Chicago Coal Merchants' association.

Other cities lacking a multiplicity of railroads are not faring so well. Black Diamond, trade publication of the coal industry, has received reports of shortages from small communities scattered through the central western snow belt but most numerous in Iowa, Minnesota and parts of Wisconsin.

Plan War on Weighing Rules.

Chicago's regulations on the weighing of coal trucked into the city from the northern Illinois river valley will be attacked again by Grundy county residents meeting this afternoon in the offices of the Chicago Association of Commerce. There were indications yesterday that the dispute might be settled by inaugurating coal barge service on the Illinois waterway to take the place of the highway trafic.

Coming to Chicago for the meeting is a committee from Morris, Ill., consisting of Circuit Judge Frank Hayes, State's Attorney S. J. Holderman, and Fred Blasington of the Morris Chamber of Commerce. The Chicago Better Business bureau and Chicago City Sealer James M. O'Keefe will join in the conference.

The Disputed Regulations.

The operators in this coal field ninety miles from the loop object to an ordinance that requires their trucks before making a delivery, unload to be weighed first empty and then loaded by a Chicago weighmaster, licensed by the city sealer.

"By barging from the mines to a Chicago dock," said Thomas C. McConnell, attorney for the Morris Coal and Mining company, the largest operator among the protestants, "the cost would be about 20 cents less a ton than it would be by trucking under the Chicago requirements."

VICTIM OF CRASH WITH FIRE TRUCK DIES OF INJURIES

Auto Accidents Fatal to Two Others.

Three persons who had been hurt in Chicago trafic accidents died of their injuries yesterday.

Edward Zimmerman, 65 years old, 6735 Merrill avenue, a salesman for M. Born & Co., tailors, of 540 South Wells street, died in St. Luke's hospital from injuries suffered last Saturday when his automobile was struck by a fire insurance patrol truck at State and Harrison streets.

Frank Saltis, 50 years old, 3536 Monroe street, died in the Robert Burns hospital from injuries incurred Feb. 6 during a snowstorm when he was struck in front of 3457 Madison street, by the automobile of John T. Hurley, 33 years old, 113 North Homan avenue.

Bennett Hahn, 40 years old, Maumee, O., died in Chicago Memorial hospital from injuries suffered in a bus accident here Jan. 3. Hahn, who was an employé of the Mack Motor company of Toledo, O., was delivering a bus to Chicago when the vehicle struck an upright beam of the Illinois Central viaduct at 79th street and Woodlawn avenue.

At 4 p. m. yesterday 133 persons had been killed in automobile accidents in Cook county, according to the coroner's office. During the same period 113 were killed and 1,896 were injured in the city limits of Chicago.

HOBO RESENTS SANDWICH GIFT; HURLS A BRICK

Miss Nora Costello, housekeeper at the rectory of St. Cecelia's Catholic church at 4515 South Wells street, made a ham sandwich last evening and gave it to a beggar who had applied at the kitchen door for food.

The recipient, a man about 45 years old, took the sandwich and walked away. Then he turned and tossed a brick through one of the windows of the kitchen. The Stockyards police, notified of the episode by the Rev. Vincent Close, pastor of St. Cecelia's, started search for the vandal.

Miss Costello said she did not believe there was anything wrong with the sandwich.

"There was a nice thick slice of ham," she asserted, "and the bread was fresh. I even put mustard on the meat."

HOUSE VOTES A QUIZ INTO ACTIVITIES OF TOWNSEND BACKERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The house rules committee today voted unanimous approval of a special investigation into the promotional activities of sponsors of the Townsend old age pension plan.

Chairman John J. O'Connor [Dem., N. Y.] said the resolution calling for an inquiry would be called up in the house and probably passed Wednesday. A nonpartisan committee of eight congressmmen, four Republicans and four Democrats, is to be appointed by the speaker to conduct the quiz.

Robert E. Clements, national secretary of the Townsend movement, told Representative C. Jasper Bell [Dem., Mo.], who proposed the inquiry, that his organization welcomed investigation.

Bell told the committee that the promoters of the Townsend plan have collected hundreds of thousands of dollars from members in the form of initiation fees, dues, and charges for buttons, auto stickers, literature, and photographs of Dr. Francis E. Townsend.

HORNER'S BOARD LAUNCHES PRISON SCANDAL INQUIRY

Loeb Grand Jury to Hear Leopold Today.

Eight of the ten members of a commission appointed by Gov. Horner gathered yesterday at the Stateville penitentiary to begin a comprehensive investigation of the killing of Richard Loeb and of other scandals within the prison walls. Loeb was slashed to death with a razor wielded by James Day, a fellow convict, on Jan. 28.

The commission began its work by electing the Rt. Rev. J. H. Schlarman, Catholic bishop of Peoria, chairman. He made a brief announcement of the body's intentions.

"We shall go into conditions here generally," he said, "in an attempt to point a way to prevent a repetition of such incidents as the killing of Loeb. The investigation will not be confined to the Loeb slaying, but will be comprehensive."

Leopold to Face Grand Jury.

While the commission pursues its work today the Will county grand jury will hear testimony regarding the death of Loeb. State's Attorney Will R. McCabe said last night that he would take Nathan Leopold, who was convicted with Loeb of the murder of Bobby Franks in 1924, before the grand jury early this afternoon.

Mr. McCabe conferred with Attorney Harold Levy of Chicago, counsel for Day, and announced that they had agreed to place the convict on trial March 9, provided that an indictment is returned against him.

Eight Members Present.

Members of the prison investigating committee who were present are Bishop Schlarman, Robert L. Kern of Belleville, Ill.; State Representative Thomas Sinnett of Rock Island, Ill.; Roy Best, warden of the Colorado state prison; State Senator James J. Barbour of Evanston, and three Chicagoans, Circuit Judge John Prystalski, Assistant State's Attorney Emmett Moynihan, and Col. Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago Crime commission. Members who did not attend are the Rev. Preston Bradley and Charles H. Schweppe of Chicago.

Accompanied by A. L. Bowen, state director of welfare, and the prison warden, Joseph E. Ragen, the commissioners toured the prison and then held a night session to discuss their methods of procedure. Col. Chamberlin suggested that a full survey, that would require months and the employment of much clerical help, be made.

Ask "Favoritism" Quiz.

Bowen and Ragen requested that the body go at once into charges of poor discipline and favoritism to certain convicts, adding that a questioning of inmates would be sufficient to determine these questions. Judge Prystalski announced that he did not believe much truth would be heard in statements of the convicts in this connection.

Both the extent of the survey and the request of the prison officials were laid aside for decision today.

The Colorado prison warden asserted that the system of whipping prisoners who misbehave had worked out well in his state. Also, he asserted that the granting to him of authority to lengthen or shorten each convict's term was satisfactory. In Colorado the prison warden exercises in general the same functions as the board of pardons and paroles in Illinois. Warden Best asserted that the best way to keep prisoners disciplined was to see that they had work.

No Whitewash, Is Pledge.

All of the commissioners were emphatic in their declarations that there would be no whitewash of conditions and that they would return a report that would not be "a campaign document for anybody."

The Will county grand jury yesterday returned an indictment charging Homer Talley, a Stateville guard, with aiding the escape of a convict, John Floss. Talley is under arrest and Floss has been recaptured.

SWITCHMAN IS RUN OVER.

Present a Pageant

Seven hundred Boy Scouts and their friends gathered in the Hotel Sherman last night for the annual dinner of the Chicago council of the Boy Scouts of America. Harry Peterson, 12 years old, 2221 Carmen avenue, was enrolled as the 150,000th Boy Scout in Chicago since the movement was started in 1910.

The presentation of Harry's tenderfoot badge in troop 836 of the Barry Methodist church, Leavitt and Giddings streets, was made by Gen. LeRoy T. Steward, chief of the Chicago Scout activities and former chief of police in Chicago, who aided in the organization of the council.

During the dinner the progress of scouting during 1935 was dramatized in a pageant presented by various Scout troops. Awards of silver beaver were given to ten Chicago men in recognition of their interest in scouting.

R. Douglas Stuart was reëlected president of the Chicago council, an office he has held for ten years. Other directors and officials were reëlected.

OSCAR HARTZELL CALLED INSANE; DELAY SENTENCE

Six Others Get Prison for Drake Fraud.

The sentencing of Oscar M. Hartzell, chief promoter of the Drake estate swindle, was postponed until July 17 by Judge Philip L. Sullivan of the federal court yesterday after he had read a psychiatrist's report describing Hartzell as a paranoiac with delusions of grandeur and persecution. The insanity report was made by Dr. Harry R. Hoffman, head of the behavior clinic of the Cook county Criminal court.

Judge Sullivan ordered a further investigation into Hartzell's sanity and remanded the prisoner to Leavenworth penitentiary, where he is already serving a 10 year federal sentence for mail fraud. Hartzell's first conviction occurred at Sioux City, Ia., in 1933. He was brought from prison to Chicago last fall for his second Drake fraud trial with 40 other defendants. This case resulted last month in the conviction of Hartzell and seven others for mail fraud.

Six Defendants Sentenced.

After continuing Hartzell's case yesterday Judge Sullivan imposed sentences of one year and a day in prison on six other convicted defendants and agreed to the government's dismissal of charges against the seventh, who was previously granted a new trial.

Those sentenced are Canfield Hartzell, brother of Oscar; Otto G. Yant, Joseph Hauber, Delmar C. Short, Lester E. Ohmart, and Emil R. Rochel. The case of A. R. Gregory was dismissed.

It was believed that Dr. Hoffman's report on the condition of Hartzell had the effect of lessening the punishment of the other defendants. In a previous hearing Hartzell had declared that he was solely responsible for swindling 70,000 persons of $1,300,000 through the Drake estate fraud and that he still believed in the existence of the mythical estate of Sir Francis Drake. It was these statements that caused Judge Sullivan to order Hartzell examined by Dr. Hoffman.

RIOTS CELEBRATE LEFTIST VICTORY IN SPAIN'S VOTE

'State of Alarm' Decreed; Three Die in Clashes.

BY HENRY BUCKLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Spain, Feb. 17.—The Spanish republic tonight was legally back in the hands of its founders and headed further to the left than ever, but armored cars and machine guns were holding back Red mobs which poured into the streets of Madrid this morning to celebrate their victory in yesterday's elections.

At least three men were killed and many wounded in clashes between the police and delirious crowds demonstrating for immediate release of Spain's 30,000 political prisoners. Deaths elsewhere yesterday and today brought the total to ten.

A "state of alarm" was decreed throughout Spain by Premier Manuel Partela Valladares, and a press censorship is enforced. A "state of siege' was declared in Huesca and Saragossa where there was a general strike and rioting.

While the exact extent of the left victory is not known it became clear today that the Left Republicans and Socialists will have an absolute majority of the 473 seats in the new cortes. Valladares has announced his intention of turning over the power to the victors, but in the meantime the reactionary government still rules revolutionary Spain and with the same iron hand.

Fearing that the impatience of the mob to exploit at once its victory may give the generals a pretext for establishing a new dictatorship, responsible chiefs of the left have issued frantic appeals to the people to restrain their enthusiasm.

Red Flag Reappears.

As soon as the results of the elections were known this morning, the red flag made its appearance on the streets of Madrid for the first time since the abortive uprising of October, 1934, and the strains of the forbidden Internationale reverberated from the walls of the capital.

On Poso del Prado this afternoon, a squadron of mounted police encountered a mob of 500 youngsters marching behind a red flag and the captain ordered the police to draw their sabers and charge. Instead of charging, police took the officer's own saber and forced him to dismount and raise his fist in a Socialist salute and shout: "Long live the republic!"

One man was killed and fifteen injured in a bloody clash with police in the Cartagena prison where Luis Companys, former president of the Catalan republic, is imprisoned. At the Valencia prison the warden was killed in rioting. Rioters set fires and part of one wing of the prison was destroyed.

MISSING GIRL'S BATTERED BODY FOUND BY BOYS

Mount Hope, W. Va., Feb. 17.—(AP)—The battered body of 22 year old Grace Carter, missing since Saturday, was found last night by a group of boys, among them her younger brother.

The boys were playing about a railroad embankment and found the body hidden by a clump of bushes.

Doctors said the girl's face had been crushed, apparently by a blow, and her neck was broken. They said bruises on the body indicated the young woman was dragged over rocky ground.

Mrs. W. T. Carter told police her daughter was last seen Saturday night leaving a candy shop where she was employed.

CRILLY BUILDING TAKEN OVER BY SCHOOL BOARD

The board of education took formal possession of the Crilly building, 31-41 South Dearborn street, after Municipal Judge Robert J. Dunne refused to set aside an eviction order yesterday in renter's court. The order, signed a week ago by Municipal Judge Nuncio J. Bonelli, was directed against George S. and Edgar Crilly, trustees of the Daniel F. Crilly estate. The order was based on failure of the Crilly trustees to pay nine months' rent for land owned by the board of education on which the Crilly building stands.

COMMITS KEOGH TO MENARD FOR COURT KILLING

A motion for a new trial on behalf of John W. Keogh, 72 years old, who was adjudged insane by a Criminal court jury last Feb. 8, was overruled yesterday by Judge Joseph Burke and Keogh was committed to the Illinois Security hospital at Menard. He was granted a stay of mittimus until Feb. 28 to wind up his business affairs.

Keogh shot and killed Attorney Christopher G. Kinney on Jan. 13 in the courtroom of Circuit Judge John J. Prystalski.

STATE READY TO ASK HAUPTMANN BE RESENTENCED

Governor Hints at New Mercy Hearing.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—A broad hint from Gov. Harold G. Hoffman this afternoon that Bruno Richard Hauptmann might be granted both a new hearing before the court of pardons and a second reprieve resulted in delay in plans to re-sentence the German carpenter. Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard agreed to wait until 10:30 a. m. Wednesday before signing the new death warant.

The governor's frank discussion of the situation, which reached a crisis in the efforts of Samuel S. Leibowitz, Manhattan criminal lawyer, to wrest a confession from Hauptmann, took place in the executive chambers in midafternoon.

Talks of a Confession.

Hoffman openly talked of the possibility of a confession, although insisting he had not been informed yet whether Hauptmann had or had not altered the story told from the witness stand a year ago in Flemington courthouse. The governor indicated that failure of John [Jafsie] Condon to return from a South American cruise in time to be questioned before the new execution date alone might be sufficient reason to justify a second thirty day reprieve. In addition to the governor's guarded references to a second mercy plea before the court of pardons, it was learned from other sources that such a hearing already had been definitly assured.

What bearing the governor's own investigation and last night's conference with Leibowitz, who went directly from Hauptmann's death cell to Hoffman's home in South Amboy, N. J., had on the sudden change in the re-sentencing plans could not be learned. State's Attorney General David T. Wilentz's chief assistant in the Flemington trial, Joseph Lanigan, briefly announced at noon that "out of deference to the governor, who has been ill, we are waiting."

Then after Hoffman's views were disclosed in a long press conference, a further announcement was made from Wilentz's offices.

Doesn't Change Death Date.

The new date for electrocution must be set for some time between March 22 and April 26. Actually no time is being lost by the delay, since the week in which the sentence is set doesn't count. Hoffman in his press interview declared he hadn't made up his mind whether to accompany Leibowitz on the attorney's third visit to the death house, scheduled to take place after Hauptmann is re-sentenced.

If the governor doesn't accompany Leibowitz there is a strong possibility that he will visit Hauptmann again with a similar object.

Asked whether he will seek to have Dr. Condon brought back by force if the septugenarian Bronx educator and Lindbergh ransom payer fails to return home on schedule, the governor replied:

"I might try force. He has a lot to answer for."

LAKE COUNTY'S G. O. P. VOTES TO SUPPORT BROOKS

Unanimous Action Taken by Central Committee.

Benjamin H. Miller, chairman of the Lake county Republican central committee, announced yesterday that the executive committee of the organization had voted unanimously to support Wayland Brooks as a candidate for governor.

He said that the action was taken at a meeting held in Libertyville on Sunday which was attended by eleven of the fifteen members of the executive committee, the other four being absent because they were out of the state.

Importance of Action Cited.

The decision was considered important not only because Lake county is one of the strongest Republican counties in the state, but because it is also the home county of William J. Stratton, candidate for secretary of state, and his sponsor, Fred Lundin.

The committee members who in addition to Chairman Miller joined in the Brooks indorsement are R. W. Churchill, Grayslake; John J. Spellman, Lake Forest; Harold J. Tallett, North Chicago; F. P. Worack, Waukegan; Edwin Burgess, Lake Forest; William Witten, Highland Park; W. M. Marks, Lake Villa; Howard L. Scott, Fox Lake; Ralph R. Pihl, Zion; and John G. Wirtz, Mundelein.

Others who attended the meeting were L. Eric Carey, chairman of the Young Republican Club of Lake County; Charles A. Hummer of Lake Bluff, and Charles A. Ryhl.

Chairman Miller agreed to manage the Brooks campaign in the county and said that plans already had been made for a woman's organization.

Dispatches from the city of Effingham last night said the court house there was filled with charter members attending the first meeting of the Effingham County Brooks for Governor club. Herman R. Scherbarth, editor of the Effingham Republican presided. Sherif Mark Ervin was elected president of the club.

Brooks also was presented during the day with indorsements passed by Republican organizations of the Eighteenth, Thirty-second, and Forty-ninth wards. The last of these came from the organization headed by Joseph Rubens.

Forces Busy Here.

At a late hour last night the county slate making committee of the Brooks forces in Cook county postponed completion of its task until today. No decision was reached concerning the top of the ticket, the state's attorneyship. The candidates under consideration were Leonard C. Reid, William E. Helander, and William L. Morgan.

There was tentative agreement on Maurice M. Shay for clerk of the Superior court. Those under consideration for clerk of the Circuit court were Adolph C. Becker and Otis A. Rogers. The list for coroner still included the names of Morgan L. Trainor, Edmund G. Brust, and B. F. Crouth. Those still under discussion for the three sanitary district places were Maxwell M. Nowak, Clarence N. Bergstrom, Alva L. Bates, and Samuel E. Golan.

Two Others File.

Two more candidates for the governorship, neither of whom has demonstrated any great strength up to this time, filed their petitions at Springfield. They are Walter M. Provine of Taylorville, a former United States district attorney, and J. Paul Kuhn of Batavia, a former state commerce commissioner.

H. Wallace Caldwell, Cook county commissioner, who has been an active candidate for governor since last June but has not yet filed his petition, started his public campaign among his home folks in Oak Park last evening. Following a large bonfire in the playground of the Oliver Wendell Holmes school, there was a parade to his home.

MILKMEN MAKE IT TOUGH FOR AN EARNEST ROBBER

But the Little Man Plods On to His Goal.

A dapper little man with a dinky mustache appeared at 1 p. m. yesterday in the back yard of a building at 3327 North Harding avenue. There he halted George Goralski, 3935 North Nordica avenue, who was making a milk delivery.

"I thought at first he was an insurance agent, and paid him no attention," said Goralski. "But then he pulled out a shiny pistol and told me to stick 'em up."

Goralski Meets a Situation.

Goralski explained to the little man that his money was in his wagon. The robber ordered him to go get it. Goralski climbed into the wagon and emerged a moment later, an ice pick in one hand and an empty milk bottle in the other.

He invited the robber to come and get the money, using terms which had been buried in his subconscious mind since the last time his horse stepped on his foot.

The robber turned and fled. At twenty paces Goralski unlimbered and registered a glancing hit with the empty bottle. The robber replied with a shot which went wild.

Little Man Tries Again.

At 1:15 p. m. in the rear of 3539 North Whipple street, the dapper little man stopped Frank W. Chapp, 4653 Kiona avenue, another milkman. Chapp, at the sight of the pistol, paused only long enough to send a quart of breakfast cream cartwheeling against the fellow's ear, and took refuge in the nearest back door. The bandit fled, pursued by the householder's dog.

It was ten minutes later that the dapper man stopped a third milk driver, Paul Mueller, 3427 Greenview avenue, in front of 1714 Otto street. By this time, Mueller later told the police, the robber had a wild look in his eye. Mueller gave him $40, then reached inside his wagon and seized a milk bottle.

The little man saw it coming, and ducked with a gasp of fright. Then he shot Mueller in the right leg and ran.

"And to think I let that guy get away with $40," said Mueller last night in the Ravenswood hospital. "What'll the other boys say?"

You're in the midst of the worst winter months . . . . Build good general resistance

Early in the season, you probably had some stored-up reserve to help protect you against common winter ills. But since then, you've no doubt been through a strenuous winter with too little exercise, rest and sunshine. As a result, your general resistance may be low.

Low general resistance helps to explain why common winter ills reach a peak in February. This time of year they affect the greatest number of people hang on longest.

The thing, then, is not to wait until you are made uncomfortable, but to begin right away building general resistance!

ADEX TABLETS and CAPSULES SQUIBB

Adex offers you a pleasant means.

Adex supplies two protective factors—Vitamin A, which helps to build good general resistance, and Vitamin D, insufficiently supplied by sunshine at this season.

With each capsule, you obtain not less than 6,600 units of Vitamin A, and 1,320 units of Vitamin D. Squibb takes the vitamins from natural sources only, like good cod liver oil.

When you start with Adex, be sure to keep it up every day. So much depends on routine use! At any reliable drug store. Prepared by E. R. Squibb & Sons, manufacturing chemists since 1858.

URGE SCHOOLING OF PHYSICIANS IN OBSTETRICS

Leading Doctors Would Cut Deaths of Mothers.

Insufficient training of physicians and a general lack of appreciation by both physicians and the public of the fact that child bearing is a physiological process which normally does not require surgery was among the reasons cited yesterday for the high proportion of American mothers who die at childbirth.

Three physicians, Dr. Charles B. Reed of Chicago, Dr. George W. Kosmak of New York, and Dr. Robert H. Riley, state health officer of Maryland, discussed the problem of obstetrical education yesterday at the Palmer house before the annual congress on medical education of the American Medical association.

Holds Evil Is Overestimated.

Charges that the American maternal death rate is much higher than that in other countries cannot be substantiated because of the dissimilarity in collecting and analyzing statistics in the various countries, Dr. Reed asserted. Nevertheless, he observed, "social theorists and salaried altruists make a great ado over this assumption and use it freely as an argument for the passage of paternalistic and unconstitutional laws, together with a prodigal expenditure of public money."

The proper remedy for the condition, he said, is better training of medical students, particularly by affording them more opportunities for deliveries of children under proper supervision during their student and intern periods.

Dr. Kosmak protested against the tendency to educate physicians in the belief that obstetrics is a surgical specialty, which belief he held responsible for undue surgical interference with what is normally a physiological process.

With proper supervision through the outpatient department of a hospital, delivery of babies in the home is possible without sacrificing the safety of the mother, he said, pointing to the record of a Chicago outpatient service which had but 12 deaths of mothers in 6,500 cases.

The general practitioner of medicine devotes 30 per cent of his time to obstetrics, yet only 4 per cent of his formal medical training has been in that field, Dr. Riley said.

Urge Selection of Students.

State universities have a special obligation to select superior students for professional education, President Arthur C. Willard of the University of Illinois declared at the morning session of the congress, since public funds are being spent on a small proportion of the population in the interest of public service.

A paper by President Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford university, chairman of the congress, who was unable to be present, also protested against admitting mediocre students to professional schools, observing, "One may sympathize with struggling youth, but should sympathize more with future patients."

A five year trial period for young medical graduates before they are granted a life license as a physician was proposed last night by Dr. Irvin D. Metzger of Pittsburgh, president of the Federation of State Medical Boards of the United States, which is holding a joint session with the congress on education. "Exploiters," he said, "could be eliminated before they became socially grounded."

DENTISTS URGED TO AID POLICE IN IDENTIFICATION

Teeth Like Fingerprints, Says U. S. Inspector.

Like finger prints, no two mouths are exactly alike and dental records or charts furnish a sure and permanent means of identification, delegates to the 72d annual convention of the Chicago Dental society were told last night by W. H. Drane Lester, inspector of the federal bureau of investigation of the department of justice.

As the representative of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, addressed the general session of the convention at the Stevens hotel on modern scientific crime detection and urged dentists of the country to coöperate with police in identifying criminals and accident victims.

Leading dentists, research workers, and authorities in allied fields from all parts of the United States and more than a dozen foreign countries were registered during the first day of the convention which will last through Thursday.

Latest Apparatus Demonstrated.

Officials of the organizaton estimate that 10,000 will attend the sessions. Morning and afternoon yesterday were given over largely to demonstrations of the newest developments in dental appliances and materials.

"If dental records or charts were standardized by members of the dental profession," said Mr. Lester in his address last night, "it might be possible eventually to place a 'stop order' or 'wanted notice' with dentists, just as we place them in our finger print files today, with the result that in many instances dentists might be able to assist the law enforcement authorities still further in the capture of criminals."

Although no formal discussions of the new "Hartman solution" for eliminating the pain of the dentist's drill are scheduled in the convention program, the formula, which was announced recently by Dr. Leroy Hartman, Columbia professor, is one of the most frequent topics of informal discussion.

Start Poll on Hartman Method.

The dental society started a poll of attending dentists to determine how widely the Hartman formula is being used and with what results. Tabulations of the poll will be completed after the convention close.

The Mouth Hygiene Council of Chicago heard the first report on the progress of the five year dental health program in Chicago schools, which was started last year by the dental society and hygiene council. Dr. F. Van Minden, secretary of the council, reported that of 945 students in the Hyde Park High school who were given complete examination, 96 per cent were found to have dental defects. An average of 5½ cavities per student was found.

Gen. Butler Pleads for Neutrality.

Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, retired, of the United States Marine corps, also addressed the dentists last night. He asserted that a European war is inevitable and urged that pressure be brought on congress to pass a strict neutrality law which would leave discretionary power to no one, not even the President.

He advocated that all trade be cut off with warring nations and that this country remain utterly aloof from other nations in time of war. Armaments, he declared, should be confined to those necessary for defense.

New Type Tire Chains Double the Mileage, Increase the Safety

● Look out for auto accidents when streets are slippery. Terrible accidents happen in split-seconds when least expected. In fact, no one ever expects an accident—otherwise there would not be 882,000 accidents, involving 1,268,000 cars, killing 36,000 and injuring 954,000 persons in one year (1934).

No one expects an accident—even though 1 car out of every 17 is doomed to be in one within the year, according to accident figures published by The Travelers Insurance Company. 1 out of 17.

Lack of tire chains on slippery roads causes more accidents than any mechanical defect including defective brakes, according to life insurance company's analysis. So don't lack them. Have them and use them.

JAPAN'S THRUST TOWARD INDIA ALARMS BRITAIN

Alters Empire Defenses to Combat Menace.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 17.—German rearmament plus suspicions of an alliance between Germany and Japan explain the earnestness with which the British are now remodeling the whole system of empire defense. The Japanese maneuvers in the far east are especially disturbing the slumbers of Downing street.

It had been assumed that the Nipponese would be content to push toward the Manchukuan-soviet frontiers and pay attention to inviolable British interests in China.

Now that the Japanese have applied the closed door to the occupied territories and turned to the west rather than to the north solely, the British are distinctly worried and their fears are not allayed by another matter.

British and Dutch Alarmed.

The Japanese are now maneuvering on the Isthmus of Kra to the alarm of both the British and the Dutch. The Japanese plan to dig a canal across the Malay peninsula on Siamese territory, which may become as important as the Suez canal or Panama canal. It would cut through a region which lies between the British and French spheres of interest and not far from the Dutch.

The object of this canal is to shorten the passage to the Bay of Bengal by nearly 1,000 miles on a route running 700 miles north of Singapore. It is thus strategic and would point to Japan as having her eyes on India as a source of a cotton supply in order to free herself from the United States, just as her possession of Borneo and the Dutch East Indies would supply her oil needs and free her from other import sources.

The Japanese have been intriguing in Bangkok ever since the British laid down the Singapore base in 1921. Revolutions were fomented and a great victory was scored for the Japanese when the pro-British King Prajadhipok of Siam was forced to abdicate. The canal is Japan's military answer to Singapore. It will take four years to complete.

Cabinet Examines Defense Scheme.

Great Britain's new billion and a half dollar armament program was discussed by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and his cabinet at a special meeting today.

In connection with the cabinet's deliberations, British diplomacy is also busy over the question of German plans to reoccupy the demilitarized zone in the Rhineland. Many believe Adolf Hitler will occupy the zone before the year is out.

[A French general recently charged that Germany had moved 40,000 troops into the Rhineland. Berlin denied the charge.]

France is expected to propose to Britain shortly that the question of the military reoccupation of the Rhineland by Germany should be the subject of an immediate appeal to the council of the league of nations.

France May Retaliate.

The French government is also considering whether such action by Germany ought to be met by further reinforcement of garrisons on the French frontiers.

Paris in any event is expected to suggest it would be desirable for the British and French air stafs to join in immediate consultations. The object would be to determine a site in northern France from which the British air force could coöperate.

General discussions in London early in the summer on political terms and military plans are desired by France.

The French government also feels that the views of other Locarno powers on the steps which should follow a unilateral repudiation by Germany of the Locarno pact should be made known at an early date.

[Under the Locarno treaty Britain, France, Belgium, Germany, and Italy pledged mutual support. It was provided that if France, Belgium, or Germany unjustifiedly attacked each other the remaining signatories would go to the aid of the nation attacked. This was intended to guarantee, mutually, the inviolability of the German-Belgian and German-French frontiers as fixed by the Versailles treaty.]

TESTIFIES AGAINST DOCTORS

GERMANY TRIES AMERICAN FOR HIGH TREASON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—Karl Nisselbeck, a native of Germany and naturalized citizen of the United States, went on trial in a Munich court today for attempted high treason. A representative of the American consulate general in Berlin attended the session. Nisselbeck is accused of bringing into Germany 15 copies of a book written by Otto Strasser, exiled leader of the anti-Hitler "Black Front." Strasser lives in Prague.

The defendant at the opening of the trial testified he had enlisted as a volunteer in the German army in his youth. After the world war, he said, he joined the Nationalist Steel Helmets and was a member of the organization until he went to America.

"I worked hard in the United States to bring about a reapprochement between German veterans and American veterans," he declared.

Attempting to explain why he brought Strasser's writings into Germany, Nisselbeck said:

"I meant to study the book and then to seek the acquaintance of Strasser and his followers in order to be able to inform my Nazi friends about them."

Two professional judges and three lay judges wearing uniforms of the Storm Troops, Schutz Staffel [picked Hitler guards] and the air force, will decide Nisselbeck's fate. Rudolf Kanzler and Alfons Hartmann also are on trial in the same case.

Gun Toter Makes Moreno Victim of 'Practical Joke'

ALGECIRAS, Spain, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Antonio Moreno, film actor, who had been reported arrested in Barcelona province yesterday, said tonight he had apparently been the "victim of a not very humorous practical joke." The actor said the man arrested at San Pedro de Riudevittles for carrying a pistol and consorting with extremists, could not have been himself because "I've been here visiting my mother since Saturday."

Bulgar King in Jugo-Slavia to Discuss Deal on Austria

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Feb. 17.—(AP)—King Boris of Bulgaria came here unnanounced today, presumably to negotiate with Jugo-Slav statesmen and to visit Queen Marie, widow of the assassinated King Alexander. King Boris is known as the friend of Italy and, consequently, it was believed he would discuss the present effort by Austria to clarify the status of Italy's influence in central Europe.

Plead Not Guilty

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Dr. Tilton E. Tillman and Samuel G. Boyd, named by Ann Cooper Hewitt, 21 year old heiress, in her $500,000 sterilization "plot" suit, pleaded innocent to mayhem charges today at a preliminary hearing before Municipal Judge Sylvain J. Lazarus. He refused a motion to quash the charges.

Dr. Irwin Wallace, anesthetist at the hospital where Miss Hewitt was sterilized in 1934, and Mrs. Mary S. Scally, city health department psychiatrist, testified. The hearing will continue tomorrow.

Assistant District Attorney August Fourtner pointed out that hospital records identified by Dr. Wallace contained no written consent by patient, parent, or guardian to the operation.

FRENCH PATROL SYRIAN BAZARS TO HALT VIOLENCE

BEIRUT, Syria, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Senegalese infantry and cavalry guarded bazars in Damascus today after shops had been closed to prevent further outbreaks of nationalistic rioting.

Gen. Charles Huntziger, commander of French forces, asked leading citizens to assist in restoration of order after more than twenty days of disturbances in which twenty-three persons were killed.

Fouad Mouffarej, a naturalized American who was exiled because of his nationalist activities, said he would go to New York City to live.

Porto Rico Democrats Renew Statehood Fight

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Feb. 17.—(AP)—After pledging six votes to President Roosevelt, Porto Rican Democrats last night in convention voted to work for statehood for the island. Their goal is a continuance of the statehood plank in the platform they adopted in 1932.

JAP ARMY CHIEF CALLS IN STAF TO TALK WAR MOVES

Reds Closing Consulates in Manchukuo.

TOKIO, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Staf officers conferred with the Japanese minister of war today on the delicate Russian situation after restrictions were placed on newspaper discussions of the issue.

A spokesman for the foreign office said reports from Hsinking, capital of the Japanese-fostered state of Manchukuo, indicated Russia is withdrawing all her consulates from Manchukuo except the consulate-general at Harbin.

Officials pointed out that for three years Manchukuo wanted to establish consulates in Russia in addition to the ones she now has at Blagoveshchensk and Chita. It is said Moscow will insist that Manchukuo withdraw one of these two.

Demanded Equal Number.

The demand for an equal number of consulates, it was said, were not answered by Russia until last December when Manchukuo insisted upon action, this leading to the reported Russian move of withdrawing its consulates in Manchukuo. The soviet consulate at Mukden was closed last week.

Japanese officials said they believed the withdrawals had no connection with recent border fighting between Outer Monoglian and Manchukuan troops and could not be interpreted as a preparation for war.

The Japanese government forbade newspapers to print anything on the issue except official communiques of this and the Manchukuan governments. This move was attributed to a wish to avoid inflaming public opinion during official conferences here to prevent the border dispute from leading to war.

Reject Commission Plan.

After a report from the Japanese general headquarters at Hsinking on recent incidents, Minister of War Yoshiyuki Kawashima today began conferring with his staf officers.

Meanwhile, the war and foreign offices agreed to turn down a soviet proposal that neutrals serve on a joint commission to be created in an effort to solve the border conflicts.

[A Moscow dispatch said soviet officials contend that a limiting of the commission to Japanese, Manchukuan, and Russian delegates would give Japan a two-to-one vote, but no official stand has yet been adopted.]

"We hope the soviet will withdraw that suggestion," said a Japanese spokesman, "to permit early formation of a tripartite Japanese-Manchukuan-soviet commission to begin the task of easing the border situation."

Find Japanese Munitions.

MOSCOW, Feb. 17.—(AP)—A soviet dispatch from Ulan Bator [Urga], capital of the Outer Mongolian people's republic, said tonight a quantity of shells and other abandoned war materials of Japanese make were found five miles inside Mongolian territory. Mongolians were quoted as saying this disproved a Japanese contention that a clash Feb. 12 resulted from a Mongolian invasion of Manchukuo.

HUNT DENTAL OFFICE BURGLARS.

The Woodlawn police were searching yesterday for burglars who broke into the offices of the Boston Dentists, 800 East 63d street, some time Sunday and took 15 pairs of forceps, a bottle of mercury, and $10 in scrap gold.

5 STRIKERS SHOT DEAD BY MEXICAN POLICE IN CLASH

Mazatlan Placed Under Military Control.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 17.—(AP)—The Pacific coast port of Mazatlan was placed under military control today after a clash in which police killed five strikers and wounded five others, the latest outbreak in Mexico's unsettled capital-labor crisis. Police fired when strikers attempted to attack a group of strikebreakers going to work in a Mazatlan slaughter house.

Blaming members of the city council for the shootings, labor organizations paraded to the municipal palace, demanding the resignations of the council and threatening a general strike in all industries.

A group of rebel, led by a woman said to be Benita Michelena, today attacked and sacked a hacienda in the Los Altos region where rebel activities are centered.

Teacher Beaten to Death.

A rural school teacher, Castula Meneses, was reported shot and beaten to death by residents of Tenango, near Puebla. Attackers shouting "Down with Socialistic education" dragged Meneses from his bicycle and literally tore his body apart. The Teachers confederation of Puebla has petitioned the government to supply them with arms.

The Mexican congress, in a special session today, approved a measure proposed by President Lazaro Cardenas to increase the rights of workers.

The congress amended the federal labor law to compel employers to pay wages for one day of rest for each six days worked. The payment must be made whether or not the six days of work is performed consecutively. The amendment met unanimous approval in both chambers.

Defends Education Law.

Cardenas, in an address to workers at Ciudad Guerrero, Tamaulipas state, asserted, "There is no religious persecution in Mexico."

"The government is insisting on the fulfillment of existing laws," he said, "and as a result enemies of socialistic education are carrying on a bitter campaign against the government."

"Socialistic education combats fanaticism, it gives children a better understanding of man's duty to society, and prepares them for the social struggle in which they have to participate."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 17.—(Special.)—The opinion of the majority of the Supreme court on the TVA case, delivered by Chief Justice Hughes, follows:

"On Jan. 4, 1934, the Tennessee Valley authority, an agency of the federal government, entered into a contract with the Alabama Power company, providing [1] for the purchase by the authority from the power company of certain transmission lines, substations, and auxiliary properties for one million dollars; [2] for the purchase by the authority from the power company of certain real property for $150,000; [3] for an interchange by hydroelectric energy, and in addition for the sale by the authority to the power company of its 'surplus power,' on stated terms, and [4] for mutual restrictions as to the areas to be served in the sale of power. The contract was amended and supplemented in minor particulars on Feb. 13 and May 24, 1934.

"The Alabama Power company is a corporation organized under the laws of Alabama and is engaged in the generation of electric energy and its distribution generally throughout that state, its lines reaching 66 counties.

Serve Population of 190,000.

"The transmission lines to be purchased by the authority extended from Wilson dam, at the Muscle Shoals plant owned by the United States on the Tennessee river in northern Alabama, into seven counties in that state, within a radius of about 50 miles.

"These lines serve a population of approximately 190,000, including about 10,000 individual customers, or about one-tenth of the total number served directly by the power company. The real property to be acquired by the authority [apart from the transmission lines above mentioned and related properties] is adjacent to the area known as the 'Joe Wheeler dam site,' upon which the authority is constructing the Wheeler dam.

"The contract of Jan. 4, 1934, also provided for coöperation between the Alabama Power company and the Electric Home and Farm Authority, Inc., a subsidiary of the Tennessee Valley authority, to promote the sale of electrical appliances, and to that end the power company, on May 21, 1934, entered into an agency contract with the Electric Home and Farm Authority, Inc.

Latter Corporation Dissolved.

"It is not necessary to detail or discuss the proceedings in relation to that transaction, as it is understood that the latter corporation has been dissolved.

"There was a further agreement on Aug. 9, 1934, by which the Alabama Power company gave an option to the Tennessee Valley authority to acquire urban distribution systems which had been retained by the power company in municipalities within the area served by the transmission lines above mentioned. It appears that this option has not been exercised and that the agreement has been terminated.

"Plaintifs are holders of preferred stock of the Alabama Power company. Conceiving the contract with the Tennessee Valley authority to be injurious to the corporate interests and also invalid, because beyond the constitutional power of the federal government, they submitted their protest to the board of directors of the power company and demanded that steps should be taken to have the contract annulled.

SUE OVER CONTRACT

"The board refused, and the Commonwealth and Southern corporation, the holder of all the common stock of the power company, declined to call a meeting of the stockholders to take action. As the protest was unavailing, plaintifs brought this suit to have the invalidity of the contract determined and its performance enjoined.

"Going beyond that particular challenge, and setting forth the pronouncements, policies, and programs of the authority, plaintifs sought a decree restraining these activities as repugnant to the constitution, and also asked a general declaratory decree with respect to the rights of the authority in various relations.

"The defendants, including the authority and its directors, the power company and its mortgage trustee, and the municipalities within the described area, filed answers and the case was heard upon evidence.

Contract Is Annulled.

"The District court made elaborate findings and entered a final decree annulling the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, and enjoining the transfer of the transmission lines and auxiliary properties.

"The court also enjoined the defendant municipalities from making or performing any contracts with the authority for the purchase of power and from accepting or expending any funds received from the authority or the Public Works administration for the purpose of constructing a public distribution system to distribute power which the authority supplied.

Plaintifs Take Cross Appeal.

"The authority, its directors, and the city of Florence appealed from the decree and the case was severed as to the other defendants. Plaintifs took a cross appeal.

"The Circuit Court of Appeals limited its discussion to the precise issue with respect to the effect and validity of the contract of Jan. 4, 1934. The District court had found that the electric energy required for the territory served by the transmission lines to be purchased under that contract is available at Wilson dam without the necessity for any interconnection with any other dam or power plant.

"The Circuit Court of Appeals accordingly considered the constitutional authority for the construction of Wilson dam and for the disposition of the electric energy there created.

Appeal Reverses Decree.

"In the view that the Wilson dam had been constructed in the exercise of the war and commerce powers of the congress and that the electric energy there available was the property of the United States and subject to its disposition, the Circuit Court of Appeals decided that the decree of the District court was erroneous and should be reversed. The court also held that plaintifs should take nothing by their cross appeal, 78 F. [2D.] 578. On plaintif's application we granted writs of certiorari, 296 U. S.

"First. The right of plaintifs to bring this suit. Plaintifs sue in the right of the Alabama Power company. They sought unsuccessfully to have that right asserted by the power company, itself, and upon showing their demand and its refusal they complied with the applicable rule.

"While their stock holdings are small, they have a real interest and there is no question that the suit was brought in good faith. If otherwise entitled, they should not be denied the relief which would be accorded to one who owned more shares.

HIT VALIDITY OF POWER

"Plaintifs did not simply challenge the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, as improvidently made,—as an unwise exercise of the discretion vested in the board of directors. They challenged the contract both as injurious to the interests of the corporation and as an illegal transaction,—violating the fundamental law.

"In seeking to prevent the carrying out of the contract, the suit was directed not only against the power company but against the authority and its directors upon the ground that the latter, under color of the statute, were acting beyond the powers which the congress could validly confer.

"In such a case it is not necessary for stockholders—when their corporation refuses to take suitable measures for its protection—to show that the managing board or trustees have acted with fraudulent intent or under legal duress.

"To entitle the complainants to equitable relief, in the absence of an adequate legal remedy, it is enough for them to show the breach of trust or duty involved in the injurious and illegal action.

Lack of Authority Issue.

"Nor is it necessary to show that the transaction was ultra vires the corporation. The illegality may be found in the lack of lawful authority on the part of those with whom the corporation is attempting to deal. Thus, the breach of duty may consist in yielding, without appropriate resistance, to governmental demands which are without warant of law or are in violation of constitutional restrictions.

"The right of stockholders to seek equitable relief has been recognized when the managing board or trustees of the corporation have refused to take legal measures to resist the collection of taxes or other exactions alleged to be unconstitutional [Dodge vs. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 339, 340, 345; Pollock vs. Farmers' Loan and Trust company, 157 U. S. 429, 433, 553, 554; Brushaber vs. Union Pacific Railroad company, 240 U. S. 1, 1011]; or because of the failure to assert the rights and franchises of the corporation against an unwarranted interference through legislative or administrative action [Greenwood vs. Freight company, 105 U. S. 13, 15, 16; Cotting vs. Kansas City Stockyards company, 183 U. S. 79, 114].

Remedy to Stockholders.

"The remedy has been accorded to stockholders of public service corporations with respect to rates alleged to be confiscatory [Smyth vs. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 469, 517; Ex Parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 129, 130, 143].

"The fact that the directors in the exercise of their judgment, either because they were disinclined to undertake a burdensome litigation or for other reasons which they regarded as substantial, resolved to comply with the legislative or administrative demands, has not been deemed an adequate ground for denying to the stockholders an opportunity to contest the validity of the governmental requirements to which the directors were submitting.

"See Dodge vs. Woolsey, supra, at pp. 340, 345; Greenwood vs. Freight company, supra, at p. 15; Pollock vs. Farmers' Loan and Trust company, supra, at pp. 433, 553, 554; Brushaber vs. Union Pacific Railroad company, supra, at p. 10.

Amount Found No Issue.

"In Smith vs. Kansas City Title company, 255 U. S. 180, a shareholder of the title company sought to enjoin the directors from investing its funds in the bonds of federal land banks and joint stock land banks upon the ground that the act of congress authorizing the creation of these banks and the issue of bonds was unconstitutional, and hence that the bonds were not legal securities in which the corporate funds could lawfully be invested.

"The proposed investment was not large—only $10,000 in each of the classes of bonds described. Id., pp. 195, 196. And it appeared that the directors of the title company maintained that the federal farm loan act was constitutional and that the bonds were 'valid and desirable investments.' Id., p. 201.

"But neither the conceded fact as to the judgment of the directors nor the small amount to be invested—shown by the averments of the complaint—availed to defeat the jurisdiction of the court to decide the question as to the validity of the act and of the bonds which it authorized.

Right to Sue Upheld.

"The court held that the validity of the act was directly drawn in question and that the shareholder was entitled to maintain the suit. The court said: 'The general allegations as to the interest of the shareholder, and his right to have an injunction to prevent the purchase of the alleged unconstitutional securities by misapplication of the funds of the corporation, give jurisdiction under the principles settled in Pollock vs. Farmers' Loan and Trust company, and Brushaber vs. Union Pacific R. R. Co., supra.' Id., pp. 201, 202.

"The court then proceeded to examine the constitutional question and sustained the legislation under attack. A similar result was reached in Brushaber vs. Union Pacific R. R. Co., supra.

"A close examination of these decisions leads inevitably to the conclusion that they should either be followed or be frankly overruled. We think that they should be followed, and that the opportunity to resort to equity, in the absence of an adequate legal remedy, in order to prevent illegal transactions by those in control of corporate properties, should not be curtailed because of reluctance to decide constitutional questions.

COURT ACCEPTS RULE

"We find no distinctions which would justify us in refusing to entertain the present controversy. It is urged that plaintifs hold preferred shares and that, for the present purpose, they are virtually in the position of bondholders.

"The rights of bondholders, in case of injury to their interests through unconstitutional demands upon, or transactions with, their corporate debtor, are not before us. Compare Reagan vs. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 154 U. S. 362, 367, 368.

"Plaintifs are not creditors but shareholders [with equal voting power share for share with the common stock holders, according to the findings] and thus they have a proprietary interest in the corporate enterprise which is subject to injury through breaches of trust or duty on the part of the directors, who are not less the representatives of the plaintifs because their shares have certain preferences. See Ball vs. Rutland Railroad Co., 93 Fed. 513, 514, 515.

Should Not Shut Door.

"It may be, as in this case, that the owner of all the common stock has participated in the transaction in question, and the owners of preferred stock may be the only persons having a proprietary interest in the corporation who are in a position to protect its interests against what is asserted to be an illegal disposition of its property. A court of equity should not shut its door against them.

"It is said that here, instead of parting with money, as in the case of illegal or unconstitutional taxes or exactions, the power company is to receive a substantial consideration under the contract in suit.

"But the power company is to part with transmission lines which supply a large area, and plaintifs allege that the consideration is inadequate and that the transaction entails a disruption of services and a loss of business and franchises.

"If, as plaintifs contend, those purporting to act as a governmental agency had no constitutional authority to make the agreement, its execution would leave the power company with doubtful remedy, either against the governmental agency which might not be able, or against the government which might not be willing, to respond to a demand for the restoration of conditions as they now exist.

Result Is Unpredictable.

"In what circumstances and with what result such an effort at restoration might be made is unpredictable. If, as was decided in Smith vs. Kansas City Title company, supra, stockholders had the right to sue to test the validity of a proposed investment in the bonds of land banks, we can see no reason for denying to these plaintifs a similar resort to equity in order to challenge, on the ground of unconstitutionality, a contract involving such a dislocation and misapplication of corporate property as are charged in the instant case.

"The government urges that the power company is estopped to question the validity of the act creating the Tennessee Valley authority and hence that the stockholders, suing in the right of the corporation, cannot maintain this suit.

Company Continues Purchases.

"It is said that the power company, in 1925, installed its own transformers and connections at Wilson dam and has ever since purchased large quantities of electric energy there generated, and that the power company continued its purchases after the passage of the act of 1933 constituting the authority.

"The principle is invoked that one who accepts the benefit of a statute cannot be heard to question its constitutionality. Great Falls Manufacturing company vs. Attorney General, 124 U. S. 581; Wall vs. Parrot Silver & Copper Co., 244 U. S. 407; St. Louis company vs. Prendergast company, 260 U. S. 469.

PRINCIPLE INAPPLICABLE

"We think that the principle is not applicable here. The prior purchase of power in the circumstances disclosed may have a bearing upon the question before us, but it is by no means controling.

"The contract in suit manifestly has a broader range and we find nothing in the earlier transactions which preclude the contention that this contract goes beyond the constitutional power of the authority. Reference is also made to a proceeding instituted by the power company to obtain the approval of the contract by the Alabama public service commission and to the delay in the bringing of this suit.

"It was brought on Oct. 8, 1934, following plaintif's demand upon the board of directors in the preceding August. Estoppel in equity must rest on substantial grounds of prejudice or change of position, not on technicalities.

Delay Held No Prejudice.

"We see no reason for concluding that the delay or the proceeding before the commission caused any prejudice to either the power company or the authority, so far as the subject matter of the contract between them is concerned, or that there is any basis for the claim of estoppel.

"We think that plaintifs have made a sufficient showing to entitle them to bring suit and that a constitutional question is properly presented and should be decided.

"Second. The scope of the issue. We agree with the Circuit Court of Appeals that the question to be determined is limited to the validity of the contract of Jan. 4, 1934. The pronouncements, policies and program of the Tennessee Valley authority and its directors, their motives and desires, did not give rise to a justiciable controversy save as they had fruition in action of a definite and concrete character constituting an actual or threatened interference with the rights of the persons complaining.

Abstract Questions Barred.

"The judicial power does not extend to the determination of abstract questions. Muskrat vs. United States, 219 U. S. 346, 361; Liberty Warehouse company vs. Grannis, 273 U. S. 70, 74; Willing vs. Chicago Auditorium, 277 U. S. 274, 289; Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway company vs. Wallace, 288 U. S. 249, 262, 264.

"It was for this reason that the court dismissed the bill of the state of New Jersey which sought to obtain a judicial declaration that in certain features the federal water power act exceeded the authority of the congress and encroached upon that of the state. New Jersey vs. Sargent, 269 U. S. 328.

"For the same reason, the state of New York, in her suit against the state of Illinois, failed in her effort to obtain a decision of abstract questions as to the possible effect of the diversion of water from Lake Michigan upon hypothetical water power developments in the indefinite future. New York vs. Illinois, 274 U. S. 488.

"Vague" Issue Dismissed.

"At the last term the court held, in dismissing the bill of the United States against the state of West Virginia, that general allegations that the state challenged the claim of the United States that the rivers in question were navigable, and asserted a right superior to that of the United States to license their use for power production, raised an issue 'too vague and ill-defined to admit of judicial determination.' United States vs. West Virginia, 295 U. S. 463, 474.

"Claims based merely upon 'assumed potential invasions' of rights are not enough to warant judicial intervention. Arizona vs. California, 283 U. S. 423, 462.

"The act of June 14, 1934, providing for declaratory judgments, does not attempt to change the essential requisites for the exercise of judicial power. By its terms, it applies to 'cases of actual controversy,' a phrase which must be taken to connote a controversy of a justiciable nature, thus excluding an advisory decree upon a hypothetical state of facts. See Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway company vs. Wallace, supra.

POWER CONTRACT ISSUE

"While plaintifs, as stockholders, might insist that the board of directors should take appropriate legal measures to extricate the corporation from particular transactions and agreements alleged to be invalid, plaintifs had no right to demand that the directors should start a litigation to obtain a general declaration of the unconstitutionality of the Tennessee Valley authority act in all its bearings or a decision of abstract questions as to the right of the authority and of the Alabama Power company in possible contingencies.

"Examining the present record, we find no ground for a demand by plaintifs except as it related to the contracts between the authority and the Alabama Power company.

"And as the contract of May 21, 1934, with the Electric Home and Farm Authority, Inc., and that of Aug. 9, 1934, for an option to the authority to acquire urban distribution systems, are understood to be inoperative [ante, p. —], the only remaining questions that plaintifs are entitled to raise concern the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, providing for the purchase of transmission lines and the disposition of power.

A Further Limitation.

"There is a further limitation upon our inquiry. As it appears that the transmission lines in question run from the Wilson dam and that the electric energy generated at that dam is more than sufficient to supply all the requirements of the contract, the questions that are properly before us relate to the constitutional authority for the construction of the Wilson dam and for the disposition, as provided in the contract, of the electric energy there generated.

"Third. The constitutional authority for the construction of the Wilson dam. The congress may not 'under the pretext of executing its powers, pass laws for the accomplishment of objects not entrusted to the government.' Chief Justice Marshall, in McCulloch vs. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 423; Linder vs. United States, 268 U. S. 15, 17.

Limitation Recognized.

The government's argument recognizes this essential limitation. The government's contention is that the Wilson dam was constructed, and the power plant connected with it was installed, in the exercise by the congress of its war and commerce powers; that is, for the purposes of national defense and the improvement of navigation.

"Wilson dam is described as a concrete monolith one hundred feet high and almost a mile long, containing two locks for navigation and eight installed generators. Construction was begun in 1917 and completed in 1926.

President's Authorization.

"It authorized the President to cause an investigation to be made in order to determine 'the best, cheapest, and most available means for the production of nitrates and other products for munitions of war'; to designate for the exclusive use of the United States 'such site or sites upon any navigable or non-navigable river or rivers or upon the public lands, as in his opinion will be necessary for carrying out the purposes of this act.' And 'to construct, maintain and operate' on any such site 'dams, locks, improvements to navigation, power houses, and other plants and equipment or other means than water power as in his judgment is the best and cheapest, necessary or convenient for the generation of electrical or other power and for the production of nitrates or other products needed for munitions of war and useful in the manufacture of fertilizers and other useful products.'

INTENDED FOR DEFENSE

"The President was authorized to lease, or acquire by condemnation or otherwise, such lands as might be necessary, and there was further provision that 'the products of such plants shall be used by the President for military and naval purposes to the extent that he may deem necessary, and any surplus which he shall determine is not required shall be sold and disposed of by him under such regulations as he may prescribe.' Id.

"We may take judicial notice of the international situation at the time the act of 1916 was passed, and it cannot be successfully disputed that the Wilson dam and its auxiliary plants, including the hydro-electric power plant, are, and were intended to be, adapted to the purposes of national defense.

"While the District court found that there is no intention to use the nitrate plants or the hydro-electric units installed at Wilson dam for the production of war materials in time of peace, 'the maintenance of said properties in operating condition, and the assurance of an abundant supply of electric energy in the event of war, constitute national defense assets.' This finding has ample support.

Other Purposes of Act.

"The act of 1916 also had in view 'improvements to navigation.' Commerce includes navigation. 'All America understands, and has uniformly understood,' said Chief Justice Marshall in Gibbons vs. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 190, 'the word "commerce" to comprehend navigation.'

"The power to regulate interstate commerce embraces the power to keep the navigable rivers of the United States free from obstructions to navigation and to remove such obstructions when they exist. 'For these purposes,' said the court in Gilman vs. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 725, 'congress possesses all the powers which existed in the states before the adoption of the national constitution, and which have always existed in the parliament in England.' See, also Philadelphia company vs. Stimson, 223 U. S. 605, 634.

"The Tennessee river is a navigable stream, although there are obstructions at various points because of shoals, reefs, and rapids. The improvement of navigation on this river has been a matter of national concern for over a century.

Recommendation of 1824.

"Recommendation that provision be made for navigation around Muscle Shoals was made by the secretary of war, John C. Calhoun, in his report transmitted to the congress by President Monroe in 1824, and from 1852 the congress has repeatedly authorized projects to develop navigation on that and other portions of the river, both by open channel improvements and by canalization.

"The Wilson dam project, adopted in 1918, gave a nine foot slack water development, for fifteen miles above Florence, over the Muscle Shoals rapids and, as the District court found, 'flooded out the then existing canal and locks which were inadequate.'

"The District court also found that a 'high dam of this type was the only feasible means of eliminating this most serious obstruction to navigation.' By the act of 1930, after a protracted study by the corps of engineers of the United States army, the congress adopted a project for a permanent improvement of the main stream 'for a navigable depth of nine feet.'

Dam Construction Upheld.

"While, in its present condition, the Tennessee river is not adequately improved for commercial navigation, and trafic is small, we are not at liberty to conclude either that the river is not susceptible of development as an important waterway, or that congress has not undertaken that development, or that the construction of the Wilson dam was not an appropriate means to accomplish a legitimate end.

"The Wilson dam and its power plant must be taken to have been constructed in the exercise of the constitutional functions of the federal government.

PROPERTY OF U. S.

"Fourth. The constitutional authority to dispose of electric energy generated at the Wilson dam. The government acquired full title to the dam site, with all riparian rights.

"The power of falling water was an inevitable incident of the construction of the dam. That water power came into the exclusive control of the federal government.

"The mechanical energy was convertible into electric energy, and the water power, the right to convert it into electric energy, and the electric energy thus produced constitutes property belonging to the United States. See Green Bay Canal company vs. Patten Paper company, 172 U. S. 58, 80; United States vs. Chandler-Dunbar company, 229 U. S. 53, 72, 73; Utah Power and Light company vs. Pfost, 286 U. S., 165, 170.

"Authority to dispose of property constitutionally acquired by the United States is expressly granted to the congress by section 3 of article IV. of the constitution. This section provides:

"'The congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular state.'

10th Amendment Cited.

"To the extent that the power of disposition is there expressly conferred, it is manifest that the tenth amendment is not applicable. And the ninth amendment [which petitioners also invoke] in insuring the maintenance of the rights retained by the people does not withdraw the rights which are expressly granted to the federal government.

"The question is as to the scope of the grant and whether they are inherent limitations which render invalid the disposition of property with which we are now concerned.

"The occasion for the grant was the obvious necessity of making provision for the government of the vast territory acquired by the United States. The power to govern and to dispose of that territory was deemed to be indispensable to the purposes of the cessions made by the states.

"And yet it was a matter of grave concern because of the fear that 'the sale and disposal' might become 'a source of such immense revenue to the national government as to make it independent of and formidable to the people.'

"Story, on the constitution, secs. 1325, 1926. The grant was made in broad terms, and the power of regulation and disposition was not confined to territory but extended to 'other property belonging to the United States,' so that the power may be applied, as Story says, 'to the due regulation of all other personal and real property rightfully belonging to the United States.' And so, he adds, 'it has been constantly understood and acted upon.' Id.

POWER EMBRACES LEASES

"This power of disposal was early construed to embrace leases, thus enabling the government to derive profit through royalties. The question arose with respect to a government lease of lead mines on public lands, under the act of March 3, 1807.

"The contention was advanced that 'disposal is not letting or leasing'; that congress had no power 'to give or authorize leases' and 'to obtain profits from the working of the mines.' The court overruled the contention, saying: 'The disposal must be left to the discretion of congress. And there can be no apprehensions of any encroachments upon state rights by the creation of a numerous tenantry within their borders as has been so strenuously urged in the argument.'

Policy Is Given Emphasis.

"The policy, early adopted and steadily pursued, of segregating mineral lands from other public lands and providing for leases, pointed to the recognition both of the full power of disposal and of the necessity of suitably adapting the methods of disposal to different sorts of property. The policy received particular emphasis following the discovery of gold in California in 1848.

"For example, an act of 1866 dealing with grants to Nevada declared that 'in all cases lands valuable for mines of gold, silver, quicksilver, or copper shall be reserved from sale.' And congress from the outset adopted a similar practice in reserving salt springs. Morton vs. Nebraska, 21 Wall. 660, 667; Montello Salt company vs. Utah, 221 U. S. 452.

"It was in the light of this historic policy that the court held that the school grant to Utah by the enabling act of 1894 was not intended to embrace land known to be valuable for coal. United States vs. Sweet, 245 U. S. 563, 572. See, also, as to the reservation and leases of oil lands, Pan-American company vs. United States, 273 U. S. 456, 487.

Profit Power Described.

"But when congress thus reserved mineral lands for special disposal, can it be doubted that congress could have provided for mining directly by its own agents instead of giving that right to lessees on the payment of royalties?

"Upon what ground could it be said that the government could not mine its own gold, silver, coal, lead, or phosphates in the public domain, and dispose of them as property belonging to the United States? That it could dispose of its land, but not of what the land contained?

"It would seem to be clear that under the same power of disposition which enabled the government to lease and obtain profit from sales by its lessees it could mine and obtain profit from its own sales.

"The question is whether a more limited power of disposal should be applied to the water power, convertible into electric energy, and to the electric energy thus produced at the Wilson dam constructed by the government in the exercise of its constitutional functions.

Point Well Established.

"If so, it must be by reason either of [1] the nature of the particular property, or [2] the character of the 'surplus' disposed of, or [3] the manner of disposition.

"[1] That the water power and the electric energy generated at the dam are susceptible of disposition as property belonging to the United States is well established.

"In the case of Green Bay Canal company, vs. Patten Paper company, supra, the question was 'whether the water power, incidentally created by the erection and maintenance of the dam and canal for the purpose of navigation in Fox river' was 'subject to control and appropriation by the United States, owning and operating those public works, or by the state of Wisconsin, within whose limits Fox river lies.' Id., pp. 68, 69.

"It appeared that, under the authority of the congress, the United States had acquired, by purchase from a canal company, title to its improvement works, lands and water powers, on the Fox river, and that the United States had consented to the retention by the canal company of the water powers with appurtenances.

Efficacious as Deed.

"We held that the 'substantial meaning of the transaction was that the United States granted to the canal company the right to continue in the possession and enjoyment of the water powers and the lots appurtenant thereto, subject to the rights and control of the United States as owning and operating the public works;' and that the method by which the arrangement was effected was 'as efficacious as if the entire property had been conveyed to the United States by one deed, and the reserved properties had been reconveyed to the canal company by another.' Id., p. 80.

"We thought it clear that the canal company was 'possessed of whatever rights to the use of this incidental water power that could be validly granted by the United States.' Id., p. 69."

"And in this view it was decided that so far as the 'water powers and appurtenant lots are regarded as property,' the title of the canal company could not be controverted, and that it was 'equally plain that the mode and extent of the use and enjoyment of such property by the canal company' fell within the sole control of the United States. See Kaukauna Water Power company vs. Green Bay Canal company, 142 U. S. 254; Green Bay Canal company vs. Patten Paper company, 173 U. S. 179.

DOMINION UPHELD

"In United States vs. Chandler-Dunbar company, 229 U. S. 53, the United States had condemned land in Michigan, lying between the St. Marys river and the ship canal strip of the government, in order to improve navigation.

"The riparian owner, under revocable permits from the secretary of war, had placed in the rapids 'the necessary dams, dykes, and forebays for the purpose of controling the current and using its power for commercial purposes.' Id., p. 68.

"The act of March 3, 1909, authorizing the improvement, had revoked the permit. We said that the government 'had dominion over the water power of the rapids and falls' and could not be required to pay 'any hypothetical additional value to a riparian owner who had no right to appropriate the current to his own commercial use.' Id., p. 76.

Act Authorizes Leases.

"The act of 1909 also authorized the secretary of war to lease 'any excess of water power which results from the conservation of the flow of the river, and the works which the government may construct.' 'If the primary purpose is legitimate,' said the court, 'we can see no sound objection to leasing any excess of power over the needs of the government. The practice is not unusual in respect to similar public works constructed by state governments.' Id., p. 73.

"Reference was made to the case of Kaukauna Water Power company vs. Green Bay Canal company, supra, where the court had observed in relation to a Wisconsin statute of 1848, which had reserved to the state the water power created by the dam over the Fox river: 'As there is no need of the surplus running to waste, there was nothing objectionable in permitting the state to let out the use of it to private parties, and thus reimburse itself for the expenses of the improvement.'

Power Requisitioned.

"In International Paper company vs. United States, 282 U. S. 399, the government made a war time requisition of electrical power and was held bound to make compensation to a lessee who thereby had lost the use of the water to which he was entitled.

"The court brushed aside attempted 'distinctions between the taking of power and the taking of water rights,' saying that the government intended 'to take and did take the use of all the water power' and had exercised its power of eminent domain to that end. Id., pp. 407, 408.

"[2] The argument is stressed that, assuming that electric energy generated at the dam belongs to the United States, the congress has authority to dispose of this energy only to the extent that it is a surplus necessarily created in the course of making munitions of war or operating the works for navigation purposes; that is, that the remainder of the available energy must be lost or go to waste.

"We find nothing in the constitution which imposes such a limitation. It is not to be deduced from the mere fact that the electric energy is only potentially available until the generators are operated.

Has Right to Energy.

"The government has no less right to the energy thus available by letting the water course over its turbines than it has to use the appropriate processes to reduce to possession other property within its control, as, for example, oil which it may recover from a pool beneath its lands, and which is reduced to possession by boring oil wells and otherwise might escape its grasp. See Ohio Oil company vs. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 208.

"And it would hardly be contended that, when the government reserves coal on its lands, it can mine the coal and dispose of it only for the purpose of heating public buildings or for other government operations.

"Or, if the government owns a silver mine, that it can obtain the silver only for the purpose of storage or coinage. Or that when the government extracts the oil it has reserved, it has no constitutional power to sell it.

"Our decisions recognize no such restriction. United States vs. Gratiot, supra; Kansas vs. Colorado, 206 U. S. 46, 88, 89; Light vs. United States, 220 U. S. 523, 536, 537; Ruddy vs. Rossie, 248 U. S. 104, 106.

"The United States owns the coal, or the silver, or the lead, or the oil, it obtains from its lands, and it lies in the discretion of the congress, acting in the public interest, to determine of how much of the property it shall dispose.

SAME RULE APPLICABLE

"We think that the same principle is applicable to electric energy. The argument pressed upon us leads to absurd consequences in the denial, despite the broad terms of the constitutional provision, of a power of disposal which the public interest may imperatively require.

"Suppose, for example, that in the erection of a dam for the improvement of navigation, it became necessary to destroy a dam and power plant which previously had been erected by a private corporation engaged in the generation and distribution of energy which supplied the needs of neighboring communities and business enterprises.

"Would any one say that, because the United States had built its own dam and plant in the exercise of its constitutional functions, and had complete ownership and dominion over both, no power could be supplied to the communities and enterprises dependent on it, not because of any unwillingness of the congress to supply it, or of any overriding governmental need, but because there was no constitutional authority to furnish the supply?

Another Instance Cited.

"Or that, with abundant power available, which must otherwise be wasted, the supply to the communities and enterprises whose very life may be at stake must be limited to the slender amount of surplus unavoidably involved in the operation of the navigation works, because the constitution does not permit any more energy to be generated and distributed?

"In the case of the Green Bay Canal company, above cited, where the government works supplanted those of the canal company, the court found no difficulty in sustaining the government's authority to grant to the canal company the water powers which it had previously enjoyed, subject, of course, to the dominant control of the government.

"And in the case of United States vs. Chandler-Dunbar company, supra, the statutory provision, to which the court referred, was 'that any excess of water in the St. Marys river at Sault Sainte Marie over and above the amount now or hereafter required for the uses of navigation shall be leased for power purposes by the secretary of war upon such terms and conditions as shall be best calculated in his judgment to insure the development thereof.'

"It was to the leasing, under this provision, 'of any excess of power over the needs of the government,' that the court saw no valid objection. Id., p. 73.

Cases Fail as Supports.

"The decisions which petitioners cite give no support to their contention. Pollard vs. Hagan, 3 How. 212; Shively vs. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, and Port of Seattle vs. Oregon-Washington Railway company, 225 P. S. 56, dealt with the title of the states to tide lands and the soil under navigable waters within their borders. [See Borax Consolidated vs. Los Angeles, 296 U. S. 10, 15.]

"Those cases did not concern the dominant authority of the federal government in the interest of navigation to erect dams and avail itself of the incidental water power.

"We emphasized the dominant character of that authority in the case of the Green Bay Canal company, supra, by this statement, at p. 80: 'At what points in the dam and canal the water for power may be withdrawn, and the quantity which can be treated as surplus with due regard to navigation, must be determined by the authority which owns and controls that navigation. In such matters there can be no divided empire.'

"The case of Wisconsin vs. Illinois, 278 U. S. 367, related to the diversion by the State of Illinois of water from Lake Michigan through the drainage canal at Chicago, and the questions now before us with respect to the disposition of surplus energy created at a dam erected by the federal government in the performance of its constitutional functions were in no way involved.

VALIDITY OF METHOD

"[3] We come then to the question as to the validity of the method which has been adopted in disposing of the surplus energy generated at the Wilson dam.

"The constitutional provision is silent as to the method of disposing of property belonging to the United States. That method, of course, must be an appropriate means of disposition according to the nature of the property, it must be one adopted in the public interest as distinguished from private or personal ends, and we may assume that it must be consistent with the foundation principles of our dual system of government and must not be contrived to govern the concerns reserved to the states. See Kansas v. Colorado, supra.

Embraces Sale of Surplus.

"In this instance the method of disposal embraces the sale of surplus energy by the Tennessee Valley Authority to the Alabama Power company, the interchange of energy between the authority and the power company, and the purchase by the authority from the power company of certain transmission lines.

"As to the mere sale of surplus energy, nothing need be added to what we have said as to the constitutional authority to dispose. The government could lease or sell and fix the terms. Sales of surplus energy to the power company by the authority continued a practice begun by the government several years before.

"The contemplated interchange of energy is a form of disposition and presents no questions which are essentially different from those that are pertinent to sales.

Lines Distribute Energy.

"The transmission lines which the authority undertakes to purchase from the power company lead from the Wilson dam to a large area within about fifty miles of the dam. These lines provide the means of distributing the electric energy, generated at the dam, to a large population.

"They furnish a method of reaching a market. The alternative method is to sell the surplus energy at the dam, and the market there appears to be limited to one purchaser, the Alabama Power company, and its affiliated interests.

"We know of no constitutional ground upon which the federal government can be denied the right to seek a wider market. We suppose that in the early days of mining in the west, if the government had undertaken to operate a silver mine on its domain it could have acquired the mules or horses and equipment necessary to carry its silver to market.

"And the transmission lines for electric energy are but a facility for conveying to market that particular sort of property, and the acquisition of these lines raises no different constitutional question, unless in some way there is an invasion of the rights reserved to the state or to the people.

FIND NO INVASION

"We find no basis for concluding that the limited undertaking with the Alabama Power company amounts to such an invasion. Certainly, the Alabama Power company has no constitutional right to insist that it shall be the sole purchaser of the energy generated at the Wilson dam; that the energy shall be sold to it or go to waste.

"We limit our decision to the case before us, as we have defined it. The argument is earnestly presented that the government by virtue of its ownership of the dam and power plant could not establish a steel mill and make and sell steel products, or a factory to manufacture clothing or shoes for the public, and thus attempt to make its ownership of energy, generated at its dam, a means of carrying on competitive commercial enterprises and thus drawing to the federal government the conduct and management of business having no relation to the purposes for which the federal government was established.

Viewed Key to Wide Rule of U. S. Utilities.

from the other TVA dams being built they were encouraged to believe that the broader aspects of the collectivist experiment in the Tennessee valley, which Socialist Norman Thomas has pronounced acceptably Socialist, eventually will be held unconstitutional.

Court Divided 8 to 1.

The decision was rendered by a court divided 8 to 1. The sole dissenter was Justice McReynolds, who in a vigorous opinion said that "under the thin mask of disposing of property" government by virtue of the majority ruling can enter upon vast projects to compete with private initiative and drive competitors out of business.

Justice Brandeis read a separate opinion on behalf of himself and Justices Roberts, Stone, and Cardozo, which concurred in the conclusion of the court on the constitutional question, but disputed the right of the preferred stockholders of the Alabama Power company to bring the suit.

Stockholders Bring Suit.

The suit was brought by preferred stockholders of the Alabama Power company, who attacked the validity of a contract under which the TVA purchased transmission lines from the company for the distribution of power developed at the Wilson dam.

The Hughes opinion held that the preferred stockholders had the right to sue, but that the scope of the case is limited to the question of the disposition of power from the Wilson dam solely. The Wilson dam was built, said the opinion, in war time for purposes of manufacturing nitrate for munitions in the national defense and for improvement of navigation of the Tennessee river, which are entirely constitutional ends.

The government, the court held, possesses the authority to dispose of the power it develops at the Wilson dam, possesses it under the constitutionally delegated power to dispose of government property.

Power Held U. S. Property.

Electric power developed by the government is government property. The government is empowered to dispose of all the power it develops at Wilson dam and to dispose of it by the acquisition of transmission lines for a wide distribution.

That far the court was willing to go, but no farther at this time. It expressly refrained from passing on the constitutionality of the TVA act as a whole or the collectivist project it represents.

"We express no opinion," said the court, "as to the validity of such an effort, as to the status of any other dam or power development in the Tennessee valley, whether connected with or apart from the Wilson dam, or as to the validity of the Tennessee valley act or the claims made in the pronouncements and program of the authority apart from the questions we have discussed in relation to the particular provisions of the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, affecting the Alabama Power company."

"Business" Not Involved.

Mr. Hughes emphasized that the question before the court was simply that of the acquisition of the transmission lines for disposal of the power. The question of the government engaging in the utility business was not involved in this case. Until that issue is raised in some other case the court will not pass on it.

In his dissenting opinion Justice McReynolds refused to close his eyes to the real purpose, under guise of a constitutional power, to put the government into the utility business.

"Considering," he said, "the consistent rulings of this court through many years, it is not difficult for me to conclude that petitioners have presented a justiciable controversy which we must decide. In Smith vs. Kansas City Title company, 255 U. S. 180, the grounds for jurisdiction were far less substantial than those here disclosed. We may not with propriety avoid disagreeable duties by lightly forsaking long respected precedents and established practice.

"Means Must Be Appropriate."

"Nor do I find serious difficulty with the notion that the United States by proper means and for legitimate ends, may dispose of water power or electricity honestly developed in connection with permissible improvement of navigation waters. But the means employed to that end must be reasonably appropriate in the circumstances. Under pretense of exercising granted power, they may not in fact undertake something not intrusted to them.

"Their mere ownership, e. g., of an iron mine would hardly permit the construction of smelting works followed by entry into the business of manufacturing and selling hardware, albeit the ore could thus be disposed of, private dealers discomfited and artificial prices publicized.

"Here, therefore, we should consider the truth of petitioners' charge that, while pretending to act within their powers to improve navigation, the United States, through corporate agencies, are really seeking to accomplish what they have no right to undertake — the business of developing, distributing, and selling electric power. If the record sustains this charge, we ought so to declare and decree accordingly."

McReynolds Takes Issue.

The transmission line contract, asserted Justice McReynolds, must be viewed in the light shed on the whole project by the "announced purpose" of the TVA directors who "with 50 million dollars at their command . . . started out to gain control of the electrical business in large areas and to dictate sale prices. The power at Wilson dam was the instrumentality seized upon for carrying the plan into effect."

The majority opinion said that the court could not pass on abstract questions. With this Justice McReynolds took emphatic issue.

"No abstract question," he said, "is before us; on the contrary, the matter is of enormous practical importance to petitioners—their whole investment is at stake. Properly understood, the pronouncements, policies, and program of the authority illuminate the action taken. They help to reveal the serious interference with the petitioners' rights.

Sees Property in Danger.

"Their property was in danger of complete destruction under a considered program commenced by an agency of the national government with vast resources subject to its discretion and backed by other agencies likewise intrusted with discretionary use of huge sums. The threat of competition by such an opponent was appalling. The will to prevail was evident. No private concern could reasonably hope to withstand such force."

Justice McReynolds quoted at length from the TVA official reports to establish that the purpose was quite different from a mere disposal of surplus power.

"The record," he said, "leaves no room for reasonable doubt that the primary purpose was to put the federal government into the business of distributing and selling electric power throughout certain large districts, to expel the power companies which had long serviced them, and to control the market therein.

Termed "Pretentious Scheme."

"A government instrumentality had entered upon a pretentious scheme to provide a 'yardstick' of the fairness of rates charged by private owners, and to attain 'no less a goal than the electrification of America.'

"'When we carry this program into every town and city and village and every farm throughout the country we will have written the greatest chapter in the economic, industrial, and social development of America.' Any reasonable doubt concerning the purpose and result of the contract of Jan. 4 or of the design of the authority should be dispelled by examination of its reports for 1934 and 1935."

The justice had no tolerance for the argument that the transmission lines were merely to facilitate disposal of surplus power.

"But to facilitate disposal," he said, "was the real purpose; obviously the thing to be facilitated was carrying on business by use of the purchased property.

"Under the guise of disposition something wholly different was to be accomplished—devotion of electric power to purposes beyond the sphere of proper federal action, an unlawful goal. There is no plausible claim that such a contract was either necessary or desirable merely to bring about the sale of property.

"This court has often affirmed that facts, not artifice, control its conclusions. The agency has stated quite clearly the end in view: 'This public operation is to serve as a yardstick by which to measure the fairness of electric rates.' 'The TVA power policy was not designed or limited with a view to the marketing of the power produced and available at Muscle Shoals.' 'In formulating and going forward with the power policy the board was considering that policy as a permanent and independent commercial function.'"

Quotes from TVA Report.

Justice McReynolds quoted exhaustively from the TVA reports to establish the collectivist character of the enterprise and then concluded:

"If under the thin mask of disposing of property the United States can enter the business of generating, transmitting, and selling power as, when and wherever some board may specify, with the definite design to accomplish ends wholly beyond the sphere marked out for them by the constitution, an easy way has been found for breaking down the limitations heretofore supposed to guarantee protection against aggression."

Text of Dissenting Opinion on TVA, Delivered by Justice McReynolds

"Considering the consistent rulings of this court through many years, it is not difficult for me to conclude that petitioners have presented a justiciable controversy which we must decide.

In Smith vs. Kansas City Title company, 255 U. S. 180, the grounds for jurisdiction were far less substantial than those here disclosed. We may not with propriety avoid disagreeable duties by lightly forsaking long respected precedents and established practice.

"Nor do I find serious difficulty with the notion that the United States, by proper means and for legitimate ends, may dispose of water power or electricity honestly developed in connection with permissible improvement of navigable waters.

Means Must Be Appropriate.

"But the means employed to that end must be reasonably appropriate in the circumstances. Under pretense of exercising granted power, they may not in fact undertake something not intrusted to them. Their mere ownership, e. g., of an iron mine would hardly permit the construction of smelting works followed by entry into the business of manufacturing and selling hardware, albeit the ore could thus be disposed of, private dealers discomfited and artificial prices publicized.

"Here, therefore, we should consider the truth of petitioners' charge that, while pretending to act within their powers to improve navigation, the United States, through corporate agencies, are really seeking to accomplish what they have no right to undertake—the business of developing, distributing, and selling electric power. If the record sustains this charge, we ought so to declare and decree accordingly.

View Called "Too Narrow."

"The Circuit Court of Appeals took too narrow a view of the purpose and effect of the contract of Jan. 4, 1934. That went far beyond the mere acquisition of transmission lines for proper use in disposing of power legitimately developed.

"Like all contracts, it must be considered as a whole, illumined by surrounding circumstances. Especial attention should be given to the deliberately announced purpose of directors, clothed with extraordinary discretion and supplied with enormous sums of money.

"With 50 million dollars at their command they started out to gain control of the electrical business in large areas and to dictate sale prices. The power at Wilson dam was the instrumentality seized upon for carrying the plan into effect.

"While our primary concern is with this contract, it cannot be regarded as a mere isolated effort to dispose of property, and certainly to consider only those provisions which directly relate to Alabama Power company is not permissible. We must give attention to the whole transaction—its antecedents, purpose, and effect—as well as the terms employed.

No Abstract Question.

"No abstract question is before us; on the contrary, the matter is of enormous practical importance to petitioners—their whole investment is at stake. Properly understood, the pronouncements, policies, and program of the authority illuminate the action taken.

"They help to reveal the serious interference with the petitioners' rights. Their property was in danger of complete destruction under a considered program commenced by an agency of the national government with vast resources subject to its discretion and backed by other agencies likewise intrusted with discretionary use of huge sums.

"The threat of competition by such an opponent was appalling. The will to prevail was evident. No private concern could reasonably hope to withstand such force.

"The Tennessee river, with headwaters in West Virginia and North Carolina, crosses Tennessee on a southwesterly course, enters Alabama near Chattanooga, flows westerly across the northern part of that state to the northeast corner of Mississippi. There it turns northward, passes through Tennessee and Kentucky, empties into the Ohio forty miles above Cairo.

Total Length 900 Miles.

"The total length is 900 miles; the drainage basin approximates 40,000 square miles. The volume of water is extremely variable; commercial navigation is of moderate importance.

"At Muscle Shoals, near Florence, Ala. [20 miles east of the Mississippi line and 15 south of Tennessee], a succession of falls constitutes serious interference with navigation; also presents possibilities for development of power on a large scale.

"During and immediately after the world war a great dam was constructed there by the United States, intended primarily for generation of power. Production of electricity soon commenced. Some of this was devoted to governmental purposes; much was sold, delivery being made at or near the dam.

Describes Developments.

"During the last 30 years several corporations have been engaged in the growing business of developing electric energy and distributing this to customers over a network of interconnected lines extending throughout Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

"At great expense they gradually built up extensive businesses and acquired properties of very large value. All operated under state supervision.

"Through stock ownership or otherwise they came under general control of the Commonwealth & Southern corporation. Among the associates were the Alabama Power company which serviced Alabama; the Mississippi company which serviced Mississippi, and the Tennessee company which operated in eastern Tennessee.

"Huge sums were invested in these enterprises by thousands of persons in many states. Apparently, the companies were diligently developing their several systems and responding to the demands of the territories which they covered.

Start of Operations.

"In 1933 operations began under an imposing program for somewhat improving Tennessee river navigation and especially for developing water power along its whole course at public expense.

"This plan involved conversion of water power into electricity for wide distribution throughout the valley and adjacent territory. Its development was intrusted to the Tennessee Valley Authority, a federal corporation wholly controled by the United States.

"This promptly took over the Wilson dam and began work upon the Wheeler dam, twenty miles up the river, and the Pickwick dam, some forty miles lower down.

"It also commenced construction of Norris dam across Clinch river, a branch of the Tennessee, 200 miles above the Wilson dam.

"All these, with probable additions, were to be connected by transmission wires and electric energy distributed from them to millions of people in many states. Public service corporations were to be brought to terms or put out of business. At least 75 million dollars of public funds was early appropriated for expenditure by the directors; and other governmental agencies in control of vast sums were ready to lend aid.

FORBIDDEN FIELD

"Readily to understand the issues now before us one must be mindful of these circumstances.

"The trial court made findings of fact which fill more than 60 printed pages. They are not controverted and for present purposes are accepted; upon them the cause stands for decision. They are much quoted below. Plainly they indicate, and that court, in effect, declared the contract of Jan. 4 was a deliberate step into a forbidden field taken with definite purpose to continue the trespass.

"Nothing suggests either necessity or desirability of entrance into this agreement solely to obtain solvent customers willing to pay full value for all surplus power generated at Wilson dam. Apparently there was ample opportunity for such sales deliveries to be made at or near the dam. No attempt was made to show otherwise. The definite end in view was something other than orderly disposition.

Answer "Series of Denials."

"The authority's answer to the complaint is little more than a series of denials. It does not even allege that the contract of Jan. 4 was necessary for ready disposal of power, or that thereby better prices could be obtained, or that no buyer was ready, able and willing to take the dam for full value, or that the board expected to derive adequate return from the business to be acquired.

"No sort of explanation of the contract is presented—why it was entered into or whether profitable use probably could be made of the property. And I find in the authority's brief no serious attempt to justify the purchases because necessary or in fact an advantageous method for disposing of property. Nothing in the findings lends support to any such view.

"The record leaves no room for reasonable doubt that the primary purpose was to put the federal government into the business of distributing and selling electric power throughout certain large districts, to expel the power companies which had long serviced them, and to control the market therein.

"A government instrumentality had entered upon a pretentious scheme to provide a 'yardstick' of the fairness of rates charged by private owners, and to attain 'no less a goal than the electrification of America.'

Cites TVA Reports.

"'When we carry this program into every town and city and village and every farm throughout the country we shall have written the greatest chapter in the economic, industrial and social development of America.' Any reasonable doubt concerning the purpose and result of the contract of Jan. 4 or of the design of the authority should be dispelled by examination of its reports for 1934 and 1935:

"'The conception was to establish an independent network comparable in all respects with the electric utility system serving the area, with which TVA sought to establish interchange arrangements both as outlets for its own power and to use existing systems as a stand-by or back-up service.'

Seeks Complete Control.

"'The TVA plan as conceived and in process of execution contemplates complete and exclusive control and jurisdiction over all power sites on the Tennessee river and tributaries.'

"'The TVA policy contemplates full corporate discretion by TVA in developing, executing and extending its electric system and service within transmission limits.'

"'This policy contemplated service utility in type and covered not only generation but transmission and distribution [preferably through public or nonprofit agencies, if available] both wholesale and retail. That is, moreover, implicit in both the Jan. 4 contract and the now terminated Aug. 9 contract.'

REAL PURPOSE HIDDEN

"The challenged contract is defended upon the theory that the 'federal government may dispose of the surplus water power necessarily created by Wilson dam and may authorize generation of electric energy and acquisition of transmission lines as means of facilitating this disposal.'

"But to facilitate disposal was not the real purpose; obviously the thing to be facilitated was carrying on business by use of the purchased property.

"Under the guise of disposition something wholly different was to be accomplished—devotion of electric power to purposes beyond the sphere of proper federal action, an unlawful goal. There is no plausible claim that such a contract was either necessary or desirable merely to bring about the sale of property.

"This court has often affirmed that facts, not artifice, control its conclusions. The agency has stated quite clearly the end in view: 'This public operation is to serve as a yardstick by which to measure the fairness of electric rates.' 'The TVA power policy was not designed or limited with a view to the marketing of the power produced and available at Muscle Shoals.' 'In formulating and going forward with the power policy the board was considering that policy as a permanent and independent commercial function.'

Complete Survey Not Needed.

"For present purposes a complete survey of relevant circumstances preceding the contract of Jan. 4 and all its consequences is not essential. The pleadings and findings fairly outline the situation. What follows is mainly quoted or derived from them.

"The act of May 18, 1933, created the Tennessee Valley authority as a body corporate 'for the purpose of maintaining and operating the properties now owned by the United States in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Alabama, in the interest of the national defense and for agricultural and industrial development, and to improve navigation in the Tennessee river and to control the destructive flood waters in the Tennessee river and Mississippi river basins.'

"It provided; a board of three directors 'shall direct the exercise of all the powers of the corporation,' and 'is authorized to make alterations, modifications or improvements in existing plants and facilities, and to construct new plants'; and to 'produce, distribute, and sell electric power as herein particularly specified.'

Powers of Corporation.

"The corporation 'shall have such powers herein specifically conferred upon the corporation'; 'to acquire real estate for the construction of dams, reservoirs, transmission lines, power houses, and other structures, and navigation projects at any point along the Tennessee river, or any of its tributaries.'

"Also, the board is 'hereby empowered and authorized to sell the surplus power not used in its operations, and for operation of locks and other works generated by it, to states, counties, municipalities, corporations, partnerships, or individuals, according to the policies hereinafter set forth; and to carry out said authority, the board is authorized to enter into contracts for such sale for a term not exceeding twenty years.'

"'In order to promote and encourage the fullest possible use of electric light and power on farms within reasonable distance of any of its transmission lines the board in its discretion shall have power to construct transmission lines to farms and small villages that are not otherwise supplied with electricity at reasonable rates, and to make such rules and regulations governing such sale and distribution of such electric power as in its judgment may be just and equitable.'

Power Policy Set Up.

"'One of the first corporate acts of TVA after its organization was to formulate and announce a power policy to govern the commercial distribution of electric power by TVA. The evidence establishes the fact that the board from the outset has considered that it has general corporate discretion as to the establishment and extension of its electric power policy.

"'In establishing a power policy the board was not primarily considering merely the question of disposal of power produced at Muscle Shoals no longer required for government purposes as a result of overbuilding, obsolescence of plants or termination of war purpose.

"'Nor was it considering disposal of prospective increases in electric power to be unavoidably created in excess of some governmental requirement. It was considering the matter from the standpoint of the successful establishment and permanent operation of an independent and well rounded government owned electric distribution system and the general civic, social, and industrial planning and development of the Tennessee valley region as a whole.

Schedules Announced.

"'Under date of Aug. 25, 1933, TVA announced its power policy, indicating both the initial stage of its development and certain later steps originally determined upon. . . . This power policy had not been rescinded or abandoned or modified at the time of submission of this cause.'

"'In September, 1933, the authority announced its wholesale and retail rate schedules which are shown by the evidence to be materially lower than corresponding schedules of the existing utilities in the area. Following this action numerous municipalities in the area began to make efforts to construct municipal systems with which to distribute TVA current and Public Works administration [called PWA] gave assurances of favorable consideration of applications for loans to that end.'

Contract Is Negotiated.

"Under such circumstances, Commonwealth and Southern corporation negotiated the Jan. 4 contract for its operating subsidiaries—Alabama Power company, Georgia Power company, Mississippi Power company, and Tennessee Electric Power company.

"This recited that the Alabama company, the Mississippi company, and the Tennessee company desired to sell, and the authority desired to purchase certain land, buildings and physical properties devoted to the generation, transmission and distribution of electricity, together with certain franchises, contracts and going business.

"The Alabama company agreed to sell for 1 million dollars all of its low tension [44kv or lower] transmission lines, substations [including the high tension station at Decatur and the Sheffield steam plant station] and all rural lines and rural distribution systems in five Alabama counties and parts of two others. [These counties are in northwestern Alabama and lie on both sides of the Tennessee river for eighty miles or more.]

AGREES TO TRANSFER

"The Mississippi company, in consideration of $850,000, agreed to transfer all of its transmission and distribution lines, substations, generating plants, and other property in Pontotoc, Lee, Itawamba, Union, Benton, Tippah, Prentiss, Tishomingo, and Alcorn counties [except one dam site in Tishamingo county], state of Mississippi, used in connection with the generation, transmission, distribution, or sale of electrical energy. These counties are the northeastern section of the state, a territory 60 miles square.

"For $900,000 the Tennessee company agreed to convey its transmission and distribution lines, substations, distribution systems and other properties used in connection with the transmission, distribution, and sale of electrical energy in Anderson, Campbell, Morgan, and Scott counties, East Tennessee, and 'all of the 66 KV transmission line from Cove Creek to Knoxville.' [These counties are in the mountains northward from Knoxville within a radius of about 60 miles. They lie northeast of Muscle Shoals and some points therein are much more than a hundred miles from Wilson dam. They have a population of 86,000.]

Machinery Is Included.

"The power companies agreed that 'any conveyance of property shall include not only the physical property, easements, and rights of way but shall also include all machinery, equipment, tools, and working supplies set forth in the respective exhibits, and all franchises, contracts, and going business relating to the use of any of said properties.'

"Also 'to transfer or secure the transfer of said franchises, contracts, and going business, and to transfer said properties with all present customers attached, so far as they are able.' Also 'that during the period of this contract none of said companies will sell electric energy to any municipality, corporation, partnership, association, or individual in any portion of the above described counties or parts thereof in Alabama, Tennessee, and Mississippi, etc.'

"The authority agreed not to sell 'electric energy outside of the specified counties to the customers of nonutilities supplied by the power companies.'

Provide Sale Coöperation.

"Other covenants provided for interchange of electric energy between the contracting parties and for the cooperation in the sale of electric appliances throughout the entire territory served by the power companies.

"'Power companies covenant and agree that after the expiration of this agreement the interchange agreement then in effect will be maintained by power companies for an additional period [not exceeding eighteen months] sufficient to permit authority to construct its own transmission facilities for serving all of the territory which it is then serving in whole or in part with power obtained at such interchange points.'

Agreement on Exchange.

"'Power companies agree to have available at all times for exchange, at each point of exchange, energy and capacity to supply the entire demands of customers served by authority from such points of exchange, subject to the limitations as to transmission capacity set forth in section 10 [H] hereof; provided, that the maximum amount which authority shall be entitled to demand at all points of exchange shall be 70,000 k. w.'

"Prior to the agreement for sale the Alabama company had derived $750,000 gross annual revenue from its properties located within the 'ceded area.' This district had a population of 190,000, and the company had therein 10,000 individual customers—approximately one-tenth of all those directly served by it.

"'The lines transferred by the Mississippi Power company served directly 4,000 customers in nine counties, having a total population of 184,000. When this cause began, the Mississippi properties were being operated by TVA, and rural lines were in process of extension by it in both Mississippi and Alabama.

All Under TVA Control.

"'All of the electric properties and facilities covered by the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, . . . were contracted for by TVA for the purpose of continuing and enlarging the utility service for which they were used by the respective power companies.'

"'The operation of a commercial utility service by TVA and the wholesaling and retailing by TVA of electricity in the area served by the Alabama Power company is not and will not be in aid of the regulation of navigation or national defense or other governmental function in so far as any plan, purpose, or activity of the TVA or the United States disclosed on this record would indicate.'

"Answering the petitioners' complaint, Alabama company admitted 'that the public statements of TVA indicated the program therein alleged; and the directors of respondent company considered that to vest such an agency as therein alleged with unlimited power and access to public funds, in a program of business competition and public ownership promotion in the area served by respondent company, would in effect destroy this respondent's property; and such conclusion on its part was the principal inducement for it to enter into the contracts of Jan. 4 and Aug. 9, 1935, and respondent company thereby was and will be enabled to salvage a larger amount of its property than it could have done by competition.'

Competition Threat.

"Also 'that under the circumstances of threatened competition, directed or controled by TVA as averred therein, this respondent agreed to the sale of certain of its transmission lines and property, and entered into the contract dated Jan. 4, 1934. . . . Respondent company admits that at and before the execution of the contract the threat was made to use federal funds to duplicate the facilities of respondent which would result in competition with rates not attainable by or permissible to this respondent, and such rates would be stipulated, controled, and regulated by TVA.'

FINDING OF TRIAL COURT

"As a matter of law the trial court found:

"'The function intended by TVA under the evidence in relation to service, utility in type, in the area ceded by the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, transcends the function of conservation or disposition of government property, involves continuing service and commercial functions by the government to fill contracts not governmental in origin or character.'

"'Performance of the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, would involve substantial loss and injury to the Alabama Power company, including, inter alia, the loss or abandonment of franchises, licenses, going business and service area supporting its general system and power facilities, and unless resisted would tend to invite a progressive encroachment on its service area by the Tennessee Valley authority.'

Cites Talk of Authority.

"'Congress has no constitutional authority to authorize Tennessee Valley authority or any other federal agency to undertake the operation, essentially permanent in character, of a utility system for profit, involving the generation, transmission and commercial distribution of electricity within state domain, having no reasonable relation to a lawful governmental use.

"'The contract of Jan. 4, 1934, expressly provided for the transfer of all or substantially all of the lines and properties of the Alabama Power company for the service of the ceded area, included transmission lines, rural distribution systems and certain urban distribution systems, and contemplated the eventual transfer of fourteen urban distribution systems.

"'This contract, expressly contemplating service of the ceded area by the Tennessee Valley authority with electricity to be generated or purchased by the Tennessee Valley authority for that purpose, was in furtherance of illegal proprietary operations by the Tennessee Valley authority in violation of the federal constitution and void. The contract was accordingly ultra vires and void as to the Alabama Power company.'

Sees Peril to Business.

"Having made exhaustive findings of fact and law the trial court entered a decree annulling the Jan. 4 contract and enjoining the Alabama Power company from performing it. The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, upon the theory that the authority was making proper arrangements for sale of surplus power from the Wilson dam. The injunction was continued.

"I think the trial court reached the correct conclusion and that its decree should be approved. If under the thin mask of disposing of property the United States can enter the business of generating, transmitting and selling power as, when, and wherever some board may specify, with the definite design to accomplish ends wholly beyond the sphere marked out for them by the constitution, an easy way has been found for breaking down the limitations heretofore supposed to guarantee protection against aggression."

SEEK TO SPEED TVA'S POWER LINES TO CITIES

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Heartened by today's Supreme court decision on the TVA, advocates in Knoxville, Chattanooga, and Memphis planned to speed efforts to make TVA power available in those cities as quickly as possible.

The TVA stepped confidently ahead with its dam building program, and an early announcement was expected here on the construction of a new storage dam on the Hiwassee river near Murphy, N. C.

but we deem it to be irrelevant to the issue here.

"The government is not using the water power at the Wilson dam to establish any industry or business.

"It is not using the energy generated at the dam to manufacture commodities of any sort for the public.

"The government is disposing of the energy itself, which simply is the mechanical energy, incidental to falling water at the dam, converted into the electric energy which is susceptible of transmission.

"The question here is simply as to the acquisition of the transmission lines as a facility for the disposal of that energy.

"And the government rightly conceded at the bar, in substance, that it was without constitutional authority to acquire or dispose of such energy except as it comes into being in the operation of works constructed in the exercise of some power delegated to the United States.

Silent on Other Dams.

"As we have said, these transmission lines lead directly from the dam, which has been lawfully constructed, and the question of the constitutional right of the government to acquire or operate local or urban distribution systems is not involved.

"We express no opinion as to the validity of such an effort, as to the status of any other dam or power development in the Tennessee valley, whether connected with or apart from the Wilson dam, or as to the validity of the Tennessee Valley Authority act or of the claims made in the pronouncements and program of the authority apart from the questions we have discussed in relation to the particular provisions of the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, affecting the Alabama Power company.

"The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

"Affirmed."

TVA DECISION OPENS DOOR TO ALL PLANS, NEW DEALERS ASSERT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—New Dealers and TVA boosters were delighted by the Supreme court's decision today and generally interpreted it as a sweeping indorsement of the organization's activities. TVA foes, not having had time to study the opinion, deferred comment but nevertheless found hope in the fact that the court confined itself to one dam and one contract.

Most jubilant of the New Dealers was Senator George W. Norris [Rad., Neb.], whose worship of the TVA rivals his antipathy for the Supreme court.

"It seems to me that the Supreme court's decision was the only logical conclusion that unbiased legal minds could reach," Norris declared. "Of all the laws passed since I've been in congress there never has been one that was more clearly constitutional than the TVA act. Of course I'm delighted that the Supreme court has sustained the law."

Senator Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.], another vociferous New Dealer, declared: "The Supreme court's decision upholding the TVA all along the line is the greatest news ever published for Tennessee and our surrounding states."

Edward Foley, chief counsel for the Public Works administration, interpreted the decision as removing all danger of a successful legal attack on other New Deal power projects, such as Grand Coulee and Bonneville on the Columbia river, Fort Peck on the Missouri, and the Passamaquoddy tide harnessing project.

Representative John Rankin [Dem., Tenn.], co-author with Senator Norris of the act, introduced the majority opinion into the record. "We may now move forward with our program to reduce electric light and power rates to present consumers and to electrify every farm home in America," Rankin declared.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch of the federal power commission also expressed the belief that the TVA decision "settled all questions of constitutionality of such federal power projects as Grand Coulee, Bonneville, and Fort Peck."

DEFENDER OF COURT GIVEN OVATION FOR SPEECH IN HOUSE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—At the moment the Supreme court was announcing its TVA decision today the house was giving an ovation to Representative E. E. Cox [Dem., Ga.], who voiced a stirring defense of the court's power to declare acts of congress unconstitutional.

Unaware of the high court's latest ruling on New Deal legislation, the house indicated an almost unanimous agreement with Cox's declaration that depriving the court of power to apply the constitutional test of acts of congress "would mean the concentration of all powers in Washington and the complete destruction of the states."

Cox, a Superior court judge in his state before he came to congress eleven years ago, asserted that foes of the court apparently took the position that the will of congress should be the supreme law of the land.

Criticism had been voiced of President Roosevelt for his remark, after the decision invalidating the NRA, that the country was being turned back to "horse and buggy" days, Cox said. But this remark was mild, compared to the comments of other Presidents after Supreme court decisions, he declared.

STATE RESTS IN PENNSYLVANIA LIBEL HEARING

Attorney General Final Witness in Own Suit.

Washington, Pa., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The commonwealth, in a surprise move, closed its case against the Philadelphia Inquirer this afternoon in the trial of the criminal libel suit brought by Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti.

The final witness for the prosecution was Margiotti himself, who was recalled for brief questioning and remained on the stand for two hours of vigorous cross-examination by Ralph B. Evans, chief of counsel for the Inquirer.

The attorney general brought suit on the basis of an article headed "Margiotti's Law Partners Plan Big Tax Fee Grab," which was published in the Inquirer on Sept. 29. It dealt wtih an alleged plan of attorneys to contract with county commissioners to collect delinquent personal property taxes for fees up to 40 per cent, and also charged that since Margiotti became attorney general "a record breaking galaxy of politico-legal satellites have been annexed to the state pay roll in sundry capacities and at immodest salaries."

Former Aid Given Big Salary.

Evans questioned the attorney general about the appointment of Edward Friedman, formerly of his law office, as deputy attorney general at $6,000 a year in alleged violation of regulations governing the pay and qualifications of attorneys on the state pay roll. Later Friedman was promoted to $7,500, although, the defense counsel told the attorney general, "he didn't even meet the minimum requirements for $6,000."

Margiotti argued that Gov. Earle had the right, in special cases, to disregard the state code and permit appointment at higher salaries. When Friedman's appointment came up, he said, it was approved because "I simply recommended it to the governor."

State Stands to Lose $80,000.

The attorney general also was questioned closely about his own service as private counsel in the F. J. Osterling estate case in Pittsburgh, which still is before the state Supreme court. Evans declared that if Margiotti won the case "your success would be to deprive the commonwealth of $80,000."

"Yet," Evans added, "you didn't assign counsel for the commonwealth."

"It never entered my mind," Margiotti replied. "And if I thought it made any difference I would have withdrawn from the case."

The attorney general, questioned about the size of fees, could not cite an instance where he or the department of justice had authorized payment of a fee of more than 5 per cent to a lawyer engaged in collecting back taxes for the state.

Slayer of Magazine Writer Gets 99 Years

Treasury Deficit Is Raised to More Than 5½ Billions

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—With virtually no debate, the United States senate today passed an appropriation bill aggregating $3,556,751,905 and increasing the prospective deficit for the 1936-'37 fiscal year to more than 5½ billions, a new all-time high.

To the independent offices bill of $879,751,905, which the house already had passed, the senate added a total appropriation of $2,237,000,000 for the payment of the soldiers' bonus and $440,000,000 to finance the New Deal's "soil conservation" and farm bounty program for the coming fiscal year.

Deficit 5,775 Millions.

This total appropriation of $3,556,751,905 represented an increase of $2,677,000,000 in the 1936-'37 deficit, the budget having provided for the independent offices appropriation of $879,751,905. To the $2,677,000,000 must be added the deficit of 1 billion 98 million estimated by President Roosevelt in his budget message and another estimated 2 billion dollars still to be appropriated for relief. This will bring the total deficit to approximately $5,775,000,000.

The bonus appropriation, provided in an amendment to the independent offices bill offered on the floor by Senator James F. Byrnes [Dem., S. C.], included $1,730,000,000 to cash the so-called baby bonds authorized to be paid the veterans by the recent bonus act and $507,000,000 to redeem bonds deposited by the secretary of the treasury with the United States government life insurance fund.

The secretary was directed, under the recent bonus act, to transfer these bonds to the life insurance fund because of money taken from that fund to make advances to veterans on their adjusted service certificates.

Bookkeeping Transaction.

Senator Byrnes said the appropriation to redeem the bonds was "a bookkeeping transaction" required by Controler General John R. McCarl and treasury officials, but nevertheless made it clear that it was an appropriation.

"Of course," he said, "I must say that this appropriation, in order to comply with the bookkeeping requirement of the treasury, must be carried in full in the bill. It means that in the years to come prior to the maturity of the bonds in 1945 there will exist no longer the necessity for making annual appropriations to redeem the bonds falling due in 1945."

Problem for Committee.

The only debate resulted from a question by Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah] as to whether the appropriations committee had given any consideration to the financial condition of the government or to means of raising the money to cash the veterans' bonds.

Senator Byrnes replied that this was a problem for the finance committee, of which Senator King is a member, and not for the appropriations committee.

Byrnes, however, previously had argued that the government was obligated to pay the veterans, and that borrowing the money at this time merely meant that the government was obligating itself to the investors instead of the veterans.

U. S. WATCHES FOR SMUGGLERS OF CANADA BUTTER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 17.—United States customs officers along the Canadian boundary are keeping a close watch on any possible attempts at smuggling butter from Canada into the United States. Farmers along the border territory coming into Montreal report that wagons are being stopped and searched thoroughly for possible butter loads.

The American market on butter is about 12 cents per pound above Canada prices. Exports are not possible owing to the 14 cents per pound duty and a further cent or two for shipping and other charges. The Montreal market on butter today was 23 cents to 23½ cents for No. 1 butter, most of which is storage butter, fresh production still being small. Last year considerable Canadian butter was smuggled into the United States, some placing the total at five million pounds. One arrest has already taken place, Robert Kriger being apprehended last week at Algonac, Mich., while seeking to smuggle 1,240 pounds of butter across the frozen St. Clair river.

William Schaaf Quizzed Again by Capt. Gilbert

William Schaaf, 43 years old, former financial secretary of the painters' union, was questioned yesterday at the state's attorney's office by Capt. Daniel Gilbert. He was ordered held for further questioning today. Schaaf was held for several days last December for questioning about the slaying of Mrs. Elsie Henneman, wife of George Henneman, a rival of Schaaf in union leadership. The grand jury, however, refused to indict Schaaf and he was released.

SEN. HOLT CALLS WPA A DISGRACE IN WEST VIRGINIA

Radical 'Baby' Astonishes His Colleagues.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.] — Senator Rush Holt, young West Virginia Radical who came into the senate as a darling of the New Deal, astonished his colleagues this afternoon by assailing the conduct of the Works Progress administration in his state. The WPA in West Virginia, he declared, is nothing but a political machine, and no man can get a relief job without the indorsement of his political boss.

Republicans have made many charges respecting politics, graft, and waste in the WPA, despite repeated assurances from President Roosevelt that politics had no place in relief. Holt, however, was the first Democrat and rabid New Dealer to admit and condemn the use of the 4 billion dollar boondoggling fund for political purposes.

Holt said he spoke as a friend of the administration when he declared that "the Works Progress administration under F. W. McCullough, the present administrator, is a disgrace to the state of West Virginia and to the WPA." If the administration continues along the present lines, he added, "it will do much to destroy the program and to destroy President Roosevelt, so that the Democrats cannot carry the state."

Holt declared that McCullough, whom he charged with being the head of "a 42 per cent loan shark company," had nothing in mind but using the Works Progress administration for the purpose of getting himself elected governor.

"He has used that machine and is using it today to build up a political carriage to carry him to the nomination," the 30 year old senator declared.

"He has told me with his own mouth that the 55,000 people employed in the Works Progress administration of West Virginia would make him governor of the state.

"How does this man administer the WPA in West Virginia? I will tell the senate how he administers it. If a man goes to get a job from any county he must get a letter from a political boss in that county. Right here on my desk I have his own letter showing the pay roll, and he recommended the various workers in each and every county of the state. In other words, it is not to give a person relief, but to put a few politicians into the administration of an act that was not meant for politicians."

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farm

By Frank Ridgway

Pipe Thawing Methods

Feb. 17, 1936.

THAWING out frozen water pipes has become a task generally among farmers this far north, where water is piped to tanks over the farm. The frost line has gone to unprecedented depths this winter, freezing pipes four feet or more under the surface. Until this season pipes buried as much as four feet in the ground had not been frozen in the last quarter of a century on many farms in the Chicago region.

The Tribune Experimental farm near Plano and Yorkville and other farms in this region have been successful in thawing out frozen pipes by using electricity. The Tribune farm's experience in thawing out 470 feet of frozen pipes was reported in this column yesterday.

T. L. Jones, who operates a central Illinois farm near Havana, Ill., writes: "I was interested in your account of the pipe freezing trouble which has occurred at the Tribune farm because we had similar trouble and were able to thaw out our pipes without digging by heating them with electricity.

"Any direct current electric welding machine may be used which has capacity enough for the size of the pipe involved. Our frozen water pipes were one inch galvanized iron, and we used a machine which produced 300 amperes at 40 volts. It takes at least a No. 2 copper cable to carry this current to the pipe. 'We warmed up about 400 feet of pipe at a time, fastening one terminal to the hydrant and the other to the connection at the pump. Two or three hours will usually do the job on smaller pipe."

George T. Walker of Petersburg, Ill., says he has been successful in thawing out frozen pipes in central Illinois with electricity. Where it is necessary to thaw out the ground over the pipes Mr. Walker uses coke. His plan is to keep the coke burning at night and the ground will be thawed out by morning so that the digging may be done in the daytime.

Where electricity is not available farmers must turn to other means of thawing out their pipes to avoid digging up the pipes covered with hard frozen earth. J. L. Snyder of Lafayette, Ind., says he thaws out frozen pipes by forcing brine into them under pressure.

His plan is to disconnect the frozen pipe from the pump and screw a cap over the open end. Before the cap is screwed on, a valve stem taken from an automobile tire is screwed into the center of the cap. It is necessary to drill a hole in the cap and provide it with threads for the valve stem. When the cap with the valve stem is ready to screw on, pour several handfuls of salt into the frozen pipe. With an air pump the pipe can be filled with air, which forces the brine into contact with the ice in the pipe. It's necessary to pump fresh air into the pipe from time to time to keep the pressure up, according to Mr. Snyder.

"The air," he said, "will drive the salt through the pipe and thus melt the ice, and in that way you will overcome the difficulty. It will probably take several hours for the salt to go through if the pipe is of any great length. This plan worked over here in Indiana, and we believe it will do the same in Illinois."

Experience with frozen pipes as a result of the deep freeze this winter will encourage farmers either to sink their pipes down about five or six feet below the surface or to cover them with a thick layer of manure before extreme cold weather sets in next winter.

POLISH PREMIER HITS WAR ON JEW; ASKS TOLERANCE

Threatens Agitators with Severe Punishment.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Feb. 17.—Premier Marjan Zyndram-Koscialkowski today vigorously denounced anti-Semitism in Poland in a speech to parliament.

The premier attacked both the agents of the communist internationale, who, he said, are trying to stir up class hatred, and the Nationalist party, which "is utilizing the present economic distress to rouse the population against the Jews." He said the government would fight both groups with equal severity.

Urges Nation to Unite.

"The people must unite in working to improve their own welfare since Poland needs to consolidate her forces because her two large neighbors [Russia and Germany] are both arming feverishly," he said. "The security of all citizens, regardless of creed or nationality, is the cornerstone of legal order in the country."

The Roman Catholic church has entered the controversy between the Jews and the Poles regarding the bill before parliament which would abolish the kosher method of slaughtering animals.

According to the Catholic press agency, the official mouthpiece of the church in Poland, the time has now arrived to abolish Jewish control of the meat industry. A statement will be published tomorrow.

Statement Assails Jews.

"Bitter fighting between the Jews and Poles has become more frequent and in the Polish community a strong wave of anti-Semitism has developed," the statement will say. "The chief causes of the deplorable situation are the economic crisis and the strangle hold the Jews have obtained in all branches of industry and commerce.

"The ritual killing of animals has enabled the Jewish community to derive an income amounting to many millions of dollars annually by imposing a special tax on all meat consumers, irrespective of whether they are Jews or Christians. Through propagating the idea of the sacredness of the ritual slaughter methods, the meat industry has fallen into the hands of Jews who now ask support from the Jewish religion.

"The church denounces the kosher ritual as a barbaric method of torturing animals. The Polish communities are now aroused and demand the application of humane principles more in keeping with this century when public opinion revolts against all forms of torture, whether it applies to human beings or animals.

Insist Ritual Is Not Sacred.

"Our church authorities have made a deep study of the Talmud, and also of the Bible, and nothing is contained in either about the fantastic methods or ceremonies employed by the kosher killers in destroying animals for food. The Jewish claim that the ritual is sacred is unfounded.

"The Jews are again crying anti-Semitism, and blaming the Catholic clergy for not defending the Jews in the name of Christianity and Christian ethics. However, the Jews themselves are not blameless for the situation which exists in Poland today. It is sufficient for us to recall the names of Polish students who have been killed by the Jews.

"In order to allay anti-Semitic feeling and prevent future riots and excesses, the Catholic church favors the segregation of Jewish students in schools and universities. We believe the rearing of Jewish children is bad and makes them prone to adopt radical doctrins. Proof for this opinion is the frequent trials of communists in Poland, where a majority of the defendants are Jews. We also call attention to the fact that Polish Jewry is an avowed enemy of the Catholic religion in Poland and that Jews are behind the bolshevik and Socialist forces which are attacking our church."

PREPARE TO REOPEN MINNEAPOLIS PLANT; PICKETS REGATHERED

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—A move to resume operations in the Strutwear Knitting company, center of labor disputes since last August, was made today as officials of the firm revealed that a few of the knitting machines had been started.

At the same time pickets assembled outside, their number reduced by the severity of 18 below zero weather, but still bent on keeping the company from operating.

BANKER GRANTED 1ST DIVORCE HERE UNDER NEW LAW

Support for 2 Years Is Held 'Desertion.'

Cook county's first divorce was granted yesterday under the recently enacted law which enables either husband or wife to obtain a divorce for desertion after they have been separated for two years by a separate maintenance decree.

The divorce was granted by Judge Rudolph Desort of the Superior court to Daniel Minge Rives, 49 years old, president of the First National bank of Morris, Ill., and former Chicago banker, who was suing Mrs. Elizabeth H. Rives, 48 years old, of Memphis, Tenn.

The courts here had jurisdiction in the case because Mrs. Rives obtained a separate maintenance order here in 1929 when she and Rives both were Chicago residents.

Couple Separated Since 1927.

Rives testified yesterday under questioning of his attorney, Harry X. Cole, that they were married in Memphis in 1908 and separated when he came to Chicago in 1927 to take a position as cashier of the Lake View Trust and Savings bank.

Two years later Mrs. Rives obtained the separate maintenance decree in a hearing before Judge Sabath. She was awarded alimony of $100 a month, which later was reduced to $50 a month.

Rives took advantage of the new law which went into effect last July and on Nov. 7, 1935, filed suit for divorce. Mrs. Rives filed a cross bill under the same law.

Wife Also Seeks Decree.

In yesterday's hearing Mrs. Rives asked the court to award the divorce to her. This petition was countered by Attorney Cole, who told the court that Rives urged his wife to file suit for divorce under the new law, but that she had refused and waited until after he filed his action.

"The fact that my client filed first makes Mrs. Rives the deserting party," Attorney Cole contended.

Under a court settlement Rives is to pay his wife alimony at his present rate of $50 a month, to assume a $70 medical bill contracted by her, and to give her a cemetery lot.

BUILD $800,000 SLUM CLEARANCE WITHOUT A SLUM

Stamford, Conn., Amused at Federal Project.

Stamford, Conn., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Boondoggling, in the opinion of many citizens of this suburban city, is about to reach a climax here with the erection of an $800,000 slum clearance apartment house where "there are no slums to clear."

This city was chosen for the $800,000 slum clearance expenditure because, as Charles E. Pynchon, chief of research and information of the federal housing division, said: "You citizens of Stamford have been fortunate in having a mayor with great vision and perseverance. Through his untiring effort the government at Washington was induced to build this project."

Close Friend of Cummings.

The mayor of Stamford is Alfred N. Phillips Jr., Democrat, close personal friend of United States Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, who at the start of his political career was one time mayor of Stamford. The city's largest park is named Cummings park. It was named at the suggestion of Mayor Phillips.

"Because most of the cities which have asked the PWA for housing projects were faced with definite slums, it was difficult for us to concede the need for such a project in your city," Mr. Pynchon told the local citizens. "Because Mayor Phillips and your other officials presented the case of Stamford so ably in Washington we were finally convinced that a housing project in this city was desirable in order to prevent the deterioration of any section and to maintain in the dwellings of the industrial workers of Stamford the fine standards of residence for which this city is known."

Ickes Sees Good "Investment."

Secretary Harold Ickes expressed it as his belief that the government is making a worthwhile social investment here and that time will substantiate this policy.

While the 60,000 inhabitants of Stamford, most of whom live in detached houses and none of whom live in "slum conditions," look on with a high degree of amusement at the government's expensive attempt to keep the slums away from here, workmen are busy building the model apartment.

Plans for the project, the first such in Connecticut and the third in New England, call for ten building units divided among three story walk-up apartments and one and two story row houses, making available 156 living units.

FORBIDS UNION RECRUITING BY WPA FOREMEN

On being told that federal Works Progress administration foremen have been using their authority to force workers to join labor unions, on a commission basis, Ralph H. Burke, deputy WPA administrator for Illinois issued a warning yesterday that such practices will result in dismissal of these foremen.

"Any WPA supervisory employé accepting of money or other remuneration in connection with employment of workers, or using official position to force workers to join or contribute to the support of any organization, will be summarily dismissed," read placards posted at all WPA projects.

Mr. Burke said that while WPA has no objection to its workers joining a union, he believes that project foremen should keep hands off the matter.

Although WPA is paying the relief commission, at the rate of $156,000 a year for rent and service at 1319 South Michigan avenue the music and theater project headquarters has been transferred from there to 343 South Dearborn street, the writers' project to 19 South Wells street, and the art project headquarters to 433 East Erie street.

Officials representing the boondoggling projects asserted they had been requested to move from the building at 1319 South Michigan avenue, because of "lack of space" though the structure contains 302,000 square feet.

Baron's Son Called Work Undignified, Wife Charges

Her husband believed work was undignified and "preferred to wait for his father's estate," Mrs. Fay von Richtenberg, 25 years old, 4521 North Malden street, charged yesterday in a divorce suit filed in the Superior court against Wilhelm Joachim von Richtenberg of Whittier, Cal., son of a German baron. The couple married in November, 1932, and Mrs. Von Richtenberg charges her husband deserted her on June 1, 1934.

The Necessity of Treating a Cold Promptly and Internally!

The "Common Cold" is nothing to take lightly. It takes a greater toll in life, in health, in time lost from work and school and in medical expense, than any other affliction to which humanity is subject.

The U. S. Bureau of Public Health Service says the "common cold" is the most frequent cause of illness and that it is often the forerunner of bronchitis, bronchial pneumonia and other equally serious diseases.

What a Cold Is

One reason why colds turn out so seriously is that people are prone to take them too lightly and treat them too casually.

It is well to remember what a cold is—an internal infection. As such, a cold patently calls for internal treatment.

Purely local treatments—applications of this or that—may help temporarily, but they won't get at the seat of the trouble, an infection within the body.

Four Important Effects

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, working internally, does four things, all of them of paramount importance in treating a cold:

First, it opens the bowels, an admittedly advisable step in the treatment of a cold.

Second, it checks the infection in the system.

Third, it relieves the headache and fever.

These four effects are what you want in the treatment of a cold and in Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine you get them in the form of a single tablet.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is safe to take. Its harmlessness, as well as its efficacy, is attested to by the fact that it is the largest selling cold tablet in the world.

Don't Dally—Don't Compromise

When you feel a cold coming on, act quickly and act decisively. Go at once to your druggist and get a package of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. Start taking the tablets immediately, two at a time, every four hours.

Adopted promptly, this treatment will usually stop a cold the first day, and that's the action you want!

All drug stores sell Bromo Quinine tablets and the few pennies' cost may save you much in worry, suspense and expense. Ask firmly for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine and insist upon getting what you ask for.

SCANDAL IN THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

How the Roosevelt administration has been sacrificing farmers on the altar of politics was disclosed at Washington on Thursday. The disclosure came when an unexpurgated copy of a study made last September by the United States bureau of agricultural economics fell into the hands of newspaper men. That bureau, whose chief function is to inform farmers about their condition and about the results of legislation affecting their interests, reported that the farm control scheme had proved injurious to the farmers' interests. It is almost beyond belief that, possessed of the suppressed report from the official farm fact finding agency of the government about the harmful effects of AAA, the President and the secretary of agriculture made speeches last fall in which they represented that AAA had proved wholly beneficial to the farmers.

Thus the Roosevelt administration stands revealed as having done four distinct injuries to the farmers of this country. The first injury was in the Roosevelt farm program itself. The second was in the inexcusable denial to farmers of official reports of the experts on the effects of the program. The third injury lay in the failure of the President and the secretary of agriculture to move for a repeal of the farm legislation when it was established that it was proving harmful to the farmers' interests. The fourth consisted of the representations by the President and his secretary of agriculture that AAA had increased agricultural income with reports at hand from the highest official authority that the legislation had reduced agricultural income.

The study which brought the facts about the AAA to the attention of the government came from a division of the department of agriculture which was created July 1, 1922. As Secretary Wallace has said in his reports, this bureau developed methods of "price analysis, which should become a measuring stick for farm legislation." It can be of little use, however, when Mr. Wallace hides the stick. The expenditures of the bureau last year amounted to $5,253,767. Paying well, the bureau has been able to attract men of outstanding ability to its staf. It was such a bureau which reported as follows to the secretary of agriculture last September:

"Although the prices received in 1934 with the adjustment program were about 3.6 cents per pound higher than the estimated price that might have been received without the program, this difference was not enough to offset the smaller quantity of cotton available for sale, so that the estimated gross returns from cotton and cottonseed were less with the program than they would have been without the program."

The report which leaked out relates only to cotton. Whether there are reports about other commodities pigeonholed in Mr. Wallace's office has not been disclosed. But in any case it is well established that if any farmers benefited from AAA it was those who raise cotton.

By withholding from the public and distorting reports of official bureaus prepared for the information and guidance of the public President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace have placed themselves in the same position as unscrupulous corporation officers who withhold and distort reports prepared by auditors for the information of stockholders.

A congressional committee should proceed at once to investigate this scandal in the department of agriculture. The public is entitled to have the full and unexpurgated reports of the government experts. A committee might also look into the question as to whether the suppression of official reports constitutes misfeasance and whether impeachment is called for. In any case, give the bunk about farm relief an airing before passing any more crop control laws.

THE STORY COMPLETED.

One of the most surprising features of the railway revival that has been under way for the past two years has been the pronounced success of each novel effort almost from the start. The public was invited to visit one of the terminal stations to inspect a new Zephyr, 400, Hiawatha, Portland Rose, or Abraham Lincoln. Then came news that the trains were handling capacity passenger lists at new high speeds, but in absolute comfort.

With this record established, it was with some regret that late in the year THE TRIBUNE was obliged to print an adverse account of the Santa Fe's experiment. The giant Diesel hauling the Superior Chief to Los Angeles on a forty hour schedule took fire for some mysterious reason near Gallup, New Mexico, to completely overshadow a record of achievement for its first two trips.

It now appears, however, that this experiment is also entitled to be added to the honor list. The bureau of locomotive inspection has recently released its report to completely exonerate the Diesel machine. It shows that pending the construction of "filling stations" along the Santa Fe's right of way this pioneer Diesel locomotive had been obliged to carry fuel for the long run in an extra baggage car. Imperfect operation of the temporary pumping mechanism from car to locomotive proved to be the underlying cause of the fire.

The courage of the Santa Fe in continuing the experiment is to be commended. In the long run it will be rewarded by restored confidence in our rail carriers. Public acclaim is the best possible safeguard against the plans of spoils politicians, who would use this critical period in the modernization of our railway systems as an excuse for government ownership and operation with all the abuses and inefficiencies that such efforts have always combined.

FOR THE SAKE OF HUMANITY.

Almost everybody reads the weather reports, and if an individual has a retentive memory he may recall that the latest sunrise of the year was at 7:18 a. m. It is also incontrovertible that the dawn has a duration of a half hour at least, producing a full hour of daylight before 7:45 a. m., even under the most unfavorable circumstances. That is the hour of daylight, when activity on the streets is at its lowest ebb, that should be saved for the late afternoon, when thoroughfares are crowded, through the adoption of eastern standard time.

We all have our likes and dislikes, our personal hobbies, and our pet peeves, but on one subject we can all agree: That something—no, everything—should be done to check the massacre that is taking place on Chicago thoroughfares and the slaughter on state highways by motor accidents. What has that to do with the daylight saving plan? Let us see.

"Live and Let Live," an analysis of highway casualties, compiled by the Traveler's Insurance company, has just been received. It contains "hours of occurrence" tables to show that accident frequencies stand at a minimum between the hours of six and eight in the morning. The record for those two hours is even lower than for the wee sma' hours preceding. The statistics also show that accidents reach a peak during the rush hours between five and six p. m.

So much for accident frequencies as related to the density of trafic, but in another table it is shown that 21,480 fatalities occurred during hours of normal darkness, as compared with 14,620 deaths in daylight. It is therefore computed that if an accident occurs after nightfall the chances that it will kill are 92% greater than during daylight hours. Under central time we are projecting an unnecessary hour of heaviest trafic density into the deadly darkness.

Judge Gutknecht of the Trafic court, who has reached beyond the ordinary duties of his office to make Chicago safe for both motorist and pedestrian, knew this condition from experience when he appeared before the city council to advocate eastern standard time for Chicago in the interest of the safety of its citizens.

THE BRITISH AND ANOTHER LION.

There are indications the British government is beginning to regret that it handled Sir Samuel Hoare with so much asperity and took its inspiration from the league-minded Mr. Eden. Sir Samuel lost his place as foreign minister because he was willing to sacrifice Ethiopia to Mussolini to prevent trouble in Europe and Mr. Eden took his post to carry out the policy that it didn't matter what happened close at home, the Italians couldn't have the country of the lion of Judah.

Recent reports from London are to the effect that the government's enthusiasm in the protection of Ethiopia at all costs is cooling and that if the Italians can bring their affair to a conclusion the British will be much relieved to get the whole matter settled and be done with it. It is intimated even that the Italians have been given to understand that they can push on, not probably with a blessing from London, but with the understanding that what's done can't be undone. Mr. Eden no doubt was thoroughly convinced that if the league could make a successful stand against one conspicuous imperialistic adventure it would offer the world a protection for the preservation of peace. It would have demonstrated the solidity of the family of nations against a disturber and other disturbers would be put on notice that they could not hope to succeed in aggressive acts.

In a less disturbed world Mr. Eden's crusade might have succeeded. If Mussolini had been the only bad boy and if everywhere else the world had been at ease the Italian might have been cracked down upon in an exemplary fashion. That would have required a different kind of Japan, a more composed China, a less truculent Germany, a less worried France, a Russia of a different color, and a greater feeling of security in the smaller states of the post-war map. With things as they are the British may have to put Mr. Eden out and confess that if Haile Selassie can't save himself he'll have to take such terms as a colonizer will give him. Either that or Geneva will pray for rain in the hopes that it will wash a solution out in Africa.

SPEAKING OF COLD.

[Cedar Rapids Gazette.]

A story from Ottumwa attributes to Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, who went to the south pole with Admiral Byrd, this laconic comment on the current weather in Iowa: "I'll take Little America." The remark serves to emphasize what a lucky man Admiral Byrd is. It wasn't enough that he should be rescued just in time, after being marooned near the south pole for five months. It develops now that he was marooned there just in time. A year later and he might just as well not have been rescued.

Try to imagine how many people would turn out to hear the admiral lecture on the hardships of antarctic exploration after going through what we've gone through in the last three weeks. What kind of a market would he have now for a book on the subject? No, sir, his return from the icy south was exceedingly well timed. Why, there are some now who contemplate writing books on a winter in Iowa, with a view to peddling them in Little America.

THEN IT WAS GOOD-BY.

KING EDWARD VIII. has broken all the rules of past history and will appear in the new British stamps at half length instead of the conventional head and neck picture. In which case, of course, we may glean from the king's picture on the stamp what are his latest ideas of what the well dressed gentleman should wear; the latest thing in collars, neckties, and shirts, as well as waistcoats and coats. We can follow Edward's stamp style in trousers probably only two or three inches below the vest, but we can have our pants in style to that extent anyhow. He leaves us flat on the lower extension of the trousers, shoes, and socks, but in future stamps he may have a full length picture of himself put in. It's going to create a lot of excitement and men are going to rush breathless and bareheaded down the street from the postoffice to their tailors to get duds just like the king has on. And it will create new classes, too. Men who wear the clothes the king wears on the penny stamp will be called "penny dressers." Then there will be the "tuppence stylers," the "thrippence models," and the nabobs of all the "shilling stylers." It ought to boost the sale of British stamps immensely. And Jim Farley never thought of it. Goodness! won't his face be red?

BOOK REVIEW.

O Anthony Adverse,
From good to bad to worse
I've followed you the winter through,
Neglecting things I ought to do,
Falling behind the news of the day,
Missing many a photoplay
And losing out on the radio.
Shameful it is—but I don't know
What congress is doing,
What new wars are brewing,
What Baby Wampases have come
To reign in the realms of moviedom,
Or who is crooning the latest blues,
Or which kind of toothpaste I ought to use.

O Anthony Adverse,
You should have been more terse:
Twelve hundred pages I've traced you through,
With the villain still pursuing you—
Italy, England, France and Spain,
To Cuba, Africa, back again,
Contriving, achieving, to be laid low,
At last, by Luis in Mexico!
O Anthony, you're too prodigious;
Agnostic today, tomorrow religious;
A cavalier, then a buccaneer,
A schemer, a dreamer, a financier—
It's quite too much for one man's career,
And it has taken me nearly a year
To read your tale. Then, at the finis,
To find you beaten and broken and minus
Most of the things for which you'd striven—
Well, that can scarcely be forgiven!
O why did you die, dear Anthony,
So crassly and unromantically?

Poor Anthony Adverse,
With money in your purse,
And youth and everything it takes,
Why so many bad breaks?
But, anyhow, old man, I'll bet you
When the movies get you
They'll massacre that jinx
And straighten out all the kinks.
They'll lend you a note of levity,
And, I trust, with decent brevity,
Bring your affairs out of confusion
To the well known conclusion
Of joy and laughter,
And living happily ever after.
I'll bet you won't know
Yourself in the scenario.

AND THEY'RE BRAGGING over at the London zoo of a swarm of stingless bees they've imported from South Africa. I've met stingless bees before and when they finally left me they also left a swelling on my face or neck as big as a teacup. And people are like that. They come up to you so nice and friendly like and you're just sure they're stingless and before they have chatted brightly with you for two minutes they tell you your hair needs combing or that your face is dirty or that you ought to cut out the gin. Or else they sting you for a dollar. Stingless bees! Everything's got a stinger.

"BOULDER DAM Soon to Be Completed."—Headline. And I wouldn't be surprised if one of the reasons Mr. Hoover would like to be President again would be to put his name back on that dam where it used to be before the New Dealers gave it the bum's rush.

CANDLELIGHT.

Leaning toward one another at the table,
Our faces separated by a flame,
Reach forth your hand to mine. I scarce am able.
Even to shape the substance of your name.

The crystal twinkles back a radiance
But half its own. You lend the other part
I bow my gaze before your sudden glance
That sets the shadows rocking in my heart.

How tall the flame arises from its blue
To vanquish the slim wick without a sound!
The wax drips slowly. So the sight of you
Destroys; so in your glory am I drowned.

HOW BRONCHITIS DEVELOPS.

THE route taken by air before it enters the lungs is a circuitous one. Under normal conditions it passes into the body through the nostrils [not the mouth], becomes humidified [moistened] by flowing along the nasal mucous passages, and the current turns downward along the back of the throat. It then enters the trachea [windpipe], and from the lower end of this tube passes into the lungs via the right and left bronchial tubes. These two principal air pipes, one supplying the right and the other the left side, branch into innumerable smaller tubes, which become hollow filaments as they approach the outside of the lung. A picture of the so-called bronchial tree resembles a symmetrical elm after the leaves have fallen.

An ordinary cold may be accompanied or followed not alone by inflammation of the nasal passages, but of the bronchi as well. We then say that the patient has acute bronchitis. Many varieties of bacteria may be involved and the severity of the infection will depend upon the extent of the inflammation. If the trachea and large bronchi only are affected the patient may not be very ill, although spells of coughing may be frequent and attended with expectoration. On the other hand, if the finer tubes become inflamed [capillary bronchi] the patient faces, as a rule, a fairly serious illness. In fact, there is little difference between a broncho-pneumonia and a deep seated bronchitis.

In acute bronchitis the throat and nasal passages will feel dry and there is soreness, particularly in the throat, some hoarseness, and a slight cough. Chilliness and fever are generally present, accompanied by a mild prostration. Temperature may not rise above 100 degrees F. With rest in bed and plenty of moisture in the air of the room the inflammation usually abates within a few days and the cough becomes "loose," with considerable puslike sputum.

After recovery if one does not take sufficient time for convalescence a remnant of the infection may remain, resulting in a more or less persistent hacking cough. Repeated attacks of bronchitis may lead to stretching of some of the air tubes and the condition known as bronchiectasis may develop.

In most cases of influenza, bronchitis is present to a greater or lesser degree and some persons will harbor the infection for several weeks. The state of the general health will have much to do with the disease "hanging on." In older persons a complete cure is rarely accomplished if the condition has existed for many months. But few cases would continue, however, could the patient, instead of forcing recovery, be persuaded to encourage healing by taking an additional week or two of bed rest followed by a program of good food, sunshine, and the avoidance of additional or complicating infections. Healing is difficult in overheated, dry, ill ventilated rooms.

Most physicians agree that it is unwise to stop or check a cough, particularly if an opiate is used for this purpose. If the cough is causing pain and is confined to the trachea, appropriate remedies may be used for decreasing the irritation.

Chronic bronchitis is best managed through a program of open air exercise, hydrotherapy, and physiotherapy. Sometimes a change in climate is of the greatest value. In some instances where infection is deep seated and the bacteria can be isolated, vaccines made from the organisms peculiar to the patient may be helpful.

There are so many possible causes of what is thought to be a bronchial cough that a careful examination is always in order. Heart disease, tuberculosis, and lymph gland enlargements should be considered.

Fatigue extends a cordial invitation to infection. Furthermore, we must regard every instance of inflammation of the trachea or of the bronchi as a possible forerunner of pneumonia, as the pneumococcus [the causative bacterium] is generally present.

CLAUSTROPHOBIA.

F. X. S. writes: All my life I have been afraid of close confinement such as a locked room or crowded train. The older I grow the worse it gets.

REPLY.

Claustrophobia [fear of confined places] is a neurosis originating from repressions, and is defensive in purpose. It is thought that the fears of the psychoneurotic do not represent what is really dreaded but are substitutes for other ideas that are more distasteful or humiliating than the real fears. In a given case the meaning of the phobia [fear] can be interpreted only in terms of the experiences of the individual. It will usually be found to be the result of some internal menace with which the patient can no longer successfully cope. It may be a defense against something that the patient is not courageous enough to acknowledge. Psychotherapy can help.

FRECKLES.

Mrs. E. R. writes: I saw your recent inquiry about the possibility of inheriting freckles. My husband is one great big freckle. None of our four children has freckles. My husband's brother has two children and his sister has two. None of these children has freckles.

REPLY.

A husband is often called a "great big this and that," but a freckle—well! that's a new one.

Your family tree proves the point, namely, that freckles are not inherited.

PNEUMOTHORAX NOISES.

L. M. B. writes: I have been taking bilateral pneumothorax for six months. I don't cough or raise, but when I get the treatment I develop a buzzing sound in the throat as I exhale and clicking noises in the chest. What is the cause?

REPLY.

Probably snapping of threadlike adhesion bands. This happens during a refill or while coughing. The sounds may sometimes be heard by the patient or those near him. When one is short of breath there are likely to be noises in the throat.

SERIOUS CONDITION.

Mrs. L. A. writes: What is the cause of bleeding hemorrhoids? My husband is losing a pint of blood a day. Is this serious?

REPLY.

Yes, indeed. Bleeding from the rectum is always serious and calls for prompt relief. Hemorrhoids will scarcely account for the amount of blood lost in your husband's case. Secure skilled medical aid without delay.

From Across the Sea

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA.—President Quezon has already indicated the character of his administration.

On Nov. 15 he occupied Malacanang palace, the historic residence of Spanish and American governors general. Shortly thereafter he called the new unicameral national assembly to a 20-day special session and things began to hum.

In appointments, legislation, and administration he has accomplished enough to indicate the direction the wind is blowing. It is definitly blowing toward a presidential government with economic regimentation as a possible special feature. A few recent newspaper headlines screamed as much: "Dictatorial Powers Granted Quezon," "Invest Quezon with Broad Economic Powers," "Quezon Seeks Free Hand to Reorganize Government."

His choice of advisers and subordinates definitly revealed his conservative but independent policy. Over widespread opposition, he named Francis Burton Harrison, former governor general, technical adviser on transportation. He reappointed all the incumbent justices of the Supreme court, except the American members.

In legislation he was absolutely dominant. First, he had the rules of the assembly overhauled so that the speaker, once the most powerful official next to the governor general and later next to the senate president, became a mere figurehead with purely ministerial functions. Then he began reading or sending special messages, together with the drafts of bills corresponding to his recommendations, to the assembly. He sent ten messages, two of which he read personally, and 27 bills, only 19 of which the assembly could enact because of lack of time.

Four of the 19 bills passed are of more than ordinary significance. One, that authorizing the organization of a Philippine army, of which the president is the commander in chief, places in the executive vast powers of appointment, control, and execution. Under the act, it is planned to provide universal military training, require compulsory military service, and build a standing army of 19,000 to perform both police and military duty.

Another bill places in the hands of the president complete authority to reorganize the government during a period of six months.

The two other bills concern economics. One gives to the president full control of the various commercial enterprises capitalized by the government, either already functioning or yet to be organized. Among those already in operation are a bank, a railroad, a cement factory, a coal mine, and hotels. The other bill creates a national economic council which is to be charged with outlining a planned economy for the Philippines.

As Quezon has already announced that his government is going into business, it is expected that new business enterprises are due to be organized. The council will be under the direct control of the president.

In his administrative acts Quezon has shown evidence of greater direct control of subordinate offices than heretofore exercised. He has announced more frequent meetings of his cabinet and immediately established the precedent of having Vice President Osmena preside over it whenever he feels indisposed.

On Christmas eve he pardoned a score of convicts and extended reprieves to a notorious soldier-killer scheduled for execution. Even before assuming the presidency he had committed himself against capital punishment by coming to the defense of the then governor general who had remitted to life imprisonment the death penalty in the case of two taxicab drivers who had murdered and robbed their fare.

As a spectacular move to warn officeholders that he is on the lookout for anything that might be amiss, he has ordered the suspension and investigation of the director of the bureau of commerce, taking action virtually over the head of the department secretary concerned.

CLOSING ESTATE.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am one of the heirs of an estate and was appointed administrator. There are two installments of taxes due besides part of the lawyer's fees. If this property goes through probate now [1] will these bills have to be paid at this time? If not [2], how long a time is given? 3. Can the property be sold for taxes while in probate? There are three other heirs. 4. Must I notify them of the debts due? Would I have to be in court [5] at the time it is probated, or [6] can the attorney take care of this? 7. How long a time is given before settling estate? R. S.

1. Ordinarily the Probate court insists that the taxes be paid before an estate is closed.
2. Ordinarily an estate is not closed until a little after a year from the commencement of the proceedings.
3. Yes, but two years are allowed for redemption from a tax sale.
4. Not necessarily, but if there is a shortage of funds to pay the taxes it would seem good sense to see whether the heirs could agree on making up the amount.
5. We do not understand what you mean by "at the time it is probated," since the probate proceedings ordinarily occupy a little over a year.
6. In general, yes.
7. See preceding answers.

FALSE TESTIMONY.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. If a divorce is obtained on false grounds, the plaintif and witness both under oath giving false testimony, [2] what redress has the defendant if in the future he fails to live up to all promises and agreements made, verbal and otherwise, causing the defendant untold suffering and worry? 3. Owing to all sorts of dire threats of violence, bodily injury and even death, the defendant didn't appear in the case. A. Z.

1. If the defendant was served with summons in the proceedings she should have been present and presented her version of the facts. We cannot advise to advantage without knowing your facts more clearly.
2. The relationship of the promise to the divorce proceedings is not clear.
3. She should have consulted an attorney at the time. We doubt if anything can be done now, but if she wishes to make the attempt she should consult an attorney now.

COSTUMED ROBBERS.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Before the regular hour of opening a bandit gained admission to a bank, clearing the way for a robbery, solely because his dress closely copied that of a priest. There would seem to be sound reasons for providing specific additional punishment for such an impersonation over and above that provided for the crime of robbery.

Many ministers of religion customarily wear a distinctive garb. This practice is perpetuated largely because the uniform dress constitutes a sort of guarantee to the public, on the part of the groups they represent, that their behavior will conform to recognized standards of morality and citizenship.

The customary uniforms, or habits, of these groups are, in fact, so accepted by the public. It is true that lapses occur—a few individuals are weak, a few unworthy; nevertheless, no one really expects to see a Salvation Army lassie or a sister of charity reeling along the street, singing "How Dry I Am," or to find a Lutheran or an Episcopal minister in a crap ring at the rear of some inn, nor does one as yet believe that if he opens a door as a courtesy to a Catholic priest [or a public health nurse] he will in turn feel the muzzle of an automatic prying at his ribs. Even a suspicious person is likely to be, on the contrary, more or less off guard, because he is willing, within reason, to assist ministers of religion, social workers, or others whose time is understood to be expended largely in service, often directly in the public interest.

As a matter of fact, the assistance rendered these classes of workers daily by the citizens generally, both supporters and nonsupporters of organized religion, in many small but definitly helpful ways, is very great, and without it their work would be rendered doubly difficult. Such help is not accorded as a favor to the individual worker, as a rule, but because the person conferring it wishes to help the worker get on with his task.

If criminals find it possible with impunity to perpetrate such impostures as that referred to above, two results must rapidly follow:

First, the number of unsuspecting citizens to fall victim to criminal designs will be increased.

Second, a radical change of attitude toward the uniformed minister of religion or social worker will be forced upon the public.

It is to be hoped that our legislators in every state where appropriate action has not been had will take early and effective steps to prevent these results.

[REV.] CLARENCE PARKER.

DOCTOR'S ORDERS.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—As a real dyed in the wool follower of Tracy I wish to complain of the treatment he is getting from the makeup man of W-G-N. A man in the condition of Tracy should not be moved. This morning he was moved from the sporting section to the news section and heretofore on Fridays he has always been in the household hints section. Where next? I am surprised Dr. Irving S. Cutter of your staf does not put a stop to this.

In case sufficient blood for my hero cannot be found, get in touch with me immediately. MICKEY BOISSY.

TIME AND THE WEATHER.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—I suggest that, instead of taking Mr. C. A. Donnel's word about the inconvenience to business and commercial concerns in cities on eastern time, you ask said business and commercial concerns about it. Surely they would be the best witnesses in the matter.

Will you please explain to Mr. Donnel that my reference to the old-fashioned almanac was an attempt to be facetious? His inability to grasp that fact is characteristic of the total lack of perspective which has characterized opponents of eastern time.

The record of 85 per cent accuracy of which he boasts is less impressive when one remembers that the score is kept by and according to rules established by only one player of the game. Most golfers could improve their putting score if they could increase the size of the hole to 20 inches [10 inches each side of the center]. In the same way most people are not impressed by a temperature target 20 degrees wide [10 degrees above and 10 degrees below] which Mr. Donnel allows himself in keeping score on his predictions. L. M. ARMS.

A SONG WHOSE SINGER IS UNKNOWN.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—I would like to voice a protest against the popular custom of "vocalizing" by radio dance orchestras.

Among the countless current hits there are many really good pieces, and the variation supplied by one of the orchestra members "doing the vocal" is logical, and appreciated. Also there are many good voices being heard in this way.

My criticism is that the person doing the vocal seems constantly to overrate his importance in the piece.

This is promoted by announcing the name of the singer, which is superfluous, and tends to create the impression in his or her mind that we are interested in the soloist rather than the piece.

The singer then proceeds to sing the song according to his own idea, with no consideration for the composer's successful effort.

I am sure the listening public would appreciate a singer using his own natural voice and singing the music as it is written. RALPH L. HEALY.

WE CAN'T SAW SAWDUST.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—The members of the Portage Park branch unit of the National Union for Social Justice have adopted and agreed upon the following resolution and would appreciate seeing it in print:

Whereas, in his discourse of Feb. 9, 1936, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin challenged the editors of the daily papers to refute his statement that the money issued by the federal reserve system and our banks, is counterfeit;

Whereas, the editors of our daily papers have either refused to accept this challenge, or else have evaded it by centering the attention of their readers on irrelevant issues, therefore, be it

Resolved, that we, the members of the Portage Park branch unit of the National Union for Social Justice, do hereby condemn such nefarious tactics on the part of the editors of our daily papers.

A. PANTAGES, 72, THEATER CHAIN BUILDER, IS DEAD

Sold Business Before the Crash in 1929.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Alexander Pantages, 72, who ran a Klondike gold field "grubstake" into a fortune of more than 25 million dollars in the theater business, was found dead in bed at his home here today. Death apparently was due to heart disease.

ALEXANDER PANTAGES.

The body of the veteran theater man was found by his gardener, John Gerkis, whom Mrs. Lois Pantages sent to her husband's room to learn why he had not come down for breakfast.

Accused of Rape.

Pantages was involved in a sensational rape case in 1929 which was given wide publicity. He was accused by Eunice Pringle, 17, dancer. After the girl had run screaming into the street late one afternoon, Trafic Policeman A. L. Courtney rushed into Pantages' office. He said he found the millionaire on the floor, his clothes disarranged.

Through two sensational trials—one a criminal action and the other a civil suit—Pantages insisted the girl had attempted to "frame" him because he refused to book her act on his circuits. He said that while they were alone, Miss Pringle suddenly tore his clothes and began to scream.

He was found innocent on the criminal charge. The damage suit Miss Pringle subsequently brought against him was settled out of court.

Sells Before Crash.

Pantages had an extremely varied career, but finally came into his own in the theater business. He was a shrewd financier and demonstrated that ability when, with surprising foresight, he announced in the summer of 1929 his intention of selling his entire theater empire to RKO. The deal was completed at the reported price of 24 million dollars.

Pantages was born on an island off the Greek mainland and as a youth worked in Cairo, Egypt. Then he held jobs as a cabin boy on Mediterranean tramp steamers and in a beer garden in San Francisco.

Failure as Miner.

In 1898 he joined the Klondike gold rush but failed as a miner in Alaska. It was then he obtained a "grubstake" from "Klondike Kate" Rockwell, queen of the Dawson dance halls, and talked her into performing on percentage in the first vaudeville show he ever staged.

A year later, with $4,000, he went to Seattle to open a theater. In less than two years he had become a power in the vaudeville field.

SIX KILLED AS SNOW SLIPS AND WRECKS MINE IN COLORADO

Cortez, Colo., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Six persons were killed and two seriously injured by a snowslide which wiped out a mining camp in the mountains 26 miles from here, Sherif Jess Robinson said tonight.

The dead were Parley Jensen, Roy Guier, Clint Noble, Earl Wyman, Charles Roessler, and Mrs. Doram Rees. Mrs. Rees was the camp cook.

The sherif said the bunkhouses, cook house and mine buildings were destroyed, but 12 persons escaped injury.

The property belongs to the Hesperus Mining company.

LIGGETT SLAYING GOES INTO HANDS OF JURY TODAY

Prosecutor's Speech Puts Holes in Alibi.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The state of Minnesota today demanded a verdict of guilty for Isadore [Kid Cann] Blumenfeld in his trial for the murder of Walter W. Liggett, crusading newspaper editor.

Speaking slowly and forcefully, Assistant Attorney General Frederic A. Pike hammered a gap of approximately 20 minutes in Cann's barber shop alibi. Using a chart illustrating Cann's alibi and the stories told by the chief defense witnesses, Pike argued "there was time enough 'in Isadore Blumenfeld's own story" to commit the murder of Walter Liggett Dec. 9.

Defense Starts Argument.

Thomas McMeekin, Cann's attorney, started his final argument as Pike closed late in the day. A short time later court adjourned until tomorrow when instructions will be issued by Judge Arthur Selover and the case be given to the jury.

The prosecutor started his argument as the judge took his seat at the start of the afternoon session.

"We have come to the end of a long trail, ladies and gentlemen," he began his address to the jury of four women and eight men who have been hearing the case since it opened Jan. 20.

"I feel the first point is to touch on the defense matter," he said. "I might argue for an hour that the defendant killed Walter Liggett and you might still say, 'Yes, but what about the defense claim that the defendant was some place else at the time.'"

Alibi Good to 5:30.

From there Pike recounted the timing of the alibi testimony between 5 p. m. and 5:45 p. m. the day of the murder. The time of the editor's murder has been fixed at 5:41 p. m.

Citing the testimony of a group of six defense witnesses he pointed out that their statements, supported by time cards, proved the whereabouts of Cann from 5 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. "So far," he said, "the alibi testimony is perfect."

Then he turned to the barber shop witnesses and pointed to discrepancies in their testimony which placed the witness in the shop at times when he could not possibly have been there.

Contradict Each Other.

Lashing at the credibility of these witnesses, he pointed out that one of them had testified to knowing Cann for only a year and a half where the defendant himself from the stand had admitted acquaintance of from three and a half to five years.

Referring to their categorical affirmatives to the question "Was the defendant in the shop at 5:41?" he asked "Why the extraordinary agreement; why did they make the fatal mistake?" and again smashing at their testimony that Cann was in the shop at a time when it was proved he had been elsewhere, "what was the reason that they should agree on this singular piece of evidence?"

A moment later he indicted the police with the assertion:

Put Through "Third Degree."

He told how immediately after the slaying, Mrs. Liggett had been "besieged by people, even I regret to say, by officers; she was being put through a third degree. All the time trying to do what? Trying, it seems to me, to cause her to confuse the identification she had made."

"The evidence of the officers [four testified for the defense] must be weighed in the light of their attitude toward the defendant and toward Mrs. Liggett."

HARVARD PLANS LATER ACTION ON A. W. NIEMAN FUND

Boston, Mass., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Officers of the Harvard University corporation, meeting here today, took under advisement a bequest of more than $3,000,000 action from Mrs. Agnes Wahl Nieman, widow of the founder of the Milwaukee Journal. She left the bulk of her estate to "educate persons deemed especially qualified for journalism." The university lawyers will study the will before plans are made for the funds' use.

W. A. ALEXANDER ESTATE ORDERED TO PAY $8,000 TAX

Judge Perry L. Persons ruled yesterday in Lake County court that $7,908 in state inheritance taxes was due from the estate of William A. Alexander, head of an insurance firm bearing his name, who died last Feb. 9 at Bellair, Fla. The court fixed the value of the estate at $219,477. A previous return filed by the widow, Mrs. Maude Alexander, 304 North Sheridan road, Highland Park, placed the value at $80,284 but the court upheld Assistant Attorney General Charles Noll in his contention that capital stock held by the widow in her husband's insurance business should be valued at $185,250 instead of $52,360. Attorneys for the estate paid the tax in court.

Stop Colds To Help Control Flu Epidemic

It Stands to Reason That Deep-Seated Colds Lower Resistance . . . Make You More Dangerously Susceptible to Flu

Penetro Is Much In Demand for the Prompt, Effective Treatment of Weakening, Deep-Seated Chest Colds

With flu increasing daily, the public can do much toward helping to control this dangerous disease by treating all colds the instant they set in.

For colds, doctors and health authorities say, weaken the system and make it easier for flu to claim more victims.

Don't you take unnecessary chances. When a cold sets in, go to bed at once and rub well with super-powerful, fast-acting Penetro. If you have fever, call your doctor.

TWO-POINT SUPERIORITY GIVES PENETRO ITS REMARKABLE POWER TO COMBAT COLDS

Penetro is different and superior in two ways. First it is made with a base of mutton suet . . . preferred for years by physicians as an agent to carry medication into the skin. For mutton suet is animal fat and melts at body heat. Second, Penetro contains 113% to 227% more medication than any other nationally sold cold salve. Thus . . . with Penetro's highly concentrated medication assisted in its local penetrating action by the mutton suet base, you get a vastly superior aid in the effective treatment of colds.

When this powerful medication is released through the full vaporizing and penetrating action of Penetro . . . nasal passages are opened up instantly . . . nature is helped in breaking up congestion . . . aches and pains are eased . . . and your cold is promptly and surely relieved.

[ADVERTISMENT.]

ONE MOTHER WRITES:

"My little boy came home from school sneezing and sniffling. Soon his cold was down in his chest. I was afraid that his weakened condition might lead to serious complications. Twice daily I rubbed his chest, nose, throat, and back with Penetro. Not only did he get wonderful relief, but in two days I had his cold checked and soon he was well again. Penetro is the finest cold salve I ever used."

PENETRO IS STAINLESS SNOW-WHITE

Another feature about Penetro that mothers and every one else like is the fact that Penetro is stainless and snow-white. It never stains or soils bed clothes.

Penetro is not offered as a substitute for the family physician. It is offered as an aid to him and to the family he serves. Go to your druggist today and get a jar of Penetro whether you have a cold or not. Keep it ready for emergency. But be sure to demand Penetro, the mutton suet cold salve. The 50c size contains three times as much as the 25c size. The $1 size contains nearly 8 times as much as the 25c size. Trial size 10c. Demand Penetro and help to safeguard your family from the danger of the common cold. For free sample of Penetro Salve write Penetro, Dept. 51, Memphis, Tenn.

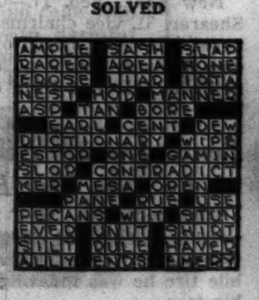
YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED



HIRAM P. MAXIM, GUN SILENCER INVENTOR, DIES

Stricken Aboard Train En Route to Coast.

La Junta, Colo., Feb. 17.—[Special.] —Hiram Percy Maxim, 67, internationally known inventor of the "Maxim silencer" for firearms and numerous other weapons, died in Mennonite hospital here today.

HIRAM P. MAXIM.

Death was attributed to a throat infection of which he became ill last week when he was en route by train to the west coast with his wife. His home was in Hartford, Conn.

Maxim was the head of his own firm which manufactured ordnance articles he invented. He also was president of the American Radio Relay league and the International Amateur Radio union. His book, "Life's Place in the Cosmos," was published in 1933.

Upheld Family Tradition.

The mechanical engineer carried on the work of his noted father, Sir Hiram Stevens Maxim, and his uncle, Hudson Maxim, who invented the first machine gun, smokeless powder, a self-propelling torpedo, and other armaments of modern times.

His father, who renounced his American citizenship and went to England after difficulty with this government regarding some of his patents, was knighted in 1901 by the British government.

Before turning his inventive genius to ordnance and firearms, Hiram Maxim designed automobiles. His first one, produced in 1897, ran 30 miles on one charge of electricity and had a maximum speed of 12 miles an hour.

Outgrowth of Tricycle.

His motor carriage was known as the "Columbia phaeton." It was an outgrowth of his development in 1894 of a tandem tricycle. Many models of the gasoline tricycle package carriers embodying his ideas were sold under the name "Columbia."

In 1906 he turned his attention to firearms after forming the Maxim Goodridge company in association with T. W. Goodridge, formerly of the Studebaker Automobile company. Maxim formed a company in 1909 to manufacture his silencer.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Fred Allen intends to see to it personally that Talkative Tom, the chattering mynae bird whom he is to present on his program tomorrow night, is given a good feeding of vitamins today and tomorrow. Fred has been informed that this procedure will insure vocal action on the part of the bird tomorrow.

Allen has been having altogether too much trouble with his last two programs to take any chances with his next show. Talkative Tom has a vocabulary of 78 words, including a flock of wisecracks, and splits infinitives with the greatest of ease, according to the advance billing. Allen hopes it is reliable.

Last week a battle of wits between Allen and Jack Benny had been scheduled but a few hours before the show went on Benny's physician ruled he could not work. So Allen had to patch up an old show.

Week before Fred did a burlesque of Maj. Bowes, but that went on only after a big battle between the bosses of the network and the advertising agency handling the Allen show. NBC first ruled that Allen could not satirize Bowes at all. Allen threatened to walk out, it was said, and then the agency went to bat for him.

A compromise was reached, Allen agreeing to eliminate the crack in which Maj. Bowes was to have said: "Here are 800 votes for Millie Swank —and she hasn't even been heard yet!"

Eddie Cantor will air his programs from Hollywood, Fla., starting next Sunday. Bobby Breen, the boy actor Eddie discovered who is now on the west coast making a picture, will rejoin the Cantor crew in a week or two. . . . You have eight more Philharmonic broadcasts to be conducted by Toscanini. He will not return to America next year.

Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, new NBC president, with one foot on a chair and elbow on knee, was explaining to newspaper men here the other day the possibilities of the use of ultra-short waves.

Said one reporter: "It's surprising to hear you, an army man, talk so authoritatively about the new developments in broadcasting. After all, you've just been in radio a short time."

"I've been in it a month," snapped Maj. Lohr.

Maj. Lohr is doing considerable prowling about Radio City at night, they say. Announcers slip into phone booths and spread the alarm: "Climb into your tuxedo, brother; that man Lohr is around again." And the technical men have been brushing up, too, because the major likes to drop in on them and match wits.

And that recalls a Paul Whiteman story. Paul was sitting in the control booth in Rockefeller Center rehersing his sponsored show when a well groomed young man walked in. Paul was irritated when he stayed on.

"Will you kindly get out of here?" Paul is said to have suggested.

"Nice work, Paul," the engineer remarked, pumping Paul's hand after the stranger's departure. "That was only Nelson Rockefeller."

Several Busy Making Plans for Weddings

March and April Dates Being Arranged.

BY JUDITH CASS.

WEDDING plans are occupying the attention of quite a number of young women—and men—these days, for during the next three months several popular young women will be married, including Miss Virginia Lamson, Miss Virginia Avery, Miss Eleanor Cheney, Miss Jane McMurray, and Miss Athalie Caesar. And two popular young bachelors, Frank Osborne Elliott and Alexander Knott, will become benedicts.

Mr. Elliott, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rumsey Elliott of the Drake hotel, and his attractive fiancée, Miss Edith Rammelkamp of Jacksonville, Ill., plan to be married on April 4 in Jacksonville. Miss Rammelkamp and her mother, Mrs. Henry Rammelkamp, have been in Chicago visiting the brideto-be's uncle, Dr. George E. Shambaugh, on the south side, and at the same time meeting many of Mr. Elliott's friends. Young Mr. Elliott was working in Jacksonville when their engagement was made known, but he since has returned to Chicago to engage in business.

Miss Rammelkamp and Mr. Elliott have selected an apartment on Commonwealth avenue.

Mr. Knott is leaving tomorrow for a short visit with his fiancée, Miss Constance Burtenshaw, and her parents, the William Henry Burtenshaws of Detroit, at their winter home near Tryon, N. C. While he is down there the date for their wedding will be set. He will return next Tuesday.

Miss Lamson Will Have Short Vacation.

Miss Lamson, who will be married the middle of April to a young Frenchman, M. Albert de Montgolfier, is leaving March 1 with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Lamson, to spend two weeks at the Jokake inn in Arizona. She is waiting until they have returned from Arizona to arrange the details of the wedding. M. Montgolfier is arriving from Paris on April 5.

Miss Lamson's cousin, Count Giovanni Cardelli, will serve as best man, and Miss Jean Lamson will attend her sister. Because of Count Cardelli's inclusion in the wedding party, it means that he and his wife, who are living in North Egremont, Mass., will be here for the event.

The chapel of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston will be the setting for the wedding of Miss Avery and William Steele Turner on the evening of Saturday, March 14. Afterward there will be a small reception for relatives and close friends at the home of Miss Avery's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Herbert Avery, 1217 Michigan avenue, Evanston. Mr. Turner, now also an Evanstonian, is the son of Mrs. William Steele Turner of Avondale, Pa.

Miss Eleanor Cheney and Robert Graves have decided on May 23 as the date of their wedding. The ceremony will take place at Christ church, where both have worshiped since childhood, but just who will be in their wedding party will be undecided until they hear from several out of town friends who were their classmates at Harvard and Bryn Mawr.

Caesar-McIntosh Nuptials This Month.

Miss Athalie Caesar and Arthur T. McIntosh Jr. will be married on the evening of Wednesday, Feb. 26, in the First Congregational church of Evanston. The wedding will be a large one, and a smaller group of friends and relatives will motor up to the Indian Hill club for the reception afterward.

Miss Doris Caesar will be her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Jane McIntosh, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Elizabeth Fisher, Miss Letitia Bear, and Miss Marion Hedrick, who were at Northwestern university with Miss Caesar. Gilbert McIntosh will be best man for his brother, and Eugene Green, Way Thompson, Robert Joslin, and Hunter Hicks will usher.

Tomorrow evening the ushers will be hosts to the bridal party at dinner in the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel. Friday evening Mr. McIntosh will have his bachelor dinner at the Barrington Hills Country club, and Friday evening Orville S. Caesar, father of the bride-to-be, will give the bridal dinner at the Palmer house, with dancing in the Empire room afterward. Miss McIntosh will give the spinster dinner Monday evening at her home in Kenilworth.

Mr. McIntosh will take his bride to Jamaica on their honeymoon. They will be at home in an apartment in Evanston after April 1.

Robinson Wedding at Cleveland Heights.

Chicago will be welcoming a bride in the person of Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson Jr., some time after the middle of March. Mr. Robinson and Mrs. Annabel Albright Wilson are being married at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at Wade Park Manor house in Cleveland Heights, O., and are going to Bermuda on a wedding trip before returning to Chicago.

The bridegroom's twin brother, Sanger P. Robinson, and their parents and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson and Mrs. Ronald P. Boardman, are in Cleveland for the wedding which will be attended by members of the immediate families only. The bride is the daughter of John E.

Mr. Campbell is a graduate of the Boys' Latin school and of Northwestern university.

Front Views and Profiles

SOME Winnetka folk have some colored servitors — a couple who have been with them for a long time. John, the husband, who has been of a jovial and somewhat talkative disposition, has become moody of late and spends all his spare time reading Ethiopian war dispatches and poring over military maps. When he is drawn into any conversation about the war he refers to Ethiopia as "the old country."

PROBABLY no birthday celebration in her whole life will offer for her the thrill a little Chicago girl got on her tenth anniversary last Saturday afternoon. Perhaps you saw her yourself at the Blackstone, a slim child with dancing eyes wearing a ruby velvet dress with a ribbon tied about her fair hair, sitting at a table at the edge of the dance floor. Instead of the birthday party offered her she begged to be taken to see the De Marcos dance, and in reserving the table her mother asked for one near the dance floor, and explained why. When the birthday party entered, the orchestra played "Happy Birthday to You." A birthday cake with lighted candles was brought in; Tony De Marco announced that he was dancing especially for his little friend, and said her name, and both the dancers bowed and threw kisses to her when they concluded their number. Her 11 year old brother was in the birthday party of four, which included her mother and her godmother, and he was unselfishly pleased about it all. But more actively happy himself when it turned out that Roscoe Turner was sitting a few tables away, and he was introduced to him.

SPEAKING of birthdays, when the 3 year old son of F. G. Jewett, who recently moved to Chicago from New Canaan, Conn., was asked by his father what he wanted for his birthday, answered promptly: "A sled . . . and a hill."

* *

A GIRL named Eva Altman was cheered up on her way to work a few mornings ago when she saw an old Italian shoveling snow near 500 Randolph street singing, with great cheeriness, "La Donna e Mobile" from "Rigoletto."

* *

WHEN the young son in a Chicago family, Hans Levy, was to play a piano concerto in a student recital the maid in the family asked to be allowed to go to hear him. The boy's father played second piano, in place of the orchestra. Next day the maid made no comment about the performance until asked if she had not been proud of the young son of the house. She sniffed superciliously and answered:

"He practices and practices and practices, and yet when he plays it in public he has to have his father helping him."

Nighties Are Streamlined and in Lovely Tints.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Tempting lingerie tips for the brides-to-be! Quite a few of them have found these lingerie collections and are busily taking the newest confections right out for the trousseau trunks. Nightgowns that are just about the most perfect affairs imaginable, made with flattering streamlines and unusual high necklines, trimmed with lovely laces, and some that look so French that one waits for a price mark that will make them prohibitive. When the modest amount is finally believed, the buying really begins.

Color is the smartest thing you can own, luscious, delicious tints—an aquamarine for "coppertops," with the same possibilities for blondes and brunettes, coral, a decidedly French cerise, powdery blues, flesh tones, and a perfect gray called pussy willow. Lots of them are made with exquisitely fashioned yoke and necklines of fragile lace dyed to match exactly the color of the chiffon and ninon. Others are so cut and fashioned that they can easily be used for summer dance dresses in time of need, having wide sashes of ribbon or contrasting sashes of velvet encircling the waistlines and streaming down the back to the floor. These have short cap sleeves that flutter, usually high front necklines and square cut backlines.

Printed chiffons with yards of microscopic ruffles as the only trimming come in white or black backgrounds, with gay small floral motifs supplying the color contrast. There's a black flowered affair that is so good to look at it ought to sell itself a dozen times or more. There are some coral dotted white silks with scalloped edges to the top that look like a valentine and some simple tailored models ready to be monogrammed while you wait, which is a very new stunt and going strong among the lingerie buyers who want to be sure of their possessions. Sleek satin beauties destined for trousseaux come in colors as well as white and flesh and are particularly effective for this monogramming urge.

Friends of China See Bamboo Treasure from Ancient Tomb

In a leisurely fashion appropriate to China, the timeless, Mis, Lucy Driscoll yesterday afternoon took the American Friends of China on an art tour that began with excavations of second century tombs in Corea, and progressed to the paintings of "moderns" of 17th century Peiping and South China.

The John Alden Carpenters' drawing room with its Ming paintings was a fitting background for the talk, which Miss Driscoll illustrated by slides. Chief among the treasures she showed was a bamboo box taken from a second century tomb, so precious that it is exhibited fleetingly with a cloth held before it to keep it from fading.

Adorning the box are four inch high figures exemplifying filial devotion. On the sides of their faces a black line invariably appears, and the audience suggested variously that this indicated they were wearing masks or possibly bands to keep mandarin hats in place, but no authority would venture to settle the question.

Through the Looking Glass

Here's a business girl whose example we all might follow. She keeps in her desk a flat little makeup kit, packed with harmonious beauty aids, that's a life saver when she wants to freshen her face and restore drooping spirits. It's a bargain, too.

Now's your chance, all you business girls, to own a makeup box chock full of things that are good for your face and your grooming. It will cost you only a little bit, and with it tucked in your desk you've everything you need for freshening your face and your spirits within hand's reach.

These boxes are especially packed to meet individual requirements of coloring, which means that you'll be able to have every item of your makeup harmonious. It's all been worked out by experts.

Here's what's in the flat little boxes: a cream for powder base; a skin tonic that's marvelous for promoting that important clean feeling; powder; cream rouge—the nice spready kind in beautiful, true shades; a little lipstick to echo the rouge shade; finishing lotion, and eyebrow pencil—and even a jar of that most subtly devastating of all makeup aids, eye shadow! You just can't miss being good looking after you've given your face the benefit of this parade of prize winners.

The cream for the powder base deserves special attention. It's one of the few that really insures a lasting makeup. It's creeping up on all the others in popularity, since it actually will keep your face fresh all around the clock. And this cream, like everything else in the little flat box, is in a tint made to order for your own coloring requirements. Any way you figure it this box of makeup aids is one of the neatest beauty tricks of the year.

We'd like to stress the fact that this box that can be kept in desk or locker is miraculously inexpensive. It's offered for rather a short time, though. Take a tip from us and buy a couple.

'Porgy and Bess' Lends Opera Flavor to Guild's Season in City

Music Unites Themes of Manhattan and the Deep South.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

The music of "Porgy and Bess" is the result of years of effort on George Gershwin's part to unite in a single work two authentic American folk themes. One is a product of Manhattan, the other of the deep south.

The idioms of Tin Pan alley are as much a part of our national lore as the humble folk airs of the Charleston waterfront. On first glance they seem to have no more in common than the fact that they exist on the same continent, but a man adroit enough in the past to have wooed and won such disparate groups as dance mad youngsters and lofty musical formalists has found his cunning more than a match for the problems raised by such a combination.

The music has the old Gershwin rhythmic strength, and much of his melodic line. The composer is as resourceful as ever. He manages to surround his more successful ideas with an aura of passion and importance, yet keep the naive, folklike quality that their background demands. The proficiency of the men who make our popular tunes is in every bar of the work.

Gershwin has evidently been impressed by the spirit rather than the letter of southern folk music. He is chary of actual quotation, but astute enough to make use of two of its most vivid qualities for his score. One is sustained, ecstatic line; the other primitive and almost terrifying pulse.

"Porgy and Bess" is billed as a folk opera. It is no collection of individual numbers separated by spoken dialog, for the work makes less use of this device than many an opera buffa of olden times. The most incongruous remarks are duly provided with their musical settings, and the result, though grotesque at times, is often fascinating.

The two lilting tunes that everybody knows, "I Got Plenty of Nuttin'" and "It Ain't Necessarily So" are more than matched in interest and value by the Crown and Bess duet on the island and the Porgy and Bess business that follows the departure of the divorce lawyer. Perhaps Gershwin does not take as much advantage as he might of the natural qualities of the Negro voice, its mellowness and suavity.

The chorus singing gives an impression of stridency, as does the composer's scoring for the small orchestra the opera uses. Many chances for sheer musical beauty are sacrificed to dramatic vividness and emphasis.

The individual singers are quite satisfactory, although one suspects that some of them are working half an octave above their normal range a good part of the time. Todd Duncan and Anne Brown as the principals displayed excellent vocal equipment and the ability to dramatize their songs without interfering with the flow of the music.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

"Porgy and Bess," which came to Chicago last night to give an operatic flavor to the Theater Guild's season of drama, is the "Porgy" of other years plus George Gershwin, who composes tricky and intricate music for the hyperesthetes of jazz and the connoisseurs of tangled harmonies. It is called a folk opera, but it lacks the simplicity of lyric expression which characterizes typical works in this field. Musically, it is as sophisticated as a cabaret band leader's dream of orchestral bliss. Gershwin has rhapsodized in "blue" so much in the past, perhaps, that he dodges, with highbrow dexterity, every opportunity to write straight folk melodies.

The opera follows the story of the original play faithfully through the various episodes in the love story of Porgy the cripple, Bess the wanton, and Crown the bully and murderer, who are the central figures in this panorama of life on Catfish row, Charleston, S. C. Around these characters are grouped the many other types of the environment—a crowd of picturesque Negroes in their daily joys and sorrows. "Porgy," the play, was a crowded epic, and the opera has absorbed and revived all its atmosphere. Too much of incidental matter, I feel, has been carried over into this operatic adaptation; the action, like the score, lacks clear and simple outline.

The first act is fairly solid melodrama in spite of the gay entrance of Porgy in his goat cart and a harmonized crap game. It contains the slaying of Robbins by the bestial Crown—a fight so stirringly acted by Henry Davis, as the former, and Warren Coleman, as the latter, that Gershwin's accompanying orchestra tempest was completely ignored—at least by this observer. As a drama specialist, I have a way of forgetting about the music when the going in opera gets rough and tumble.

The second scene of the first act is the memorable "wake" over the body of Robbins, in which Gershwin's work seems to me a poor substitute for the authentic "spiritual" singing of the original production. I felt no deep sorrow or religious exaltation in the music. A lack of emotional quality, other than that evoked by strange rhythms and erratic tempos, is evident all through the composition.

The second act, however, strikes a true folk opera pace. Here Catfish

I'll Never Tell

By Roy Vickers

SYNOPSIS.

Julius Saranack was murdered in his home, Hillfoot, near London. Eight uncut diamonds were missing. Torrance Esdale was there the night he was murdered. She'd entered the house secretly to retrieve a letter she'd written Gerald Saranack, Julius' nephew, her childhood sweetheart. Gerald is expected next day with an English governess he'd married in Spain. Torrance had heard voices and, hiding, watched as a girl secreted jewels behind a brick in the fireplace. Next day Torrance meets the girl—she's Annabelle, Gerald's wife, though the couple arrived that morning from Paris. Gerald still loves Torrance, but has been taken in by Annabelle's apparent naiveness and need of protection. Torrance confides in her American employer, Hartlandt Massiter. Julius Saranack was heir to the wealth of his friend, John Ellister, who had also been murdered on the same day, leaving Gerald next in line. Torrance tries to warn Gerald and shows him where the jewels are hidden; he turns them over to Annabelle. In Vanderlem, Annabelle's former employer, Torrance recognizes the rat faced man who'd shadowed her. To save him Torrance elopes with Gerald. Annabelle turns over the diamonds to the police. Gerald is arrested. Torrance braves a motor trip with Vanderlem and to capture him gets arrested for speeding, then accuses him of Julius Saranack's murder. Vanderlem escapes after killing a policeman. Gerald is freed.

INSTALMENT XXXVIII.

THE STRENGTH OF THE WEAK.

"I suppose I ought to be glad you're going at once, after what you've told me. But I shall miss you so dreadfully. . . . I shall come and see you off. And don't laugh if I cry, will you!"

Torrance and Mr. Massiter left the car near the prison and waited in the crowd that was thronging the prison gates.

They had been waiting scarcely ten minutes when a general quickening told them that Gerald was coming. The crowd pressed closer and began to cheer as if at a football match.

Annabelle was clinging to Gerald's arm. They stopped on the steps and she reached up and kissed him. The crowd roared.

"Well, that's the end of the show!" remarked Mr. Massiter as the police got Annabelle and Gerald into a car, which was slowly moving through the crowd in the opposite direction.

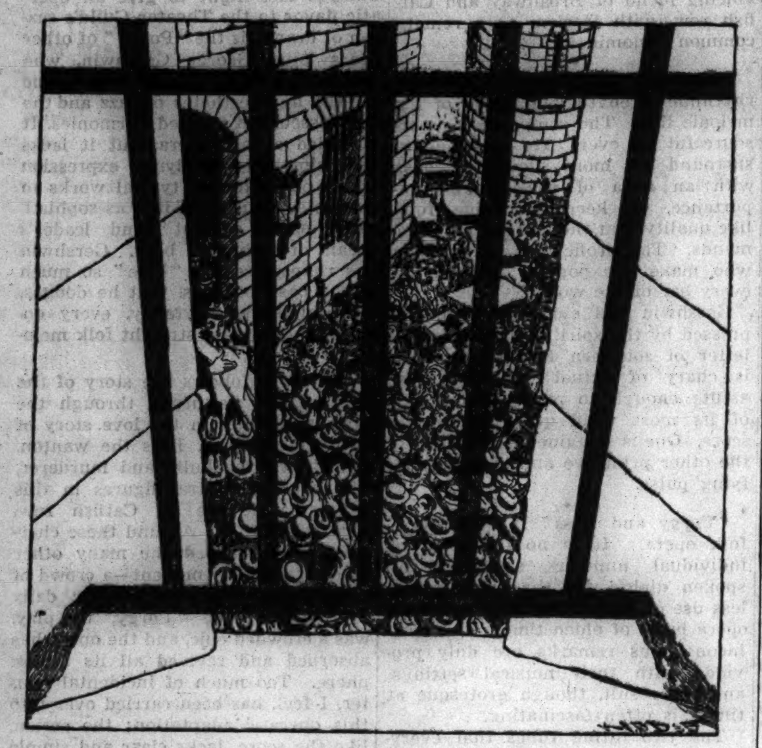
On the drive back Mr. Massiter was so silent that Torrance felt that he attributed too much importance to Annabelle's presence.

"I told you she was going to be there," she remarked.

"I know you did, and I won't say I didn't believe you."

She explained that it was only for the sake of the papers.

"O, yes?" said Mr. Massiter—a phrase which on the other side of the Atlantic does not mean what it says.



She reached up and kissed him. The crowd roared.

His genial temperament had looked forward to some kind of jolly reunion. But a glance at the girl's preoccupied face banished this hope.

"Where am I taking you, my dear?"

"To the flat, please. I'm pretty well played out, Mr. Massiter, and I want to have a rest before Gerald comes."

"To take you back to the river?"

"No. You've only two more clear days. I shall stay in London."

Gerald did not come until after five o'clock. And when he came Torrance was asleep.

In five minutes she had freshened up. She slipped into a walking suit and was ready to go wherever he liked. Her luggage, packed and strapped, littered the floor.

When she came silently into the little sitting room he was sprawling on the sofa.

"Don't look so tired, dear. It's all over!" she said softly.

"Is it?" He did not get up, but grasped her hands and covered them with kisses. "Or is it just beginning?"

He got up, walked to the window and fiddled with the blind, a boyish trick he had never shaken off.

"What are we going to do now?" he flung over his shoulder.

Torrance refused to understand him.

"Anything you like, Gerald."

"No." He jammed the spring of the blind and adjusted it. "If it were as simple as that, I would take you away with me this minute."

So he was not going to take her away! Principles were getting in the way, somewhere.

"When you risked your life with Vanderlem to save mine he didn't know you were the woman in the house, did he? He didn't know until you said so in the police station."

"No."

So that was it! She knew what was coming and it duly came. She readily confirmed his belief that Annabelle and Vanderlem could not have been working together.

Her voice was cool and balanced while somewhere at the back of her head a vein was thudding.

"I understand now—you have to choose between us. And I think you must choose now."

He turned on her almost fiercely.

"You mean I have to come to a decision on my own emotional desires. That's what I did when I married Annabelle. . . . Just look at the result of my letting myself be guided by impulse! Two old men and one policeman murdered. And you and I and Annabelle tied up like this."

That was reasonable, but he always was reasonable. But in some way she could not grasp his reasoning was always out of perspective.

"For she's as much a victim as you and I," he continued. "There's not the smallest doubt that Vanderlem planned the whole thing to make her a rich woman and afterward get her——"

"Yes—so she told me."

"Do you mean you don't believe her?" he demanded.

"She isn't the kind of woman I could ever believe even when she's almost certainly telling the truth."

"Because she isn't your type—any more than she's mine. I admit I loved her after a fashion. For a few days. But I never really liked her. The trouble is, she does like me. And I'm afraid I'll have to say that she also loves me. Do you know that she nearly committed suicide when I was arrested as a result of her accidentally giving the show away over those uncut stones?"

It might be true. But it was another one of the things that Torrance could never believe. Gerald continued to harangue himself.

"It would have been easier if she hadn't been so frightfully decent about it. This afternoon while she was talking of arrangements for fixing a divorce the tears were streaming down her face.

"You and I determined to snatch our happiness because we had every reason to believe that we were justified," he thundered. "We had the strongest possible grounds, amounting then to certainty, that she was standing in with Vanderlem. We built a house of cards. And the whole thing has collapsed as a result of what you found out from Vanderlem."

"Gerald, dear," cried Torrance, "don't make an essay of it. Just choose. If you choose Annabelle it'll hurt like the devil, but there'll be no grievance and I shan't consider that you've broken faith with me."

"It would hurt her like the devil, too, if I do—what I want to do. You are so strong—and she is so weak. You love me as she never could. But you will never need me—as she needs me."

Some one inside Torrance's brain was laughing wildly and screaming that her damnable efficiency and strength, which had driven him to Annabelle to start with, was driving him back to her now.

But Torrance herself was standing very still, nodding gravely as a judge is believed to nod.

"Quite right, Gerald! I'm strong. I can stand up to anything. It's the part of me that's always put you off just a little bit, isn't it!"

"Torrance!"

"O, yes, Gerald! You know that I'm going through the hoop now. But you also know that when you have left the flat I shall pull myself together and go for a brisk walk and take a sensible view. Goodby, dear Gerald! Please go—quickly."

She did not wait for him to go, but hurled herself into the bedroom. Gerald had never seen her cry.

GASOLINE ALLEY—FROM THE SIDE LINES

Recipes Rescue Whites of Egg Left in Lurch

BY MARY MEADE.

Today it's the leftover egg whites which beg sympathy and attention. How to come out even when anywhere from one to six egg whites are deserted by their yolks sometimes seems more of a problem than taking care of the extra yolks we talked about yesterday.

Meringue is the usual first thought. These few points are handy to remember, whether it's a meringue concoction or one of the others:

1. Eight to ten egg whites measure 1 cup.

2. Two tablespoons of sugar [or two of confectioner's and one of granulated usually are used for each egg white in a meringue.

3. Leftover whites may be hard-cooked in the cups of an egg steamer, then sliced and cut for garnishing or for salads.

4. Three egg whites thicken 1¼ cups of milk for an "angel" custard.

5. Four egg whites will emulsify 1 cup of oil for mayonnaise.

One White Almond Macaroons.

1 egg white
Few grains salt
1 cup confectioner's sugar
1 cup chopped blanched almonds
⅛ teaspoon almond extract

Beat the white until frothy. Add salt and continue beating until stiff. Add sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Fold in the nuts and flavoring. Drop from spoon onto greased cookie sheet and bake in slow oven, 250 degrees F., for 25 minutes, until delicately browned.

Two White Cider Mallobet.

24 marshmallows
1½ cups sweet cider
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons sugar
2 egg whites
Few grains salt

Melt marshmallows in half the cider over hot water. Cool, add remaining cider, lemon juice, and half the sugar. Cool until partly stiffened. Add remaining sugar and salt to egg whites, beat stiff, fold into cider mixture, and freeze rapidly in mechanical refrigerator.

Three White Peanut Fluff.

1 pint heavy cream
3 egg whites
1 pound peanut brittle, crushed

Whip cream and egg whites separately. Fold crushed peanut brittle into cream, then fold in egg whites. Chill and serve as emergency dessert, either plain or as topping for plain white or sponge cake.

Four White Angel Custard.

1 2-3 cups milk
5 tablespoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
4 egg whites
⅛ teaspoon almond flavoring

Combine the scalded milk, sugar and salt, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Beat whites slightly, and pour milk over them. Add flavoring and pour into custard cups. Set in pan of hot water and bake in slow oven for 30 minutes, or until an inserted knife comes out clean.

Five White Baked Prune Whip.

2 cups cooked prune pulp
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
5 egg whites

Add sugar to hot prune pulp. Cook together for 5 minutes. Cool and add lemon juice. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Turn into buttered baking dish, set in pan of hot water, and bake 45 minutes in slow oven. Serve hot or cold with whipped cream.

Six White Honey Angel Food.

½ cup sugar
⅓ cup cake flour
6 egg whites
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup strained honey
⅛ teaspoon flavoring

Sift sugar and flour together 5 times. Beat whites until frothy and add salt and cream of tartar. Continue beating until stiff, but not dry. Add honey slowly, beating in each addition. Fold in flour and sugar in fourths. Add flavoring and bake in ungreased tube pan for 50 minutes at 325 degrees F.

Overweight Is Detrimental to One's Vitality

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Perhaps one does not hear quite so much reducing conversation these days. Perhaps one is permitted a fairly generous allowance of "plush" for her frame. But there is no question that the woman who has let herself run to seed, speaking in terms of weight, is not enjoying life as are other women. She dislikes herself heartily and the good nature that has come to be axiomatic with the fat person is not her favorite exhibition. Indeed, often the reverse nature is what she shows, sometimes to the point of unbridled meanness.

There is nothing truer than that you simply have to be all right with yourself before you begin enjoying any of the peace and comfort allotted to human beings. Whether it is fat or another kind of vice, before you can hope to present yourself beautifully and with complete composure you must get rid of the vice. Certain overweight women, I know, will confront me with attacking them unfairly when I call fat a vice. And certain women, let me say right here, would be justified in so doing. Their obesity may be of glandular origin, over which they themselves have little control. But even here medical intervention may be sought to stop the gaining or reduce the spreading frame.

Such women, however, I have not in mind at all when I speak of superfluous fat as a vice. It is those women only who make a vice of eating and drinking and sitting time away to which reference is made.

For a time, as you know, a well padded frame was promised a revival. It was a bright hope for the indolent while it lasted. But it didn't last. I doubt if ever again we will see the return of the overstuffed figure as a popular fad. It isn't entirely the dress appearance either that dominates this decision. It is the way the woman herself feels when she is bowed down with unnecessary weight. Remember, I am speaking of the twenty, thirty, and more pounds excess. Not a few pounds over, which in certain mature cases may be more becoming than the terribly underplowed form with all supporting tissue removed.

It's that heavy feeling that the fat woman herself deplores, her general slowing up mentally and physically, and, indeed, I might say, her disintegration as far as her general appearance is concerned. That really determines the verdict against the overplump figure.

The George S. Rasmussens have opened their Palm Beach villa, Casa Nana, and with one of their two sons, George Jr., are occupying it for the remainder of the season.

According to CULBERTSON

OBITUARY.

It is my peculiar niche in life to create new methods of playing contract bridge for between twenty and thirty million people in all parts of the world. Of course, my principal job is to codify into one system the best bids and plays of all great players. I am working at all times, however, to lift the game out of the rut into which it occasionally falls, and from time to time I have the privilege of announcing the birth of a new bid. Now I am reversing my role long enough to announce the death of a bid.

Last year I introduced into the Culbertson system a conventional means of showing a void suit. If your partner opened the bidding with one heart and you bid three spades or four diamonds [two more than necessary] it showed not a genuine suit but, on the contrary, a void in the suit you bid.

Technically this bid was perfectly sound and often proved to be the only way to reach a distributional slam bid. In actual practice it had two tremendous drawbacks. It occurred so seldom that the gain through using such a bid could not be more than a few hundred points in the course of an entire year's play. When it did occur the players were as likely as not to have forgotten it. It takes mental effort to remember that when your partner makes a high bid in spades he has no spades at all. The result was that the bid, seldom used at best, was apt to cause tragedies when the rare opportunities for its use came up. The opening hand would raise his partner's void suit, and then the fun would begin.

So let the void showing bid be relegated to the scrap heap. May it rest in peace.

Solid Suits.

For years I have been trying, aided by my associates, to put the opening bid of three to some practical use, and the result—the two-way three bid—is to be described in my forthcoming book. It is probable that a three bid, when used as in the example given above—which used to show a void but now does no longer—can be put to the same use. Why not let all such three bids show primarily a solid, or nearly solid, suit, together with a minimum of seven sure winners? Testing this use of the bid two of my associates steered the bidding out of the wrong contract and into the right one in the deal below:

NORTH

North bid one club, East one heart, and South one spade. Eventually the contract wound up with South playing the hand at four spades. North, not knowing that he could run seven spade tricks and two aces at no trump, was afraid to insist on no trump. South, not knowing that the hearts were securely stopped, thought his chances would be better at spades. At four spades South is defeated one trick.

My associates, trying the bid I had just explained to them, used the three bid to show a solid suit. North bid one club, East one heart, and South three spades. North, seeing nine sure tricks at no trump and not being sure of game in spades, bid three no trump. South passed, since he had told the truth about his hand and trusted North's judgment of the best final contract. The contract was made, of course. While complete testing of this bid has not been effected, it is not unlikely that it eventually will be in use among the best players and the millions who follow them.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: I have heard rumors that the laws of contract bridge recently have been changed and that the scoring is now different. Is this true?

Answer: Emphatically no! The laws and scoring introduced in March last year have not been changed and probably will not be for years.

'Porgy and Bess' Adds Opera to Stage Season

row, readjusted after Crown's flight, was happily preparing for its fishing expeditions and its week-end picnic. The mood is lighter and gayer, and in this vein Gershwin is a captivating composer. The rowing song, led by Edward Matthews, and Porgy's expression of peace with the world, "I Got Plenty of Nuthin'," are admirable numbers. A comic lawyer lyrically selling Bess the divorce papers she doesn't need, acted by J. Rosamond Johnson, also adds to the charm of the passage.

'TOP HAT' AUDIENCE

With almost as much formality as a grand opera opening in the Civic Opera house, the American folk opera, "Porgy and Bess" was given its Chicago première. In addition to the inveterate "first nighters," the audience included most of society who are not vacationing away from Chicago's low temperatures and snow, for the board of the North Side Animal Shelter had taken over half of the main floor and the boxes as a benefit. Consequently it was a decidedly "top hat" audience that filled the theater.

Among the prompt arrivals were the Philip Mahers—she was one of the committee in charge of the benefit—and their guests who were Mrs. Merrill Hubbard, William McCormick Blair, Tom Furness, and the young Arthur Bissells.

The senior Byron Harveys had with them the Vaughan Spaldings, the George Ranneys, Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin, and Robert Doyle. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker and Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham were together and not far from them sat the John Alden Carpenters.

One of the most admired box parties was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Kirk for their house guests, Maj. and Mrs. Melvin Hall of Washington, D. C., for Mrs. Kirk is one of Chicago's loveliest looking women and Mrs. Hall is one of the capital's noted beauties.

The Chauncey B. Blairs, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, the Orville Taylors, Robert F. Carr, Emil Wetten, Miss Peggy Hambleton, beaued by Jack Murphy and Walter Frazier, the Walter Paepckes, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Adams, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, the Charles H. Swifts, Miss Alice Roullier, the Richard Bekums, and Arthur Meeker Jr. were among others who attended the performance.

Blouse Has Graceful Lines

WOMAN'S AND MISS' BLOUSE.

Your spring suit will demand its share of blouses of various fabrics and colors. With this pattern, No. 2580, meeting this requirement will not be difficult. You don't have to be an expert seamstress. This blouse is cut on the simplest possible lines, acquiring its smartness with fullness provided by waistline tucks, cowl neckline, and shirring at the armholes. The latter feature facilitates the sewing process immensely, since it is not necessary to match seam to seam carefully in fitting the sleeve into the shoulderline. The shirring takes care of this, besides contributing feminine softness to the style of the blouse.

Any plain or printed silk crêpe will be suitable. The color will, of course, depend upon that of your suit. Smart women this spring will be wearing blouses of contrasting shades to enhance their ensembles.

Style No. 2580 is designed for sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 2 yards of 39 inch material.

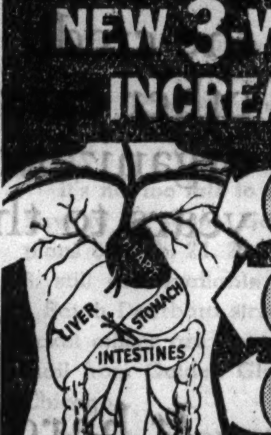
THOUSANDS AMAZED HOW NEW 3-WAY TREATMENT INCREASES WEIGHT



1 Rich, red blood necessary to carry proper nourishment to build up every part of the body, is especially promoted by the easily absorbed iron in this new discovery.

2 A healthy digestion which gets ALL the good out of the food you eat, requires an adequate supply of Vitamin B. This new discovery supplies this precious element.

3 Normal, regular elimination to remove poisonous waste and thereby promote health and growth, requires adequate Vitamin B. This is the third important purpose.

SCIENCE PROVES IT'S UNNECESSARY FOR THOUSANDS TO BE SKINNY

Posed by professional models

Gains of 10 to 25 pounds in a few weeks, reported

DON'T think you're "born" to be skinny and friendless. Thousands of people with this new, easy treatment have gained pounds of solid, normally attractive flesh—in just a few weeks!

Not only has this new 3-way discovery quickly brought normally good-looking pounds, but also naturally clear skin, freedom from miserable indigestion and constipation, new pep.

Scientists recently discovered that thousands of people are thin and rundown for the single reason that they do not get enough digestion-strengthening Vitamin B and blood-enriching iron in their daily food. Now the richest known source of body-building Vitamin B is cultured ale yeast. By a new process the finest imported cultured ale yeast is now concentrated 7 times, making it 7 times more powerful. Then it is combined with 3 kinds of iron in pleasant little tablets known as Ironized Yeast tablets.

If you, too, need these vital elements to build you up, get these new triple-acting Ironized Yeast tablets from your druggist today. Then day after day as you take them, watch flat chest develop and skinny limbs round to natural attractiveness. Constipation and indigestion from the same cause vanish, skin clears to normal beauty—you're an entirely new person.

Try it—guaranteed

No matter how skinny and rundown you may be, try these new Ironized Yeast tablets just a short time, and note the marvelous change. See if they don't build you up in just a few weeks, as they have thousands. If you are not delighted with results of very first package, your money back instantly.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out seal on box and mail it to us with a clipping of this offer. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body." Remember, results guaranteed with the very first package—or your money refunded. Sold by all good druggists. Keen Interest of Adult Vital Need of Child

Lacking It, He Uses Tricks to Gain Attention.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Have you ever heard that rather antique but favorite joke of mine about the man who was haled into court for assaulting a woman who was giving a séance? In reply to the judge's question of why he hit the woman, the man replied, "I had always wanted to strike a happy medium."

Parents need to strike a happy medium—not in the spiritualist's parlor—but in the quality and quantity of attention they give their children.

What is teasing sometimes due to? A need for attention, by fair means or foul.

Now, this desire for attention is not reprehensible. Within bounds, it is a natural, a necessary, and a quite human craving.

If a child is conscious of a warm and loving attention, if he feels his place in the sun of his parents' regard secure, he will not be driven to use these negative devices of mealtime cutups, the "wet habit," showing off, teasing, and all the other endless, ingenuous and ingenious, maddening, provoking subterfuges to gain that thing which is essential to his ego—regard for himself. But, freed of the necessity for exacting tribute to himself as a person, he can turn his attention towards more interesting and more developing and more constructive outlets.

Some parents smother their children in a welter of solicitude, their love showing itself unwisely. Others hesitate to give the child the attention that it is instinctive for them to bestow. Still others are too restrained in temperament or too cold to assure their children of their warm place in their affections.

It is the wise parent who is able to strike the happy medium, and the fortunate child who can use his energies in other ways than as devices for getting attention.

"How to Establish Good Sleeping Habits and Cure Bad Ones" is the name of a fully written leaflet which is sent out by this department on receipt of a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

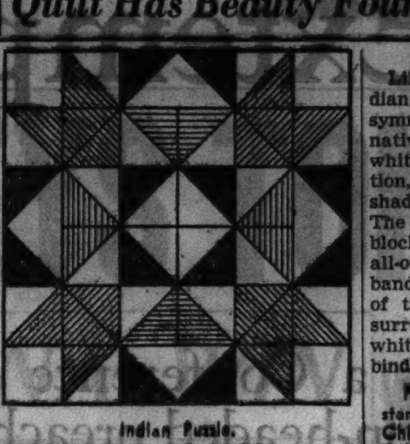
Quilt Has Beauty Found in Indian Arts



Indian Puzzle.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Like the other Indian designs, "Indian Puzzle" has all the beauty and symmetry found in every type of the native American art. Rose, pink, and white form a modified color combination, the original of which was two shades of red and unbleached muslin. The entire quilt is composed of pieced blocks which are set together in an all-over design of red, with cross bands of the darker red, and arrows of the light color. The blocks are surrounded by a 4 inch border of white, and edged in a one-half inch binding of red.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Mrs. Pauline Palmer Wins Artist Medal

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The gold medal of the Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors has been awarded to Pauline Palmer for her interesting painting of a Negro woman in the current exhibition by members of the association in the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue.

This is the first time this much coveted prize has gone to a woman artist. Mrs. Palmer has nearly won the award on several occasions, but each time the winds of chance have freakishly blown the glory from her on multitudinous secret balloting. Now finally the gold medal is hers, and the award is unanimously conceded to be one of the best in many seasons.

The Art institute is announcing a change in schedule for its two annual print exhibitions. Instead of holding the international exhibition of etching and engraving in the spring, followed by the international exhibition of lithography and wood engraving in the fall of each year, there will be only one annual print exhibition beginning this year.

The two exhibitions will be alternated year by year. For instance, next autumn will find the fourth international etching and engraving exhibit in the print galleries and the autumn of 1937 will see the sixth international lithography and wood engraving exhibit there.

The change has been considered wise in order to allow artists more time for the creation of new work and in the hope that a wider international representation may be secured by concentrating on a single exhibition each year.

An exhibit of etchings by Arthur W. Heintzelman, American, is current in the O'Brien galleries, 673 North Michigan avenue. Some fifty plates are on view, including some of his best known work.

The first exhibition of a new variety of print may be found in the school lobby of the Art institute where a group of pochoir [stencil] prints is installed. Three Cleveland artists, Geoffrey Archibald, Dorothy Rutka Kennon, and Richard M. Halls are responsible for the work.

An Extemporaneous Sermon That Took Sixty Years to Prepare

There was a Conference of ministers in a certain town. One lion-headed preacher had sat quietly through it for a number of days until, toward the end, he was suddenly and unexpectedly called upon to speak. He arose thoughtfully and almost stumblingly fumbled for his words. Finally his thoughts took form, his words fell into the rhythm of a marching column, and his impassioned oratory beat down upon the upturned faces of his audience until, as he rose to his peroration and reached his climax, the whole sedate Conference broke into a spontaneous applause that shook the room.

He had delivered the master oration of the Conference.

When finally the applause subsided, a cocky young D.D. strolled up to him.

"That was a masterly address you delivered without preparation," he said. "How long did it take you to prepare it?"

The older man looked gently for some time at the younger one before he answered. And then:

"Sixty years, young man," he said. "Sixty years."

* * * * * *

So it is that the world takes cognizance only of the finished product, whether it be institution or individual, and forgets the long intervening years of preparation in which the activities must have been right and the thinking sound in order that the outcome may receive the enthusiastic acknowledgment of the people who count.

Bell Telephone, General Electric, General Motors, U. S. Steel, and a dozen others, manned by groups or individuals, are American Institutions now that are, for the most part, spoken of as impersonally as one speaks of the Law of Gravity. Even with so highly a personalized institution as Ford, the word is referred to and thought of half the time as a common noun and not as the name of an individual. And as for U. S. Steel, nobody even remembers that this great institution was once no more than the dream of a young Chicago lawyer named Elbert Gary.

* * * * * *

Toward the end of the year 1935 Macfadden Publications, without any particular fanfare of trumpets, announced the largest voluntary* magazine circulation in the world, a circulation far in excess of six million voluntary (single copy) sales, and a total net paid circulation pretty close to eight million.

Macfadden further announced that practically all of this circulation is in a new field, virtually untouched by old magazines, and therefore reaching and making articulate a vast new market for American wares.

And within a few days after this announcement an important executive head of a large advertising agency came over to look into this Macfadden organization and, not in the slightest unnaturally, to try to draw his conclusions as to whether this "sudden" accession to leadership is sound.

No, not in the least unnaturally, because like all institutions that have slowly and quietly grown to leadership the intervening years are forgotten and, for the moment, the new picture seems a bit unreal.

During those forty years every Macfadden magazine has paid its bills and remained solvent. Like other institutions that arrive at leadership, its progress has had to be steady, its thinking sound.

More than two hundred thousand people now gain their livelihood in part or in whole from Macfadden Publications. Macfadden himself has laid down a Foundation fund of five million dollars, devoted to the welfare of generations to come. A comparatively small Foundation, but a very substantial one.

Also, like other institutions, Macfadden Publications have maintained a substantial relationship with their own personnel. The average tenure of office of our executives is over eighteen years. A number of our offices scattered throughout America have had no change in their personnel, from salesmen to executives, even during the past seven years.

This maintenance of executive organization over a long period of time is not always possible even amongst the biggest of institutions. Upsets of major importance do occur. In our case, the maintenance of a strong organization has probably merely been due to greater good fortune. But it has been of tremendous value in the credit column of stability. It is in this wise, and by other careful measures of progress and thinking, that all organizations do come up through long intervening years to their positions in leadership.

* * * * * *

It hardly seems possible that the first Macfadden magazine to sense this new American ideal of a participating world, this new relationship between mass producer and mass consumer, is now approaching its first quarter of a century; and that other Macfadden magazines that picked up this new theme in American life have long since passed their first decade.

Today manufacturing America, in practically every line of production, has the largest institution of its kind in the world. And Macfadden Publications have the largest voluntary magazine circulation in the world; all, like other great institutions, built within the field of its own endeavor; and like other great institutions, constituting a tremendous and definite factor of its own—

The Macfadden Market.

ILLINOIS' RALLY BEATS N. U., 39-38; IOWA, INDIANA WIN

THE GUMPS—A LITTLE ENCOURAGEMENT (VERY LITTLE).

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.: Copyright, 1936, by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

COMBES LEADS 2D HALF ATTACK AGAINST PURPLE

Illini Five Trails at Intermission, 24-16.

Illinois' second half rally defeated Northwestern, 39 to 38, at Patten gymnasium last night. After trailing, 24 to 16, at the half, the Illini assumed the lead midway in the second period and then staved off a Wildcat drive in the final minutes to retain a one point margin.

Illinois' superiority in shooting free throws proved the turning point of the game since Northwestern scored 17 field goals to 13 for Illinois. The visitors, however, connected with 13 out of 18 free throws while Northwestern made good on but four out of nine.

Combes Leads Victors.

Harry Combes, junior forward, led the Orange and Blue attack in the last half, scoring four of his five field goals in that period and rallying his teammates with a brilliant piece of ball handling and passing in the closing minutes, when Northwestern threatened to take the lead.

Northwestern jumped into a four point lead in the first minute of play on a pair of baskets by Trenkle and Smith, both of them tip in shots from under the basket. Vopicka and Henry made good on a free throw each, but the Wildcats pulled away on Trenkle's short shot from the foul line and Smith's goal from the side to run the score to 8 to 2.

Henry Starts Rally.

Henry started the Illini off on a rally with a pair of field goals in succession which, followed by Vopicka's two free throws, tied the score at 8 to 8. McMichaels and Trenkle both added free throws to break the tie and put the Purple out in front.

Trenkle tossed in a goal from far out but Henry retaliated with a similar shot to run the count to 12 to 10. The Wildcats then unleashed a flurry of scoring which netted eight consecutive points. The points accrued from two baskets each by McMichaels and Trenkle.

N. U. Ahead at Half.

Braun stopped the Purple rampage by dribbling half the length of the floor to score. Vopicka and Combes came through with two field goals to narrow the Wildcats' advantage to 20 to 16 only to have McMichaels make two long shots to run the count to 24 to 16 at half time.

Bob Riegel, lanky center, started the Illini off on the scoring spree that ended in overtaking the Wildcats. He batted the ball in from underneath the basket to bring the count to 28 to 18. It was the first of nine straight points scored by Illinois, leaving them trailing 28 to 25. McMichaels, who led the scoring for the evening with 13 points, then scored his sixth and final basket. Combes retaliated by dribbling the length of the court to score, and Vopicka followed with a tip in shot to bring the count to 30 to 29.

Illinois Takes Lead.

Smith dropped in a goal from the side to widen the gap but it proved unavailing as three successive baskets by Combes, Vopicka, and Henry gave Illinois the lead for the first time at 35 to 32.

Trenkle hit one from the side to

Dizzy Dean Rejects Offer of $18,500

The oratorical Jerome, elder of the pitching brothers, mailed back to the St. Louis Cardinals a contract calling for $18,500—his last year's salary—and announced he was out for a substantial boost in pay.

In a long distance telephone call Dizzy, teaching at a baseball school at Hot Springs, Ark., said:

"I didn't mention any amount as my rock bottom, lowest possible figure, but I kinda like the sound of $40,000 and got a notion that I'll start with that if we get to talkin' any more about contract.

It's Up to Cardinals.

"Now it's up to the Cardinals to make the next move. I'm gettin' in shape down here and I'm feelin' fine and Old Diz ain't goin' to do any worryin'.

"I thought I was goin' to be a holdout soon, and here I am."

The Cardinal pitcher also said he had replied to a letter in which he said Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals, charged him with responsibility for losing the 1935 pennant.

"I told Mr. Rickey that if he felt that way about me, he should go ahead and trade me to any club in the league—Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Boston, or any old place—and that I would bet him my whole year's salary that the club he traded me to would beat out the Cardinals in 1936."

Branch Rickey Replies.

Rickey, informed of his star hurler's statement tonight, said Dizzy had misquoted his letter.

"The letter did not say the things that Dean alleges it said," Rickey declared. "I would suggest that the best possible course for him, now that he has quoted from the letter, and quoted incorrectly, would be to give the entire letter to the press."

CANADIENS AND BLACKHAWKS TO BATTLE TONIGHT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 17.—The Chicago Blackhawks, with a safe hold of a full game on second place in the American section of the National Hocky league after having been on the brink of the cellar, will arrive here tomorrow morning for their battle with the Canadiens at the Forum tomorrow night.

The Hawks, although holding game margins for the season over most of the other league teams, have found the Canadiens a nemesis. With four games already played against the Frenchmen, the Chicagoans have not been able to do better than a victory, a defeat, and two ties.

Loughlin Chooses Lineup.

Manager Clem Loughlin plans to send his ablest forward trio of Doc Romnes, Paul Thompson, and Mush March into the starting lineup, with Mike Karakas, Earl Seibert, and Art Wiebe back of them. Clem also may present an all-French line for the Montreal natives, including Eddie Ouellete at center, Louie Trudell at left wing, and Wildor Larochelle at right wing.

The Canadien battle is not the only one of the road trip for the Hawks, for after tomorrow's game they will entrain for New York, where they will meet the Rangers at the Garden Thursday evening. With the American section race being what it is at the moment the Hawks, Rangers, and Bruins can ill afford to lose a game. This is particularly true of the Rangers, who have never been shut out of the playoffs, and are now only half a game ahead of the Bruins.

See Chance for Lead.

There is a possibility that the Hawks might return to Chicago Friday for their Sunday night game at the Stadium with the Toronto Maple Leafs in first place. This would depend on victories for themselves against the Canadiens and Rangers, while the Detroit Red Wings, who now lead Chicago by a game and a half, are losing at Boston tomorrow night and to the Maroons here Thursday. In this the Hawks are favored, because Boston and the Maroons are each notoriously hard to whip on their home ice.

Similarly the Hawks will be favored to whip the Canadiens tomorrow night since the Frenchmen, already the No. 1 hard luck team of the league, have come down with another run of injuries. After having lost Nels Crutchfield for the season earlier, and old Pit Lepine for a time they are now short of the services of their young goalie, Wilf Cude, who is suffering with influenza.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

POT POURRI.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Feb. 17.—"No Vacancies" is the predominant sign now displayed on apartment buildings and tracts containing groups of cottages for rent to winter tourists. This is a complete change in the situation from a month ago, when many owners were wondering whether they were to have a tenantless season.

Either people were later in coming south this season or the subzero periods drove away many who had not intended to come. At any rate, the person who secures accommodations now is considered fortunate. Few actually are being turned away, but latecomers are accepting what they can get in the way of sleeping quarters instead of what they had visioned.

As an example we cite the experience of the owner, a former Chicagoan now a permanent resident here, of the ten cottages in one of which The Wake ménage holds forth. When we arrived four cottages could be secured. Now there are none, and so many additional applicants he sought to save his caretaker the annoyance and pangs of telling daily callers of the situation.

Accordingly, he asked his wife to go over town and buy one of those attractive little metal "No Vacancies" signs. At the store she was informed "We had a whole lot of them unsold up to three weeks ago, but there are none left." She tried all other similar stores. Same result. Now he's having a sign painted.

A Miami Beach hotel was suspended from the chamber of commerce recently—accused of profiteering. We haven't heard the specific reason, but there was a case last year as an example in point.

The hotel, a medium priced place, was filled, a majority of the rooms at $8 per day, double, European. The peak season rush came. One morning guests found notices in their mail boxes asking possession of their rooms by 6 p. m., owing to "previous reservations.' However, comma, a few could be accommodated at $16 per day thereafter.

Such practices, of course, are frowned upon by chambers of commerce as detrimental to Florida in the future. While high enough at the start, the better class hostelries do not take advantage of guests with interim raises.

Banks and business houses, which observe national holidays, will not be open on Saturday, Washington's birthday. They did not even hesitate on Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12, but business as usual. However, on Robert E. Lee's birthday banks were closed.

CUBS' BATTERY SQUAD HEADS FOR COAST TONIGHT

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Manager Charley Grimm, an assortment of his National league champs, some future champs [he hopes], and a detachment of attachés—a party of 22—will leave the North Western station tonight at 9:30 o'clock bound for the Cub training camp on Catalina Island, Cal.

Nervousness probably will attend the departure, inasmuch as the troupe is scheduled to pass through some of the most snowswept areas in the United States. Then, too, it has been raining quite a bit in southern California. There is no telling how many hardships the high strung athletes might have to undergo before they don their costumes for their first workout.

Lewis to Carry Shovel.

Billeted near the Cub manager will be Coach Johnny Corriden and Dr. Andy Lotshaw, trainer, baggage master and cheer leader. The trio plans to spend the time between here and Los Angeles in thinking up strategems which they expect will help the Cubs win their first repeat pennant since 1908. The party will be shepherded by Robert C. Lewis, Cub traveling secretary. Mr. Lewis has been all atwitter ever since the blizzard and among many other appliances is carrying a personal snow shovel.

The trip to the coast usually is honeymoon time for one or more of the Cubs and the trip which starts tonight will be no exception. Roy Henshaw will have his bride along. Ken O'Dea, a bridegroom of two weeks, will travel en solo.

Others Who'll Make Trip.

Other players who will leave with tonight's squad are Gabby Hartnett, Pitcher Clay Bryant, who spent the first half of last season with the Cubs; Pitcher Hugh Casey, the "Hank Grampp Jr." or batting practice specialist of last year's team; Pitcher Gene Ford, an Iowan who pitched some for Peoria last season; Pitcher John Hutchings, a big Chicago boy who also performed for Peoria last season; Pitcher Clyde Shoun, a lefty who finished the season with the Cubs in 1935 and suffered a busted finger when Manager Grimm drove one at him in batting practice before the first world series game; Pitcher Kenneth Weafer, a New Englander who won a couple of games for Birmingham last year; Catcher Wally Stephenson, the Saluda drummer boy and survivor of the Battle of Pittsburgh, and Billy Her-

McAvoy Stops Jim Smith in Second Round

New York, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Jock McAvoy, British middleweight and light heavyweight champion, scored an easy knockout over Jim Smith of Philadelphia in the second round of their 10 round bout here tonight. The weights were 171 for McAvoy and 159¾ for Smith.

The finish came after 2:22 of fighting in the second round. McAvoy drove Smith into the ropes with vicious lefts and rights, then uncorked a paralyzing left to the jaw that sent the Philadelphian sprawling to the canvas.

Starts Slowly, but——

McAvoy, who is matched to meet John Henry Lewis for the American lightweight title on March 13, was slow to get away tonight, but once he warmed up to his work there was little doubt as to the outcome.

Spotting McAvoy almost 12 pounds Smith surprised the crowd of 5,000 by wading in to capture the first round with a flurry of vicious punching that kept McAvoy on the defensive, had the customers in a frenzy of excitement, and forced the Britisher to cover up continuously during the last minute of the round.

Mr. Smith Tries Hard.

WEST SIDE TO STAGE FINALS; NORTH TO OPEN

You can bank on that for this is the biggest night of all in the fighting that precedes the picking of Chicago's gamest gladiators for THE TRIBUNE'S Tournament of Champions at the Chicago Stadium on Feb. 24, 25, and 26.

The south side will see action in the fourth session of its big sectional meet at White City.

Hold Open Division Bouts.

While plans went forward for this evening's unusually large amount of Golden Gloves activity the boys on the west side were at it again last night. In two rings they waged 89 battles that brought them up to a point where the survivors can scrap tonight for the titles.

The spectators got their first glimpse of the boys who are battling for open division championships. Being more experienced boxers than the novices, they had the crowd in a wild state of excitement.

C. Y. O. Fighters Win.

Bob Doyle was another C. Y. O. open division welterweight to show his powerful punching ability. He knocked Earle Case of Hinsdale out in two rounds.

Al Oddo loomed up as a possible west side lightweight champion when he knocked out Brad Clarkson in a round. It was the second victory Oddo had scored during the evening.

One of the hardest punching affairs brought Bob Wilson, unattached, and Al Urlich of the C. Y. O., together in a middleweight scrap. Wilson, a colored kid, won it but only by the narrowest of margins.

George Trafton personally conducted three of the best amateurs from his famous loop gymnasium to the scene of the struggles. Besides George Nelson they were, Ralph De Marco, a lightweight, and Herman Goldenbert, middleweight. Goldenbert was the only one able to win, and Mr. Trafton announced publicly that the west side boys were the best lot of amateur fighters that have ever been brought together.

HERE'S PERSISTENCE

The spirt of Golden Gloves is a lasting and pleasant experience. Jimmy Dunnington, Union Park featherweight, and Charles Patrick Sr., Coulon gymnasium bantamweight, both colored, will testify to

WEATHER IS BIG TOPIC FOR RACE AT SANTA ANITA

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Weather, jockies, and sixteen thoroughbreds were the subject of much talk today about the richest purse in American turf, the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap to be run next Saturday.

The question of mud and the weather man's hint that it may be a wet week-end develop's one of the interesting angles for the race. A sloppy track might find Azucar, last year's winner, replaced by his stablemate, Dark Winter, recently barred from further entry at Santa Anita because of erratic showing.

Mud Not For Azucar.

Azucar dislikes mud. Dark Winter was entered for the handicap before the recent ruling of the stewards denying this brown six year old further entry, so if Owner Fred M. Alger decides to start Dark Winter instead of Azucar, he will run.

Today it looked like 15 starters next Saturday, but whether the British import Flamenco and the Greentree gelding First Minstrel go to the post will be determined tomorrow by their showing in the Fresno handicap.

Here Are the 16 Prospects.

Horse.	Jocky.	Wt.
Discovery	Johnny Bejshak	130
Flamenco	Al Robertson	120
Azucar	Ed Arcaro	118

BRANNON WINS IN MUD

Miami, Fla., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Brannon, a 4 year old gelding from the barn of Mrs. Charles S. Bromley of Philadelphia, Pa., turned in his first victory in five starts over a track which was the worst in the history of Florida racing. Only two other horses, Col. Edward Bradley's Bird Flower, which finished second, and A. G. Tarn's Colonel Ed, started in the feature event of today's program at Hialeah Park.

Heavy rains during the last week caused the withdrawal of Steel Cutter, Sablin, and Laughing Sun, which were named in the overnight field. Steel Cutter, owned by T. B. Martin, recently established a mile track record of 1:35 1-5 and his withdrawal disappointed the crowd.

Brannon, which covered the seven furlongs in the slow time of 1:29, paid $4.30 in the $2 straight mutuels. Jocky Bobby Merritt took Brannon to the front after the start of the race and finished four lengths in front of Bird Flower.

Cubs' Battery Squad Heads West Tonight

man, who, with Stan Hack, has obtained permission to work out with the battery men the six days before the other fielders arrive.

Pick Up Two at Omaha.

At Omaha the caravan will pick up Charles Wesley Flowers, who was a successful pitcher with the strong Helena, Ark., nine last season, and Catcher Harold Sueme, reported to be quite a fence buster in Pine Bluff, Ark., and environs.

Passage on the boat which will carry the party from Wilmington, Cal., to Avalon, Catalina Island, has been booked for Tex Carleton, Larry French, Fabian Kowalik, Bill Lee, Charley Root, Lon Warneke, Hack, and Clauson Vines, left handed pitcher who won 25 games and lost seven for Jeanerette, La., last season. These men are now in or en route to Los Angeles.

The first squad is due to arrive at Avalon, on the island, at noon Friday. Unless there is a rough sea on the trip over the Catalina channel, the first workout will be held Friday afternoon—mostly leg work. Saturday the lads will start throwing the ball around.

Second Squad Off Monday.

The second squad will leave Chicago next Monday and will have until March 12 to catch up with the pitchers in the island conditioning process.

On March 12 the Cubs will meet the White Sox at Los Angeles in the first of three exhibition games on successive days. At 8 o'clock on the evening of March 15 they will start on their "dawn patrol" tour to Tampa, Fla.

BIG 10 MAY TAKE UP BADGER CASE HERE ON FEB. 29

Western conference faculty representatives may discuss the question of whether the University of Wisconsin's board of regents usurped faculty prerogatives in firing Dr. Clarence W. Spears and Dr. Walter E. Meanwell when the faculty group meets at the University club in Chicago Saturday morning, Feb. 29.

Dr. George A. Works, dean of students at the University of Chicago and chairman of faculty conference committee, left Chicago yesterday to spend a week in Washington on other business. Before leaving he wrote to the representatives of the other nine Big Ten institutions reminding them of the forthcoming meeting, which is for the purpose of discussing radio broadcasting and such other matters as may arise.

Testifying at Madison last Friday, Dr. Works told Wisconsin's regents that in his opinion they would violate the conference policy which vests athletic control in the faculty if they overrode the Badger faculty committee.

Canadian Quintet First Entry in Loyola Tourney

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—After trailing at the half, 14 to 12, Indiana routed Michigan tonight, 37 to 23, for its eighth conference victory in nine games.

Field goals by Gunning and Fechtman sent Indiana into a 16 to 14 lead as the second half started. Johnny Townsend then tied the score, 16 to 16, on free throws, but the Wolverines never again were close to the Hoosiers. Score:

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Capt. Sid Rosenthal, sinking eight baskets and five free throws, led Iowa to a 32 to 25 victory over Wisconsin tonight before nearly 4,000 persons. The victory gave the Hawks seventh place in Big Ten standings and dropped the Badgers to eighth.

The Iowa captain's great performances kept Wisconsin on the defensive most of the game, although long shots by Nick Demark and Gordon Fuller, Badger forwards, tied the score after the second half opened. The Hawks had a 15 to 11 lead at the intermission.

Demark made two lengthy baskets to open the second half, and shortly afterward a basket by Ed Stege, Wisconsin center, tied the score at 17-all. Rosenthal then took charge, scoring four baskets and a pair of free throws to ruin Badger hopes and avenge the defeat handed Iowa recently on the Wisconsin court. Score:

Aunt Jane Remembers.

Now writers have immortalized
The crackling open fire.
They stressed the coziness of home
When freezing winds mount higher;
The comfort of a sturdy roof,
The glow of candlelight—
But, O, the bang of shutters on
A bitter winter night!

The homely wooden shutters
That flanked every window pane;
They shut out heat in summer, and
They smartly turned the rain;
No castle ever safer felt
With entrances oak doored
Than our old family sitting room
When weather stormed and roared.

The stout old shutters held us safe
To home's warm loving breast,
The while they guarded rattlingly
Against the world's unrest;
O, much is owed to open fires
And candlelight, in truth—
But I pay homage to the wooden Shutters of my youth.

Manley's junior basketball team strengthened its lead in the central section of the Chicago Public High School league yesterday by defeating New Phillips, 32 to 16. It was Manley's sixth consecutive victory. Mass and Kadish led Manley's attack, the pair collecting 19 points.

Lindblom Wins, 44-21.

Led by Senka, who scored seven field goals and five free throws, Lindblom triumphed over Washburne, 44 to 21. The victory enabled Lindblom to go into a tie with Harrison Tech for second place in the central division.

SPEARS ARRIVES IN TOLEDO; SEEKS COACHING POST

Toledo, O., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Dr. Clarence W. Spears, dismissed Saturday as head football coach at the University of Wisconsin, arrived today to study the University of Toledo football coaching and athletic directorship vacancy.

The Toledo board of trustees will meet tomorrow to fill the vacancy. President Philip Nash said the election was between Dr. Spears and Charles Wertz, assistant coach and former Ohio Wesleyan back field star. The position pays a salary of $4,000.

Celebron Due Today for Bout with Dublinsky

After two unsuccessful attempts to complete his journey to Chicago by automobile to finish preparations for a 12 round welterweight elimination bout with Harry Dublinsky at Cicero stadium tomorrow night, Billy Celebron of Rockford has been forced to switch to railroad accommodations. The former international Golden Gloves champion, forced to turn back Sunday and again yesterday due to a snow blockade on the highways leading into Chicago, will arrive by train today in time for a workout at Trafton's gymnasium this afternoon, said his manager, Sammy Mandell, former lightweight champion. Dublinsky will conclude drills today at Madison Square loop gymnasium for the match, the winner of which will be given No. 1 ranking by the Illinois boxing commission for a scrap with Champion Barney Ross.

Chairman Joe Triner, of the state commission, and Harold Ryan, gymnasium inspector, yesterday approved the heavyweight fight card at Chicago Stadium Friday. Red Burman, Baltimore, Md., and Billy Treest, Batavia, Ill., are principals in the ten round main event. Four of five matches at six rounds will bring together Cowboy Frank Edgren, Cheyenne, Wyo., and Buddy McArthur, Wheeling, W. Va.; Tom Beaupre, Dallas, Tex., and Bob Tow, Alexandria, Va.; Johnny Erjavec, Duluth, Minn., and Curtis Scott, Forth Worth, Tex., and Buddy Knox, Dayton, O., and Joe Lipps, Charlotte, N. C.

Tom Tuite, cattle broker at the Union stockyards, who lives at 4128 South Halsted street, has been appointed secretary of the Illinois Athletic commission, to succeed Gene Meany, resigned. Tom O'Grady, former representative from the south side, was his sponsor. It is understood Gov. Horner gave Tuite his commission before leaving last week for a brief vacation in Florida.

Tuite, who will be 40 years old next month, has engaged in various sports. About 20 years ago he competed as a lightweight boxer under the name of Tom Gorman. He was co-promoter with Nate Lewis of a six day bicycle race at Dexter park pavilion and another at the Coliseum. He also was a partner of Mique Malloy in the promotion of boxing at the Pavilion. This partnership lost approximately $10,000 on a contest involving Pete Latzo, Scranton, Pa., then welterweight champion, and Joe Simonich of Butte, Mont. They made a small profit on a headliner involving Pinkey Mitchell, Milwaukee, Wis., the first junior welterweight king, and Shuffle Callahan. Callahan knocked out Pinkey in the third round, Nov. 5, 1926. F. M.

HARVARD MAKES COACH HARLOW FACULTY MEMBER

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Harvard university raised its head football coach to the dignity of faculty membership for the first time in the institution's history tonight when it made Richard O. Harlow, associate in oölogy.

BIGGEST MISTAKE I EVER MADE

[Otto Strohmeier, university of Chicago end coach, says that an athlete's chief memories are of the mistakes he made or the times he just missed doing something spectacular or smart. This is the twelfth of a series of articles describing such experiences of famous athletes.]

BY CLEM LOUGHLIN.
[Manager of Chicago Blackhawks.]

THE greatest mistake I ever made in my hocky career did not involve a playing boner, but hinged instead on one of two words, "Yes," or "No." As a matter of fact, I wasn't even in uniform at the time, but in a Detroit hospital bed recuperating from a hocky injury.

I was playing defense for the Detroit Cougars, now known as the Red Wings. We had been the Victoria Cougars in the Western league, the same from which the present Hawks, then the Portland Rosebuds, came. The club had been purchased by Detroit interests and shipped east to play at Windsor, Ont., since there were no playing facilities in Detroit at the time.

Offered Club Managership.

I had been captain of the Cougars out west and continued in that capacity when we came to Detroit. I was playing then—had been for twelve years previously. It was customary for a defense man in those days to play the entire game. There was no such system of changing men to allow them rest as there is now.

There I was in the hospital itching to get back in the game. Then Charles W. Hughes, president of Detroit's new National Hocky league team visited me and offered me the management of the club. Now comes the mistake. I'll never be certain, but it probably was THE boner of my career.

Eight Years to Connect.

It was the mistake which 99 out of a hundred professional athletes make—they never know when they're through. I still thought I had many years of good hocky left in me. I forgot to remember that I had been playing one of the most strenuous games in all sport and that Father Time plays no favorites. I refused the job as manager.

But Father Time was boss. Two years later I was in the minors, a playing manager, and it was only through the hardest kind of playing and the luck that goes with a winning team that I was brought to the attention of Maj. Frederic McLaughlin. Thus I became a major league manager eight years after I had the opportunity to become one. It's a game fellow who never knows he's licked, but a foolish one who doesn't know he's through.

Golden Gloves Bouts Tonight on 3 Fronts

that. Both Dunnington, who is 27 years old, and Patrick, about 3 years older, will compete in the west section finals in the open division tonight at the Madison Athletic club. It will be Dunnington's seventh consecutive attempt to win a diamond studded glove and Patrick's fifth try since 1928.

Patrick has a 9 year old boy, Junior. He lives at 3348 Rhodes avenue and is a WPA employé at Avalon park. Like Dunnington, he expressed his enthusiasm in no uncertain terms.

"Fighting was born in me," Charley declared. "My career will not be a success unless I win a Golden Glove."

He added that if he is forced to terminate his campaign without accomplishing his feat his son will continue the fight when he becomes of age. Any boy, 16 years of age, who has never boxed professionally, is eligible to compete in the tournament.

Danny Villa, lightweight representing the Duncan Y. M. C. A., is in quest of his first open title. He defeated Joe Kaczmarek of Pulaski Park, last night to stay in the running for a qualifying berth at the Tournament of Champions. Two years ago Villa competed as a novice. He was defeated by Bob Foley, eventual champion, in the novice lightweight semi-finals at the Stadium.

The most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, director of the Catholic Youth organization, had his first look at the west side lads last night. He was impressed by the fine showing being made by his color bearers.

Andrew Katana, C. Y. O., middleweight, former CCC worker at Victor, Mont., was transferred to the open class after he had won three battles as a novice. It was discovered that Katana, who doubles as a shoemaker and commercial artist out at 6803 Stony Island avenue, had fought in the open division in last year's C. Y. O. tournament.

Ernie Padola, Trafton's gymnasium novice welterweight, won two fights to qualify for tonight's competition. Padola, 21 years old, is employed at a rubber manufacturing plant at Roosevelt road and Keeler avenue. Frank Davolio, a fellow worker, serves as his trainer. Ten other fellow workers were in last night's assemblage to cheer Ernie on to victory.

Talking It Over

JACK DEMPSEY'S end from his chocolate candy bar has been $1,000 monthly since October. . . . The former heavyweight champion doesn't even see his earnings, which are turned over to a trust fund for his daughter Joan. . . . Fred Schwartz, for several years a corner man in Chicago Golden Gloves bouts, now is serving as trainer and bodyguard for Jackie Coogan. . . . Reports that there is no love lost between those one-time pals, Art Ross, general manager of the Boston Bruins Hocky club, and Frank Patrick, team manager, are now followed by rumors that Eddie Shore will become playing manager of the club next season. . . . At present the league has only two playing managers, Red Dutton of the Americans and Sylvio Mantha of the Canadiens. . . . Three players on the Cincinnati Reds' roster were born in Chicago, three in St. Louis, and none in Cincinnati. . . . Lawson Little, British and American amateur golf champion, has become a rabid candid camera bug. . . . His prize shot to date is one of Walter Hagen enjoying a siesta on a lounge in a California club. . . . The Cleveland Plain Dealer fighters will be the first of the Golden Gloves invaders to arrive in Chicago for the Tournament of Champions, which opens Monday at Chicago Stadium. . . . The Cleveland team, 1935 winner of the trophy that goes to the group scoring the most points, will reach the loop Saturday afternoon. . . .

The eleventh statute in the laws of the National Hocky league reads: "The use of pads or protectors made of metal or any other material likely to cause injury to a player is prohibited." . . . The Boston Bruins' gloves now contain a metal guard in the thumbs. . . . These were designed to protect the Bruins' thumbs, but other National league clubs find they also are capable of digging sizable divots out of opponents' faces. . . . Charles Bachman, Michigan State football coach and winner of second place in the 1935 All Star coaches' poll, will return to East Lansing next week after a month's vacation in Florida. . . . Mayor V. Van Burton of Batavia and Mayor Conrad Bysorseth of Aurora will be among the friends who will fête Billy Treest Feb. 27 at a ballroom midway between Batavia, his home town, and Aurora. . . . Treest, middleweight Golden Gloves champion in 1934, now is a contender for the professional heavyweight championship. . . .

Johnny Wooden, Purdue's former All-American basketball player, Coach Adolph Rupp of Kentucky, Referee Frank Lane, and Umpire Nick Kearns said Notre Dame's work in the first half of the Kentucky game last week was the greatest they ever had seen. . . . Kentucky, defeated only twice previous to its encounter with Coach George Keogan's quintet, trailed, 38 to 7, after five minutes of the second half had been played. . . . Horton Smith has lost ten pounds since becoming chairman of the P. G. A. tournament committee, due, no doubt, to his recent efforts to calm the visiting Australian team. . . . Bob Zuppke has great admiration for the coaching ability of Gil Dobie and predicts with better material at Boston college than he had at Cornell he rapidly will get back into the winning column. . . . Bill Delancey, Cardinals' catcher, is down to 160 pounds, his illness having cost him nearly 40 pounds. . . . Jim Jeffries won the heavyweight championship after having engaged in only eleven fights spread over a period of six years. . . . Joe Louis had more than that in the 1934 Golden Gloves tournament. . . .

Ten Years Ago Today—Bobby Walthour and Reggie McNamara were leading the six-day bike race by three laps. . . . Joe McCarthy sent the Cubs through long batting drills on Catalina Island. . . . C. C. Pyle's newly organized American Professional Football league had only five clubs registered. . . . Pete Sarmiento and Archie Bell wound up training for their ten round bout at East Chicago.

U. S. Official Says Olympics Are Run Well

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Gustavus Town Kirby, treasurer of the American Olympic committee, returned from Garmisch-Partenkirchen today and brought reports of German Olympic facilities, of German non-discriminatory tactics and of the success of the Olympic ideal.

There was only one discordant note in his comment. That was when he came to discuss the hocky competition. He did not stay long enough to see the final, but he was there long enough to become cognizant of the situation. In his own words it was "outrageous."

Raps Use of Canadians.

"There are more than sixty Canadian players in Europe," he said, "all of them are supposedly amateurs but I'd like to ask how they make their living. But what troubles me more is the way the British used Canadian players on their team.

"I will admit that they were English born but they lived in Canada all their lives. What annoys me is that it leaves a door wide open for similar practices in track and field. Having been successful in using these players in the Olympics, Great Britain would be able to use South Africans, Australians, and athletes from all her dominions this summer. It is a bad premise that 'once an Englishman always an Englishman.'"

Reports No Anti-Semitism.

In commenting on what the Americans did at Garmisch, Kirby said that his only disappointment was that the United States had failed to win the four-man bobsled race. He said that the Americans were outclassed in all but the bobsled events.

Kirby said that there was no sign of anti-Semitism at Garmisch.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 17.—Conflicting price trends characterized bond trading today on the New York Stock exchange. While higher grade investments, including United States government bonds, maintained a firm undertone, the unsettlement in stocks caused by the Supreme court's decision on the TVA was reflected in the trading in secondary corporate loans, particularly public utility issues.

Total transactions amounted to $19,145,000, as compared with $18,342,000 last Friday.

Federal List Rises.

United States government obligations continued to reflect quiet accumulation as prices moved up from 1 to 5-32ds point. All classes of federal issues participated in the improvement although sales amounted to $754,800, against $2,134,400 on Friday.

Trading in domestic bonds was featured by the rise and subsequent decline in public utility issues. Early advances were more than wiped out in later dealings, with American Water Works and Electric 5s closing off 2¾ points. Similar trends ruled elsewhere throughout the group.

Declines Large on Curb.

Utility bonds on the Curb market were even more responsive to the decision and declines ranging from 1 to 5½ points were sustained in those issues. Standard Gas and Electric bonds were the heaviest losers of the group.

Narrow and mixed changes ruled elsewhere among the domestic issues, with the secondary railroad list lacking the buoyancy of recent sessions. International Great Northern bonds, however, were in good demand and rose from fractions to three points.

Revere Copper & Brass, Inc.

Investors' Guide: Will you kindly inform me as to the soundness of Revere Copper and Brass 4¼s? Also, what is the call price?—S. A. W.

Answer: Revere Copper and Brass, Inc., 4¼ per cent first mortgage bonds, due 1956, are a business man's investment. The company, which manufactures copper and brass products, used in the automotive, building, electrical, and radio industries, has a good record of earnings. In the first nine months of 1935 it covered fixed charges 2.15 times, while in 1934 interest was earned 2.98 times, against 1.71 times in 1933. Heavy losses were sustained in 1932 and 1931, and a modest profit in 1930. Earnings in preceding years were well in excess of bond interest. Current position is satisfactory.

The 4¼s, which were offered for sale last month, provided funds for the redemption of the 6 per cent bonds, reducing interest requirements by about 22 per cent. For the first nine months of 1935, for instance, interest charges would have been earned 2.77 times had the new bonds been outstanding instead of the old bonds.

The new bonds are callable at 104 to Jan. 1, 1937. The call price will then decrease as maturity date approaches.

CHICAGO STOCKS SWING WILDLY, CLOSING LOWER

Utility Issues Are Center of Attention.

Reflecting hopes and fears of traders as the Supreme court decision on the Tennessee Valley authority was being read, Chicago stocks fluctuated violently yesterday and closed slightly lower.

While utilities were the center of attention, other issues moved in sympathy. The list as a whole showed somewhat more stability than New York stocks.

The early buying wave quickly was replaced by feverish selling which carried the list as far down from Saturday levels as it had risen a few minutes earlier. Prices recovered somewhat in the final hour and a half of trading, as brokers and the buying public concluded that the decision was not as sweeping a victory for TVA as they had at first believed.

Volume 150,000 Shares.

Trading volume here reached 150,000 shares, with Cities Service, Central and South West Utilities, and Middle West alone accounting for a turnover of more than 55,000 shares. Forty-one issues advanced, 69 declined, and 26 were unchanged for the day. Twenty-four issues rose to new 1936 highs, but seven of these stocks closed with a loss for the day.

Cities Service opened at 6⅜, moved up ½, then slid back to 5½. It closed at 5¾ after the day's heaviest turnover—24,000 shares. Central and South West common jumped from 3 to a new top of 3½ and then slumped to 2½ before closing up slightly at 2⅝. Volume was 15,500 shares. Middle West had a 17,000 share turnover in moving from 10 to 10½, dropping sharply to 9¼, and rallying slightly to close at 9½.

Central and South West preferred lost 1½ and the prior lien slumped 5. Public Service of Northern Illinois common fell 1½ points.

Steel Issues Weaken.

Northwest Utilities preferred climbed 3¼ and the prior lien 6½ to score the sharpest gains of the day, both at 1936 highs. Masonite jumped 4 and Flexible Shaft scored another high on a 4½ point move. Also at new highs with gains of a point or better were Jefferson Electric, McQuay Norris, Modine, and Ontario Manufacturing.

RAILS PURCHASE LARGE QUANTITY OF EQUIPMENT

Nor. Pacific to Place 4 Million Order.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Recent heavy buying of railroad equipment was augmented yesterday by announcements from railroads both in this country and abroad that they are buying substantial amounts rolling stock and rails. Of a long list of orders two of the largest came from the Northern Pacific, which is buying 12 giant locomotives and 1,000 freight cars at a cost of $4,000,000, and from the Union Pacific, which is buying 15 high speed freight engines costing $2,000,000. Orders from abroad included one from Mexico for five locomotives and one from Brazil for rails.

President Charles Donnelly of the Northern Pacific said that orders from his road would be placed in the spring. The 12 new locomotives will be two feet longer than the road's Z-5 engines, which are among the largest in the world.

Mallet Type Engine.

The new engines will be of the Mallet type, with 12 drivers, and will be equipped with roller bearings. Their length will be 127 feet 1¼ inches; height, 16 feet 4 inches; total weight in working order, 1,025,000 pounds, and tender capacity, 27 tons of coal and 22,000 gallons of water.

The locomotives are so large that the Northern Pacific will expend $335,000 on track, bridges, and terminals to permit their operation. The road's car order will consist of 500 50-ton gondola cars, 250 50-ton flat cars, and 250 40-ton stock cars. Donnelly said the stock cars will be built in the Northern Pacific's shops at Laurel, Mont., and the locomotives, gondola cars, and flat cars will be purchased from equipment manufacturers.

The General American Transportation company will build 250 all steel sheeted refrigerator cars for the Union Refrigerator Transit company which in turn will lease them to the Milwaukee road, it was announced yesterday. The cars which will be built at General American's East Chicago plant, will be used for handling perishable commodities.

In New York it was reported that General American Tank Car corporation, subsidiary of General American Transportation, will build 15 special tank cars for the Shell Chemical company and 10 tank cars for the Phillips Petroleum company.

Other Cars Ordered.

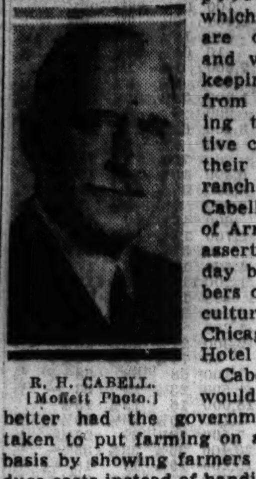
Other car programs reported yesterday included 500 ore cars for the Great Northern, 20 to 40 70-ton hoppers for the Aluminum Company of America and 20 to 25 cabooses for the Western Maryland. In addition, the American Locomotive company has received an order for 5 locomotives from the Interoceanic Railway of Mexico.

Subsidiaries of the United States Steel corporation have received orders for 36,000 tons of rails it was disclosed. These were divided as follows:

Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company, 17,800 tons from the St. Louis-San Francisco; 3,000 tons from the Gulf, Mobile and Northern, and 700 tons from the Mobile and Ohio. Columbia Steel company, 10,000 tons from the Western Pacific. United States Steel Products company, 3,000 tons from the Brazilian government. Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, 1,000 tons from the Western Maryland.

Armour Chief Blames Taxes for High Food

The high cost of government is largely responsible for high food prices about which consumers are complaining and which are keeping farmers from fully utilizing the productive capacities of their farms and ranches, R. H. Cabell, president of Armour & Co., asserted yesterday before members of the Agriculture Club of Chicago at the Hotel La Salle.



R. H. CABELL. [Moffett Photo.]

Cabell said it would have been better had the government undertaken to put farming on a profitable basis by showing farmers how to reduce costs instead of handing out millions of dollars in return for contracts to reduce production.

"I wince when I think of the collossal blunder involved in trying to produce an abundant life through curtailment of production," Cabell said. "Our agricultural problem didn't grow out of surpluses. We never had a surplus.

Urges Costs Be Reduced.

"Getting costs down is the crying need of the day. Yet the principal activities of the government in the field of farm relief are headed in exactly the opposite direction."

Taxes are becoming an increasingly large portion of the cost of meat and of everything else, Cabell said.

"The lawmakers have succeeded in forcing businesses of every description to serve in the rôle of tax collectors, but without that fact being apparent to the people from whom in large part the taxes are being collected," he continued. "The result is that business draws undeserved criticism.

"Every one knows that our federal government is spending vast sums. I wish I could record in a voice that could be heard throughout the nation the fact that the individuals who make up the nation are paying the bill.

Taxes Collected Indirectly.

"That they are not aware of it is due to the manner in which it is collected. Except for the income tax, which is levied on only about 2,500,000 of our 130,000,000 people, the federal government's taxes are collected indirectly. They are levied largely on business in one way or another.

"But business hasn't any hidden treasury out of which it can obtain money to pay taxes. It has only one way to get the money, and that is to include the taxes in the cost of operating."

Directors of Art Metal Works, Inc., placed the common stock on an annual basis of 60 cents by declaring 15 cents quarterly, compared with previous quarterly payments of 10 cents.

COTTON FIRM BLAMES GOVERNMENT POLICIES FOR BREAK IN PRICES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Opening testimony in the senate agriculture committee's investigation of cotton futures exchanges, W. L. Clayton of Houston, Tex., today blamed "government tinkering" for the two cent price break on March 11, 1935.

Clayton, head of Anderson, Clayton & Co., one of the world's largest cotton merchandising firms, said for the last six years "there has been no cotton market in the traditional sense that prices are normally established by competitive buying and selling."

"During that whole period the predominant price influence has been the hand and voice of the government," he said. "The market has gone up and down, not because of changing conditions of supply and demand, but in response to governmental moves in cotton and to statements of government officials or rumors thereof regarding the loan policy or the cotton control policy."

Clayton said "experience, judgment and discretion" in fixing merchandising and manufacturing policies of cotton have "given way to a guessing contest as to what the next governmental move will be."

"No one wants to trade in a commodity the price of which is influenced by government buying and selling, government above-value nonrecourse loans, and governmental control of production," he said. "Every trader wants a free and open market, responding to the law of supply and demand. Sad experience has taught them that they cannot safely trade on guesses as to what the next government move will be."

Butter and Egg Rise Is Halted; Supply Larger

The sharp rise in butter and egg prices in the Chicago market was halted yesterday as trucks managed to break through snowdrifts. In some quarters, however, this was regarded as only a respite because of further snow and piling up of drifts across the roads, particularly in Wisconsin.

With trucks delivering more than 7,000 cases of eggs here, cash prices were lower. Fresh grades of extras in carload lots sold down 1 cent at 32½ cents a dozen. Current receipts of general run from the country eggs sold at 30 to 31 cents a dozen, down 1 to 2 cents.

Cold Storage Butter Low.

Stocks of butter in cold storage were reported to be relatively light and disappearing rapidly. Without the arrival of foreign butter in New York, it was said, precariously little of the commodity would be available there.

Stocks of storage eggs were reported nearly exhausted, but the new shipments were credited with pushing prices down yesterday. Market men point out that prices customarily fluctuate violently at this season, comparatively small shipments or scarcity sometimes being sufficient to cause sharp price changes.

Butter and egg futures continued to have a firm undertone on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, butter advancing ¼ cent and eggs ⅛ to ⅝ cent.

Cold Weather Chief Influence.

Cold weather in producing areas continued to be a major factor. February butter closed at 34¼ cents a pound, and February eggs at 25⅝ cents a dozen.

SIXTH OF U. S. URBAN HOME MORTGAGE DEBT HELD BY HOLC

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Announcing that it has "practically completed" its "emergency task of refinancing home loan distress," the Home Owners Loan corporation reported today it has granted 987,833 loans aggregating $2,990,418,259. It said total loans outstanding represent about one-sixth of the country's entire urban home mortgage debt.

As of Feb. 6, the HOLC said 35,187 applications, or about 2 per cent of the 1,884,151 filed with the corporation, still were pending.

Refinancing operations already have been completed in New Hampshire, Nevada, and Hawaii. A total of 9,755 applications is pending in Ohio—the largest number for any state. More than 1,000 applications still are to be acted upon in New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan, and California.

President Roosevelt has announced that about $1,000,000,000 of the HOLC authorization for lending would be canceled. The corporation announced today it expected to complete examination of all applications "well in advance" of June 13, the statutory deadline. It then will become merely a servicing agency in the collection and liquidation of its loans.

MILLS PREDICTS 'EXPLOSION' DUE TO U. S. POLICIES

New York, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Ogden L. Mills, former secretary of the treasury, says in his book, "Liberalism Fights On," to be published tomorrow, that "all the elements of a great explosion" have been gathered together in this country.

He lists these elements as "constant expansion of credit through government borrowing, enormous excess reserves available for further expansion, and an anticipated business recovery ready to give the initial stages of an inflationary boom the appearance of legitimate business expansion."

UTILITIES OFFER OVER 40 MILLION OF BONDS TODAY

New York Central Plans Big Issue.

Public offering today of more than $40,000,000 of obligations of public utility companies, a prospective issue of $80,000,000 New York Central System refunding bonds, and a prospective offering of $17,000,000 of Norwegian government bonds are latest developments of an active bond market.

F. E. WILLIAMSON.

The largest utility offering today is an issue of $20,300,000 of Connecticut River Power company first mortgage series A sinking fund 3¾ per cent bonds which is being placed on the market by a banking syndicate headed by Lehman Brothers. The offering price is 104½ and accrued interest to yield 3.48 per cent.

Will Retire Other Bonds.

Proceeds will be used for redemption on April 1 of the company's $18,000,000 first mortgage gold bonds, series A, sinking fund 5 per cent, due Oct. 1, 1952, at 103; also payment of $2,000,000 4 per cent notes due March 1.

An issue of $16,000,000 Public Service company of Oklahoma first mortgage 4 per cent bonds is being offered by a group headed by Field, Glore and company. The bonds, which mature serially from Feb. 1, 1937, to Feb. 1, 1946, are priced to yield from 1.50 to 4 per cent. Proceeds will be applied to redemption of $4,575,900 first mortgage 5 per cent bonds, due Sept. 1, 1961, and $14,306,100 due May 1, 1937.

An offering of $950,000 first mortgage 4½ per cent bonds, series A, of the Lowell Gas Light company is being made by G. L. Ohrstrom & Co., Inc. The bonds, which are dated March 1, 1936, and due March 1, 1966, are priced at 107. Proceeds will be applied to redemption of all outstanding first mortgage 5½ per cent gold bonds, due Sept. 1, 1947.

N. Y. Central to Fund Loans.

The New York Central, according to Willard F. Place, executive assistant to President F. E. Williamson, in a letter to Oliver E. Sweet, director of finance of the interstate commerce commission, plans to fund its $62,900,000 of 4 per cent demand bank loans with issues of $35,000,000 or $40,000,000 of 10 year collateral bonds and $15,000,000 or $20,000,00 of secured serial notes maturing over a five year period.

Soldier Bonus Aids Treasury Bank Squeeze

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Using the further inflation of bank deposits resulting from the financing of the veterans' bonus as leverage the treasury department contemplates another "big squeeze" to force banks to buy long term government bonds in its 1936 financing program which will get under way in about two weeks, it was learned yesterday.

Conferences have already been held between representatives of the treasury department and the big banks and insurance companies looking toward the attempted refunding of the billion dollars of government obligations maturing in March and April at least partly with bonds of from 8 to 12 year maturity, according to Chicago bankers.

Favor 2¾ Per Cent Rate.

Officials of some of the large insurance companies, it was reported, have assured the treasury that they would look with favor upon 9 to 12 year bonds bearing an interest rate of 2¾ per cent. The big metropolitan banks are understood to be still averse to buying longer term bonds, but they are reported to have told treasury representatives that a limited amount of 8 year bonds paying 2½ per cent interest might be marketed.

To entice the funds of the banks insisting upon limiting their purchases of government paper to shorter maturities the treasury is reported to be considering offering 4 or 5 year notes paying 1½ per cent.

Chicago bankers say that the conversations concerning the spring financing have reached a point where the success of the refunding of March and April maturities is practically assured and that only the details concerning the type of exchange offer remain to be taken care of.

May Make Attempt in March.

Treasury bills amounting to 450 millions fall due March 16, and on April 15 a total of 559 millions in notes mature. There is some talk of attempting to refund both issues in March. Bankers are anticipating a repetition of the treasury's practice of offering the holders of maturing obligations a choice between short term notes and longer term bonds.

Whether the treasury will attempt to raise extra funds in addition to its refunding needs bankers are not yet sure. The government has enough money in its general fund to carry it along to the first refunding date in March, but in the near future it will have to begin building up its surplus against next July, when the treasury will be exposed to a demand for cash, possibly running as high as 2 billions, for paying off the so-called "baby bonds" that are being given as bonuses to war veterans.

Further Inflation to Result.

The refunding operations will not add to the pressure of idle bank deposits because the banks will merely be called upon to exchange maturing obligations for new paper. Bank deposits will not thereby be increased. When the bonus cash begins to pour out, however, the total bank deposits of the nation will be expanded by

STOCKS SLUMP ON TVA DECREE; UTILITIES BREAK

Trading Is Heaviest in Two Years.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 17.—Speculative Wall street voiced its dissatisfaction with the Supreme court's decision on the Tennessee Valley Authority in no uncertain terms today as stocks were disposed of in rapid fashion, driving prices down from major fractions in the general list to several points in the public utility sector.

As soon as the import of the ruling became known an avalanche of selling orders hit the floor as traders rushed to get out from under. Within a few minutes early gains that had amounted to as much as 3 points in some of the utilities had been erased. Shouting, pushing groups swarmed about the posts where the utilities are traded and taxed facilities to the limit. The ticker was five minutes late on two occasions.

Busiest Day in Two Years.

Not in two years has the market witnessed a busier day as approximately 4,722,000 shares changed hands. On Feb. 5, 1934, a turnover of 4,940,000 shares was recorded.

Wall street was frankly disappointed with the decision of the high court. It regarded the ruling as upholding an important, and what it regarded as a vicious part of the New Deal, namely, the vigorous use of federal financial power to go into fields hitherto occupied by private industry.

Outside the area of disturbance caused by the public utility decision, the day's news was favorable to the market in most directions. A slight setback in the steel industry's operating rate was estimated for this week but the trade reviews continued to regard the situation in an optimistic light.

Other Groups Orderly.

Aside from an hysterical hour and a half, from a little after noon to around 2 o'clock, the market was an orderly affair, with a moderately large turnover and a rising tendency in prices. Steel shares were the leaders and coppers were also strong. The electrics and a number of miscellaneous stock also came in for some attention. During this period the utilities back and filled aimlessly.

Shortly after midday, when the news was flashed to the floor of the exchange that Chief Justice Hughes was reading the long awaited decision, a rush developed to acquire power stocks. Tremendous blocks of utility issues began to parade across the tape at steadily rising prices. Commonwealth and Southern, Standard Gas, Electric Power and United HAPPY the day for him that Il Duce appropriated the ancient Roman fascis—or "bundle of sticks"—and capitalized the "F" to make a political party out of it. For the strength and solidarity of a bundle of sticks tied firmly together exactly expressed what he determined to do with Italian youth. But Il Duce was, after all, merely executing an idea as old as Rome itself. ℭ In modern American business practice, profiting by ancient custom, a closely knit group of men qualified in several fields is known to be of high tensile strength. The staff of this bank renders a more adequate service to our customers from having pooled, for their benefit, years of business experience in varied fields.

SEARS-ROEBUCK MAY BUY RUBBER FOR OWN TIRES

Action Foreseen in Joining Commodity Exchange.

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Sears, Roebuck & Co., largest of the mail order firms, has purchased a membership on the New York Commodity exchange, it was learned today. In the rubber trade the step was regarded as having unusual significance. The interpretation placed on it was that the mail order house has acquired a membership with a view to changing its tire manufacturing policy. The membership was purchased in the name of Fowler B. McConnell, assistant to the president.

In the rubber trade it was recalled that Sears-Roebuck does a large retail tire business, both by mail order and through company stores scattered throughout the country.

Action Recalls Federal Suit.

Sears-Roebuck buys tires chiefly from the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company. The mail order firm's contract recently has been under fire of the federal trade commission on complaints that it amounts to discrimination against dealers. The complaint charges the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company with violation of the Clayton act.

According to press reports on Aug. 15, 1935, the Goodyear company filed a brief with the commission in which it admitted a price discrimination of 4.46 per cent on the selling price of tires sold to Sears-Roebuck. A decision by the federal trade commission is expected this month. The commission concluded its hearings on the complaint on Jan. 15.

Change in Policy Hinted.

In the rubber trade it is believed that Sears-Roebuck may intend to abandon purchase of tires on contract for a new policy whereby it would buy its own rubber and have it manufactured into tires on a "cost plus" basis. It is understood Montgomery Ward & Co., largest competitors of Sears-Roebuck, who also handle a large retail trade business, buy their tires on a cost plus basis, supplying the rubber to the manufacturer.

GOODYEAR TIRE PROFIT LAST YEAR BEST SINCE 1931

Net profit of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company and subsidiaries in 1935 was the largest since 1931, according to figures released by the company yesterday. Earnings of $5,452,240 for the year compared with $4,553,964 in 1934.

Net sales for the year totaled $164,863,874, an increase of more than $18,000,000 over the $136,800,764 in the preceding year.

STOCKS SLUMP ON TVA DECREE; UTILITIES BREAK

Trading Largest in More than Two Years.

Traders and the public were apparently confident the TVA would meet the same fate as other New Deal measures. Then a current of doubt gradually started to creep over the market and announcement of the actual decision demoralized operations. Early gains were quickly erased and minus signs began to appear. Brokers rushed about the floor in frenzied haste to execute orders until the confusion became so great that the governors of the stock exchange decided to suspend dealings in about a dozen of the leaders until order was restored.

Most Active Issue.

Commonwealth and Southern, which operates in the TVA area, was by far the most active stock in the list. In this one issue alone 801,500 shares changed hands, the price dropping from a high of 5½ in early dealings to a low of 3¾, and taking a loss for the day of ½ point.

The rest of the power list acted in similar fashion and though some support came into the list near the close, final prices in most instances were at or around their low prices for the day.

U. S. Steel at New High.

The rest of the market was acting in sympathy with the power division. United States Steel broke through its old high to touch 61⅛, the first time that it had crossed 60 since 1933. Packard and Studebaker were strong in the motor section and rail and mining issues were uniformly higher.

When the reaction came, however, practically the entire list turned downward and though the selling subsided in the final hour most issues were forced to take losses for the day.

J. I. Case was a strong feature throughout the session, at one time reaching a new high of 114¾ and closing 4 points above Saturday's final price. American Telephone and Western Union slumped badly, the former losing over 3 points and the latter over a point. Bethlehem dropped 2 points and then pared the loss to finish only fractionally lower.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(AP)—COTTONSEED OIL—Bleachable reacted in the late trading today under liquidation promoted by heaviness in grains and stocks. Some positions made new lows for the season. Final prices were up a little from the lowest on trade support and unchanged to 10 points net lower. Sales were 89 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; March closed 9.88c per lb, May 9.89c, July 9.88c, September 9.82.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(AP)—DRY GOODS—Cotton gray goods sales today were moderately large for early deliveries. Finished cottons were in slightly better demand. Rayon cloths sold in good amounts. Raw silk was off 3 cents and sales improved as broad silk mills covered their requirements more freely. Wool goods continued active. Burlap was quiet and the tone was easy.

DEFENSE OF RFC BANK LOAN SUIT TO START TODAY

Stockholders Contend U. S. Helped Case.

Stockholders of the Central Republic Trust company today will open their formal defense against the Reconstruction Finance corporation's suit to collect $14,000,000 in stock liability to cover part of an expected deficiency in repayment of loans of 90 millions during 1932.

Defense attorneys hope to complete presentation of testimony in two or three days. Final arguments are expected to begin some time next week, after presentation of rebuttal evidence.

Assert U. S. Helped Defense.

"The government has put in so much evidence that we think is of benefit to the stockholders that the defense will require little time to present its formal testimony," said Franklin J. Stransky, counsel representing 1,500 of the stockholders.

Karl E. Seyfarth, attorney for a second large group of stockholders, hinted at surprise evidence, remarking that the "whole story hasn't yet been heard."

The defense group gave no indication that Gen. Charles G. Dawes or any other leading figure will be called to testify. It was said they will base their case mainly on documentary evidence, as has the RFC.

Finish Evidence Today.

The RFC is to offer final evidence this morning to round out its case, after which the defense will open immediately. The case was recessed last Wednesday after hearings had consumed 12 full days since opening before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson on Jan. 23. Judge Wilkerson is hearing the suit without a jury, and has set aside four days a week for the trial.

Although the RFC has brought suit for $14,000,000 against 4,500 stockholders in various parts of the United States, the trial is confined to the 3,000 Illinois residents in this federal jurisdiction and against whom the RFC alleges liabilities of $10,000,000.

GROCERY GROUP REPORTS TRADE TREND UPWARD

Definite improvement in business is being reported both from members and customers of the Chicago Association of Manufacturers' Representatives to the grocery buyers of the Chicago area, asserted A. A. Humfrey, a director of the association at the ninth annual trade dinner of the group last night in the Palmer house. Humfrey was chairman of the committee in charge of the dinner.

G. E. Ander, president of the group, confined his remarks to an expression of welcome and a statement that the organization's purpose is to encourage and preserve sound, legitimate, and ethical business and practice.

BALDWIN CUTS 1935 DEFICIT TO $2,119,738 TOTAL

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Operations of the Baldwin Locomotive works and subsidiaries resulted in a net loss last year of $2,119,738, compared with $3,698,494 for 1934. The report of President George H. Houston, made public today, showed that the 1935 profit, before provision for depreciation and interest, was $499,416.

"The outlook for the immediate future continues uncertain," Houston told the stockholders. He said a potential demand for locomotive equipment exists because of demolition and the depreciation of present stock.

"It is impossible to say when this potential demand will be released but each increase in carloadings is bringing it nearer," he said.

Graham-Paige Spends $500,000 on New Tools

The Graham-Paige Motors corporation has spent $500,000 on new tools to facilitate production of its new supercharged model, Joseph B. Graham, president, announced yesterday. The company's change over from 8 cylinder to 6 cylinder enginees necessitated the new tooling, Graham said.

N. Y. Central Brings 15,000 Cars of Coal in January

UTILITIES GIVEN RIGHT OF APPEAL DELAY ON SUITS

Fight Validity of Holding Company Act.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The North American company and the American Water Works and Electric company were granted the right today by a United States Court of Appeals to prosecute a special appeal from a recent order by Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Supreme court, staying all further proceedings in seven suits filed in his court in which holding companies attacked the constitutionality of the public utility holding company act of 1935.

While this was considered an important victory by the utilities, government officials appeared confident it would not result in any of the actions reaching the United States Supreme court ahead of the Electric Bond and Share company suit to force compliance, which the government has brought in a district court of New York.

Decree Before Election Doubtful.

As the situation now shapes up there appears to be a general opinion among the officials that none of the suits will reach the high court before the election next fall. The only possibility appears to be a slender chance that the American States Public Service company suit, in which Judge William C. Coleman of Baltimore declared the act unconstitutional and which was initiated by the utilities, can be expedited. The government is not a party to this suit and appeared in it only as a "friend of the court."

When asking a stay in the North American company and American Water Works and Electric suits in the local district court, Attorney General Cummings and John J. Burns, general counsel for the SEC, stated the legal departments were so deluged by suits that it probably would be necessary for the government to default, if faced with adverse decisions by the lower court, and concentrate on the Electric Bond and Share case.

Utilities Object to Delay.

In asking for leave to prosecute a special appeal, holding company counsel claimed that the Electric Bond and Share case did not present all the questions of law involved in the other cases and insisted that the lower court had no right to hold their suits in abeyance.

In its present status the special appeal will not go to the merits of the injunction suits, but will merely determine the right of the lower court justice to order the stay. Briefs will be filed in support of the appellants' claim and the government will file reply briefs before the matter is calendared for court hearing.

U.S. COURT ORDERS REPORT ON STOCK OF CONSUMERS CO.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday ordered trustees of the Consumers company to submit by April 7 a detailed report on the valuation of the various issues of present stock for purposes of reorganization.

George F. Harding and Martin H. Kennelly, trustees, submitted a plan for reorganization of the company under section 77 B of the bankruptcy laws in November. The plan provided for an allocation of new stock between the bondholders and present stockholders and a reduction of mortgage indebtedness.

Judge Wilkerson's action yesterday was taken when Arthur J. Hennessy, attorney for the trustees, reported that stockholders are having difficulty in agreeing on the proportionate distribution of new stock among the various classes of stock now outstanding.

WHEAT DECLINES; RECOVERS PART OF EARLY LOSS

Corn Rises Fractionally as Supply Is Cut.

Wheat prices developed pronounced easiness here yesterday. The downward movement was accelerated by weakness which developed in the New York Stock market following announcement of the Supreme court's decision in the Tennessee Valley authority case. The May delivery on the Chicago Board of Trade declined from Saturday's finish, but recovered part of its loss later on buying credited to cash and milling interests. New crop futures lost minor fractions for the day.

Persistent weakness in Liverpool has undermined the confidence of holders of future contracts. While July delivery in the English market was 6⅝ cents higher than Chicago on Jan. 15, the spread yesterday had narrowed to 3¾ cents, putting the United States further out of line as far as export business in new crop wheat is concerned.

No Damage Reports.

Low temperatures were again reported in the southwest, which restricted selling of the July and September deliveries, against which the new crop will be delivered. There were no complaints of actual damage to the growing wheat crop in that area, however.

Winnipeg futures closed a cent lower, although buying of the May delivery occurred in the Canadian market against sales at Minneapolis. Export demand for Manitobas continued disappointing.

	Yesterday.	Saturday.	Wk. ago.
Wheat	$0.97⅝	$0.98⅛	$0.97
Corn	.61½	.61¼	.60⅛
Oats	.29	.29⅛	.28⅝
Rye	.57⅝	.58⅝	.56⅞

Supplies of Corn Fall.

A decrease of 1,048,000 bushels in the visible supply of corn last week, or slightly over 20 per cent of the total amount which was in store at leading markets, resulted in the May delivery of that grain advancing fractionally yesterday while the distant months closed unchanged. Trade was not large and the market was rather easily influenced.

For the first time since 1920 the visible supply of corn at this season of the year is below 5,000,000 bushels. There have been only two years since 1885 when the total has been smaller. Country offerings are relatively small and a large part of the receipts are being applied on contracts entered into previously.

Trade in oats was limited and prices eased fractionally. Rye was affected by the action of wheat and lost as much as 1 cent a bushel. Local handlers reported 25,000 bushels of cash rye were sold to industries and mills.

ALL LIVE STOCK RECEIPTS RISE; PRICES VARIABLE

Hogs Lose Early Upturn; Lambs Are Lower.

Farmers broke through snowbound roads and braved subzero weather in many places to bring 32,000 cattle, hogs, and sheep into Chicago yesterday. Only 9,448 arrived a week ago. Of the 13,000 hogs received, 7,000 arrived by truck and 2,000 by rail for the open market, and 4,000 by rail directly to packers.

Evidence that farmers can market more hogs than a week ago made buyers cautious yesterday. There was a slump after a 10 to 15 cents higher opening, and most of the final sales were about in line with Saturday or steady to 10 cents lower than last Friday.

With fresh pork $1 to $3 higher than a week ago in the wholesale packing centers and at a level that cannot stand much volume, wholesale markets lacked the zest of last week and some local packers said it was not as easy to get $23 per hundred pounds for top loins as it was at the high time last week.

Small Number Sell at Top.

Only a limited number of selected light butcher hogs, bought for an early kill, reached the $11.10 top, or within 5 cents of last week's high spot and 15 cents above the Saturday top. The practical top later in the session was $11. The average for the session at $10.80 was 10 cents above Saturday and steady with last Friday.

Lamb prices went down 25 to 35 cents more yesterday, recording declines of 75 cents to 90 cents compared with early last week, when top grades were bringing up to $11. Yesterday's peak dropped to $10.15, on shipping account, and packers bought the bulk of the better grades downward from $10, the lowest price levels since Nov. 8. This was 50 to 75 cents less than just prior to the storm. Old ewes held steady yesterday, with best quoted up to $5.25.

Cattle Prices Irregular.

The cheapest grades of steers and butcher stock as well as the top classes of steers maintained a fully steady price basis, while other cattle ruled unevenly steady to 25 cents lower. Most decline was in the in-between grades of steers, but these comprised a fairly liberal share of the total receipts.

A consignment of prime steers averaging 1,021 pounds went to Armour at the $13 top, the highest paid for steers since Feb. 3, but it was $2 less than similar kinds bought on Jan. 22 and 65 cents less than a year ago. Bulk of beef steers sold from $7.50 to $10, with scattered lots of ill bred natives and southwesterns with little kill ranging downward to $5.50 and less. Beef cows sold 15 to 25 cents lower, while canners and cutter stock held steady. Bulls and calves were unchanged.

TRADING IN LARD IS SLOW; PRICES DIP 2½ TO 7½ CENTS

Trade in lard futures was very slow yesterday, with the market easing slightly on scattered selling, part of which was regarded as hedging operations. Closing trades were 2½ to 7½ cents lower. Clear bellies [salt pork] closed nominally unchanged.

Cash lard closed at $10.90, loose and leaf, $10.37, and clear bellies $14.57 per 100 pounds. Prices in dollars per 100 pounds:

BONUS PAYMENT AIDS TREASURY BANK SQUEEZE

Long Term Refunding Issues Studied.

about the amount of the bonus cash. The government will borrow from the banks to raise additional funds to cash the veterans' "baby bonds" and as this money is spent it will find its way back into the banks as new deposits.

These additional deposits will offset the amount lent by the banks with the net result that after the bonus program is completed the government will be further in debt to the banks, bank deposits will be more or less permanently increased and excess reserves of the banks will be as large as ever.

Low Yield Holdings Heavy.

Because they have been limiting their purchases of government obligations largely to short term paper, however, the banks are gradually loading up with more and more paper on which the interest yield is almost nil. One Chicago banker estimated yesterday that the banks now hold 4 billions of government paper which yields almost nothing at all in income.

Although many of the small country banks have already yielded to the administration's "easy money" squeeze, and in despair of getting any short term paper with adequate yield have started to take a chance on long term government bonds, the big city banks and the banks in moderate sized cities which have close personal contact with metropolitan banks are still holding off.

Hope to Beat Down Resistance.

According to well informed Chicagoans the treasury is planning in its spring financing to continue to apply the "easy money" squeeze in the hope of wearing down the resistance of more banks and forcing them to buy long term bonds in order to get income.

To what extent the "squeeze" will be successful is uncertain at present, but bond experts agree that the treasury will have no difficulty in refunding its March and April maturities at practically the same low rates that have been in effect for the last year.

"Banks have been piling up available cash for several weeks in anticipation of the financing," said one Chicago banker. "The treasury will get it without any difficulty. The bonus program will create still more cash, which will, in turn, facilitate financing of the bonus."

The treasury's latest offering of 273 day bills, dated Feb. 18 and maturing Nov. 18, was sold at an average price of 99.941, equal to a rate of 0.078 per cent annually on a bank discount basis, Morgenthau announced last night.

MEMBER BANK DEPOSITS FAIL; LOANS INCREASE

Although demand deposits of reserve member banks rose 70 millions last week, total deposits declined 27 millions because of withdrawals of treasury funds and declines in interbank balances, it was disclosed yesterday in the federal reserve board's condition statement of banks in 101 leading cities for the week ended Feb. 12.

An expansion of 59 millions in loans and investments was reported. Purchases of 34 millions in government securities and a rise of 21 millions in brokers' loans caused most of the change.

COURT ENJOINS U. S. CONTROL OF POULTRY TRADE

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Federal Judge William H. Kirkpatrick signed a temporary restraining order today preventing Secretary of Agriculture Wallace from carrying out announced plans to take over the live poultry trade in Philadelphia.

Thirty-nine commission merchants, wholesale and retail dealers in live poultry filed suit, asking the court to declare unconstitutional the measure under which Wallace planned to proceed. The court will hear a motion on Monday for a preliminary injunction.

The agriculture department, which announced Jan. 6 that all handlers of live poultry would have to obtain licenses from his department by Wednesday and furnish bonds, proceeded under an amendment to the old packers and stockyards act. The amendment was enacted after the Supreme court invalidated the NRA in the Schecter chicken case.
